8. A Church paper in a community will multiply friends for the Pastor and people of that Church. Persons who are not members of the Church will see it and read it. They will see how great and good men are trying to help their neighbors and make them better. They will drop in and hear the preacher, and look in and see the Sunday-school, and when money is needed they will give, and when there is a revival they will be more easily reached.

9. A Church paper among the people will do much to silence the enemies of the Church. People will read of the Church and its work, and if enemies lie about it but few will listen. But if there was no paper to represent the Church, where the pastor and his people cannot go then the lie would grow and do much harm. The Church is a good thing, and the more men and women read about anything that is good the more faith they have in it.

10. A Church paper will help our people in their business. For example the SOUTHWESTERN will publish every week the market reports for New Orleans, Galveston, Memphis and St. Louis. Now, if a man wants to buy provisions or to sell his cotton or sugar, he can look in the reports and see their price, and thus keep from being cheated by sharpers.

11. A Church paper among the people will help the Pastor take his benevolent collections. People will give most when they know what they are giving for. The paper will tell them where missionary money goes; how the Church Extension Society is building churches for our poor people; how our Freedmens Aid Society is educating our preachers and teachers, etc. If more of our preachers would spend a little time the first of the year getting people to subscribe for their Church paper there would not be so many every year at Conference ashamed to answer when asked for the amount of their benevolent collections.

12. A Church paper among the people [illegible] the power of the Pastor for good. The people learn that their pastor is one of a great army of Methodist Preachers who go throughout the whole earth preaching Jesus. This will increase their respect for him, and his words will have more weight. They will see where each year he stands in his annual Conference and meets the question, "Is there anything against him?"

Certainly every Methodist Minister should see that his Church paper goes among his people.

A SERMON IN BEECHER'S CHURCH.

BY JOHN CULVER.

About 9 o'clock I started for Plymouth Church to hear Beecher. Crossing from New York to Brooklyn by the Fulton street ferry, I found myself only a few blocks from the church. The street it is on (Orange street) is rather inferior in character of its improvements, and the church itself is a very plain brick building. From what I had seen of other churches here I expected, of course, Beecher's Church would have the same rank in architectural beauty that he has in intellectual ability. But the building is severely plain and its outward appearance would attract scarcely any attention. As I passed the gate in the low iron fence in front of the church and entered the church door into the vestibule a gentlemanly usher tapped me on the shoulder and said "stand here, please, in the line," and placed me at the foot of the stairs leading to the gallery. The line in front of me reached up to the gallery entrance. At the same time the vestibule was quite full of visitors waiting for admission below. It was about 10 o'clock when I got there, and we visitors and strangers had to wait till 10½ o'clock for the owners of the pews to arrive and claim their sittings before we were admitted. During that half hour we were repeatedly advised by the ushers to "stand closer together," and they would press us forward and rearrange the line so as to get more [illegible] I forgot my reverence for the [illegible] and suggested "Philadelphia [illegible] conductor." However we [illegible] good natured and no one [illegible] except in an affirmative way [illegible] was almost a Methodist [illegible]. About a quarter past ten the ushers at the outer door would [illegible] admit any more in the building [illegible] those who owned pews or [illegible]

[illegible] the doors to the church be[illegible] the galleries above were [illegible] open for all who could to [illegible] every available bit of room was occupied. After the pews below were filled, seats attached to the ends of the pews were opened out and the aisles were filled. The main gallery, where I was, was filled, and the second gallery was filled, and the vestibule was also filled with an eager crowd of listeners who pressed around the open doors leading from the vestibule into the main body or floor of the audience room. I suppose a good many left, unable to get into the building at all.

The services opened with a voluntary by the choir, and it was good. One lady singer has a voice as clear as a flute, and she sang with such ease, and sang so much, that it seemed as if she was all music. The voluntary was followed by a short prayer by Beecher, who, after praying, read a scripture lesson, from St. John, reciting the visit of Mary Magdalene to the sepulchre of Christ after [illegible] resurrection.

A hymn was then announced and the congregation joined in singing:

"How calm and beautiful the morn
That gilds the sacred tomb,
Where once the crucified was born
And veiled in midnight gloom.

Oh weep no more the Saviour slain,
The Lord is risen, He lives again;
Ye sorrowing saints, dry every tear," etc.

The text was, "And they say unto her 'woman, why weepest thou?' and she said unto them, 'because they have taken away my Lord and Master, and I know not where they have laid him.'"

Perhaps you did not see the picture, called "Easter Morn," in the art gallery at the Centennial. I thought more of it than of any other painting I saw there. The scene represents Mary Magdalene at the sepulchre of Christ. She has looked in and discovered that the body of Jesus was gone and she has sank down on the ground at the foot of the steps leading up into the sepulchre; her left elbow rests on one step and her head rests upon her hand in such a way that the whole face is seen; the face is a little long, and pale, and care-worn, and full of grief. Her position on the ground, and the position of her arm and hand and head all show the sorrow of despair. Her Saviour had been killed cruelly; she had seen him die, she had come to the grave to give expression to her grief by caring for the beloved body, but the body has disappeared, some one has carried [illegible] fallen down at the steps of the sepulchre, and the expression on her face is one of agony. Then the picture shows Christ just behind her, and, gently stepping toward her. She supposed it to be the gardner and asks him for the body of Jesus and in reply He says "Mary," and in an instant she recognizes the voice and throws herself at his feet in a transport of joy.

Well, this is the picture at the Centennial, and Mr. Beecher's scripture lesson, and the hymn by the congregation, and the sermon, all fitted together like a perfect piece of mechanism.

You can imagine better than I can describe how I felt, for the strong impression the picture in the art gallery made upon me was so followed up and intensified and fixed by the scripture, the singing and the sermon that it seemed like the working of God's hand.

MURFREESBORO DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This Conference met in James Chapel, in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, December 13th. The Presiding Elder, C. Pickett, presiding. D. W. Hays and M. C. Young were elected secretaries. The reports from the various parts of the District indicate a prosperous condition of the work. The spiritual condition of the various charges was reported in connection with the Sunday-school work, the attendance at class-meeting and the religious life of the membership. Sunday-schools in fair condition. The more general use of our church catechisms and Sunday-school periodicals was earnestly recommended. The class-meeting is kept up and used as the means of collecting most of the preacher's salary. The life of the membership, generally, showing the effects of purifying grace. The preachers are faithfully at work and promises of a spiritual harvest are not wanting. Financially the reports show that although only a few weeks have passed since Conference, some of the collections have been taken, and fifty dollars was paid at the Conference as the first installment of the collection for the Bishop fund.

Resolutions were adopted urging the preachers to take up the collections for Missions as soon as practicable and forward to the treasury. Also in reference to the other Conference collections that they be presented fully, and in every society. Under the earnest efforts of the active and efficient Presiding Elder, seconded by the preachers, there is no doubt the Church, in the bounds of this district, will show a fine, increase in the collections this conference year. Temperance and education came in for a good share of attention. The public school system was endorsed, and parents were urged to sustain schools by subscription when the free public school was suspended. The Central Tennessee College and the work done by it was highly approved, and the preachers manifested the deepest interest in its success. The prospect is that this school will have the most prosperous year of its history during the present school year. The periodicals of the church were endorsed and the duty of putting one of those in each family in our church was urged on their ministers. The action of the General Conference in adopting the SOUTHWESTERN was approved as eminently wise, the present editor endorsed, and the paper adopted as the official organ of the District. No action was taken on the division of the Conference, but the opposition to each division on the "color line" was clearly manifest whenever it was mentioned. The literary exercises were highly interesting and profitable. One resolution was unanimously adopted that one of the speakers said in the discussion "might hurt somebody." That resolution was to the effect that any Local Preacher or Exhorter who did not take some church paper, and read it as far as practicable, would be considered as unworthy to have his license renewed, unless he offered a satisfactory excuse for his refusal to do so, at the next District Conference, which is to be held in Lebanon. The use of tobacco in all its forms was most heartily condemned, and most of the members of the Conference practice what they preach. No spittoons were used in the Conference, and no puddles of tobacco juice were visible. The members of the Conference separated after the adjournment, on the night of the 15th, after a pleasant session. About 60 members were present and they were most hospitably entertained by the brethren in Murfreesboro. The preachers go to their work hopeful of reporting favorably on all departments of the work, under Divine blessing, at the next District Conference.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

[illegible] C., Dec. 20, 1876.

Snow, of the real, good, old-fashioned kind, which by an association of ideas involuntarily calls to mind sleigh-bells, buffaloes, fur collars, (not to speak of bright eyes and bright red cheeks) and all that sort of thing, is so rare in Washington, even in mid-winter, as to amount to a curiosity almost. It is true that we often have a thin sprinkling of it, temporarily whitening the streets and housetops, but it invariably melts under the genial influence of the sun within a few hours, leaving our broad thoroughfares in a sloppy and sloshy condition that is equally inimical to sleighing and warm feet. This time, however, old father winter has given us a genial touch of the North Pole, and the smooth and whitened surface of Pennsylvania Avenue, with its hundreds of sleighs skipping in and out among each other on their way to the capitol without regard to race, color or (I was going to say "previous condition of servitude"), anything else, is a joyous and exhilarating sight, worthy of the frozen neva!

The fall of snow may have had the effect of cooling off the hot heads in Congress, for it is notable that the excitement and acrimony in debate, which characterized the first week or two after assembling, has materially subsided. The leading Southern Democrats, notably, preserve a calm and dignified repose, and, evidently, do not want any war. It was only the other day that Senator Gordon, of Georgia, in the caucus of Democratic Senators, gave utterance to the following words which are well worth recording, and now appear in print for the first time and that unbeknown to the Senator himself, "Gentlemen," said he, earnestly addressing his colleagues who had gathered in a knot around him, "have you ever experienced the conservative influence of a 15-inch shell in process of combustion; in process of combustion; with the prospect of its immediately dropping into your own home?" It has a highly conservative influence, and we down South know what it is. We've had enough of it. Now, if you want to fight, try it; this time we'll stay at home and make the money."

Last Monday was the occasion of an interesting event, something in the nature of a cremation and something in the nature of a maceration. During the past ten years, all the steel and copper plates, transfer-rolls, dies and other paraphernalia, captured from counterfeiters of bank notes, legal tenders, and gold, silver and nickel coin, by the officers of the Secret Service of the Treasury Department, several hundred in number, were cremated, or to speak more correctly, melted, in the furnaces at the Navy Yard. At the same time nearly a million dollars worth of counterfeit bills, ranging from twenty-five cent fractional currency to hundred dollar bills, were macerated or reduced to pulp by the sixty horse power engine recently provided at the Treasury for that purpose. Formerly all captured counterfeit money, as well as all redeemed notes were destroyed by fire in a large furnace located in the basement of the Treasury building, but this process gave rise to very unpleasant oders permeating the entire building and the vicinity thereof during the combustion of the filthy and greasy paper money, and the macerating process, which is odorless, was substituted and works like a charm. Aristocratic five hundred and thousand dollar bills go through the hopper into the revolving trough or cylinder in company with plebeian quarters, are thoroughly mixed up and disintegrated, and come out at the other end in one even stream of pulp, just as when, starting in life, the pulp which made them went into the paper machine. This pulp sells at five dollars a ton and is used for paper making; the value of the money which goes to make a ton would be something like eight hundred thousand dollars, on an average. That is a come down, from a little less than a million, to five dollars—but such is life.

The plate-melting process was observed with due red-tape (but for obvious reasons necessary) formality, and each plate, die, or piece of coin was checked off, counterchecked and checked again, to be checked once more before it was consigned to the fiery furnace. It was almost a pity to see these plates, which could print so much nice new money, destroyed. But, then, when one remembers the fact that dozens of criminals are in prison to-day for having executed these very plates we gladly consign them to the flames and only wish that the crime which clings to them could be obliterated with them.

The wholesale discharge of employees (chiefly female) from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here has entailed considerable suffering among a large and worthy class of people. The reduction was made necessary by the transfer of the work of printing the revenue stamps to the bank note companies of New York, which, for several reasons, can do the work cheaper than it can be performed by the Government. But every such discharge of government employees has, at least, one good effect, and that is to open the eyes of those foolish ones who consider a berth in one of the Departments the acme of human happiness, and, backed by a little political influence, throw up situations and leave their homes in distant States to come here to feed on "government pap." The ambition to become a Department clerk is neither a noble nor healthful one; it is a life of well paid drudgery, a mere mechanical machine, depending on "influence," and not on ability, for promotion and even existence. So many talented young men run to seed in the Government Departments here in Washington that it seems a pity not to throw out this warning; and when the official axe does fall once in a while there is such a rattling of dry bones, and such anguish visible on the face of every employee whose bread is buttered by Uncle Sam, that the supposed charm of a government position vanishes in a moment, and the most inveterate aspirant for that honor, witnessing this, will be only too glad to retrace his steps and resume his occupation "out West" or "down East," wherever he came from.

SAN ANTONIO.

The city of San Antonio is the most unique city on the American continent. In more than one respect it presents an epitome of the history of civilization. The Mexican "hackal," as a habitation, is but one remove from the natural caves of earth. Its sides are composed of mud, brush, or any other material that the untutored being can use to place between himself and the wind. The roof is of long grass, and the floor of hard-trodden earth. In this the Mexican family live and enjoy life, content if they have food to eat and red pepper to give it a fiery flavor. For the other extreme of civilization, San Antonio presents the lordly mansion, replete with all the conveniences of life, and filled with all that can delight the eye. In one section of the city, near the San Pedro, nothing is heard but a jargon that makes mockery of the Spaniard's mellifluous language. In another the purest Castillian is spoken. In another one scarcely hears aught but the German; and in another English is the tongue of all. In the old portions of the city the pavements are in the Centennial fashion—so narrow that none but lovers can walk in couples upon them, and in others broad and spacious as the most portly can desire. The old houses have roofs of cedar poles and cement, several feet thick, while the new ones have mansard roofs of the most tasteful style. Houses clumsy and substantial, white as bleached linen, stand side by side with Swiss cottages, ornate in all the ornaments of scroll sawing. The plaza is filled with squalid Mexicans, squatted before little piles of pumpkin, squash and pepper, while in the next block is the Beef Market, where the most substantial and tender roasts are sold. Each house has its little aqueduct, with a stream of living water, yet there are thousands in the population who seem ignorant of its cleansing properties. San Antonio may well be called unique, for there is none like it. The old Cathedral, with its grand dome, tells of architectural orthodoxy, while the composite of beautiful St. Mary's strangely suggests architectural heterodoxy. San Antonio is a city where the antipodes meet. There are few streams more beautiful than the river San Antonio. It is a crooked stream—so crooked that a wag declares an eel broke his back in attempting to swim it.

This city reminds one of the puzzle gardens with which facetious people sometimes perplex their guests. He who starts from the Alamo plaza has but one direction in which to walk, if he would avoid the river. It seems ubiquitous. The water, transparent as glass, is the home of a thousand fish, whose graceful movements as they dart among the aquatic plants are a delight. Ferns grow down to the water's edge, while vines with bright scarlet berries adorn the green moss that cover banks, rus in urbe—town in country. At the front door there may be a street filled with wagons and ten-mule teams, while at the rear runs the beautiful river with romantic scenery enough to make the fortunes of a dozen poets.

Every stone of this beautiful city has been consecrated with the blood of a patriot. San Antonio has for a century been the battle ground of human liberty. Its fortified places have been taken, retaken and retaken again; while the Alamo still stands the monument of a battle greater than Theremopylæ, for while one Greek lived to tell the story of heroic defense, not one Texan ever opened his lips to relate how his fellows died.

The Mexican advance arrived on February 21st, 1836, though Santa Anna does not appear to have reached San Antonio until the 23d. He claimed in his dispatch to have taken the city on the 26th, with a loss of eight in killed and wounded, which was not much of a feat, since the Texans almost at once retired to the Alamo.

On the 4th of March a Mexican council of war was held, and it was determined to carry the place by assault on the 6th, at daylight. The sound of the bugle, which was Santa Anna's signal for the advance, must have called the Texans to their posts, for as soon as the Mexicans appeared in range, they received the fire both of the infantry and artillery. In the gray light of that early Sabbath dawn the Mexicans came with tumultuous shouts—the Texans, cool and silent. Santa Anna, the bloody butcher that he was, intent only on the slaughter of the heroic band within the Alamo, cared nothing for the lives of his own men. Dividing his infantry into columns, he surrounded them by his cavalry, who, with their sabres, drove the soldier slaves back to the work of carnage that the chief butcher had assigned them. The bugle sounded, and they rushed to the assault amid a deadly volley of cannon shot and musket balls. The columns attacking the west, north and east sides were hurled back by the first fire of the defenders, and all three of them concentrated on the north front because the houses on the west and east gave the Texans great advantage. The bugle again sounded the charge and a second time they were repulsed in confusion before reaching the foot of the wall, against which they sought to place their scaling ladders.

The Texans stood to their guns, fighting without hope—fighting with the certain knowledge of death before the sun should be an hour high—fighting that they might give liberty to their nation, knowing they could never breathe a breath of its air. For the Mexican bands were playing the dequelo, which signifies no quarter. Gen. Castrillo, the most brilliant officer in the service, had the immediate command of the assault, while Santa Anna gave the signals of battle from a battery near the Commerce street bridge. At the third charge Santa Anna in person encouraged them. This time the Mexicans reached the foot of the wall, where Texan balls could not strike them; their ladders were in position, the slaves were driven to ascend by the swords of their own officers. Again and again did the Texans throw down their ladders and overthrow their assailants. But the places of the dead were supplied by fresh soldiers, until the Texans, killed, wounded and exhausted, could throw down no more. The Mexicans mounted the walls in a tumultuous horde; the brave defenders clubbed their guns, and fought till they fell dead in their bloody tracks. The outer walls being gained, the defenders took refuge in the chapel and in the cells of the monks, while the gun beside which Travis fought and fell, being turned on the Texans, swept the court-yard below. When Travis fell dying, a Mexican officer, mad as a tiger, rushed to mutilate the dying hero. With the strength of a death-struggle Travis raised himself up, and impaled him on his sword, and both fell dead together.

Major Evans, Master of Ordnance, was shot while attempting to fire the magazine, as had been previously determined upon, for the defenders of the Alamo had determined that, when the last moment came, Texan and Mexican, the dead and the living, the assailed and the assailant, should all be hurled into one common ruin.

Thus fell the Alamo—183 dead Texans, 520 dead Mexicans, pictured the story of its fall. The aqueduct was red—the mingled blood of freemen and slaves. The sacrifice was made, and Texan liberty, after one more struggle, was secured. After the battle had ended, and every Texan was silent in death, Santa Anna, with demoniac vengeance, sent for the Alcalde, ordered the clothing stripped from the dead, who were hauled in an ox-team to an open field northeast of the church, thrown naked on a pile and burned to ashes. A burnt offering to the God of Liberty for the freedom of Texas.

There are a hundred houses which should be paintured there, a thousand histories which should be told. The Veremandi House, on Postoffice street, is a monument for the brave old Ben Milam who fell while capturing the city.

GENERAL NEWS.

Mr. T. W. House, of Houston, Texas, will raise this year on his "Arcola" plantation nearly 550 hogsheads of sugar, and about 1000 barrels of syrup. The entire value of the crop is estimated at $60,000.

The old Lovejoy press, which was thrown into the Mississippi by a pro-slavery mob in 1837, and which led to Wendell Phillip's first great speech is now owned by Col. Ranney, at Stuart, Iowa.

Boston has recently witnessed the unusual phenomenon of a vivid flash of lightning during a snow storm. It was followed by a deafening crash of thunder.

On March 1, 1869, just three days before Grant was installed as President, the debt of the United States, including accrued interest thereon, less cash in the treasury, was $2,525,463,260 01; on Dec. 1, 1876, it had been reduced to $2,089,336,099 42—a decrease of $436,127,160 59, equal to an average of $4,089,539 36 per month consecutively throughout the whole period.

Gov. Smith, of Georgia, has received proposals from an English steamship company to put on a first class line of steamships between Savannah or Brunswick and Liverpool at once and keep them running steadily, provided the State will give the company a subsidy of $50,000 a year for three years. They guarantee besides that they will land 8,000 immigrants a month in Georgia.

A large establishment has been opened in St. Louis, Mo., for drying eggs. The eggs are first carefully "candled" to insure their purity, then thrown into an immense receptacle and broken, and the liquid is separated from the shells by centrifugal force. The liquid is then dried into a substance resembling sugar, which can be carried anywhere, and used for all the purposes of fresh eggs, from which it is said to be undistinguishable.

An immense meteor passed over the Northwest on the evening of Dec. 21, at about 9 o'clock. Accounts respecting it are very conflicting, as will be seen by the following from the Inter-Ocean:

There is a strong probability that there will not be a fair count on this meteor business. No investigating committee in the world can canvass the returns from all the favored or meteorized districts and make a clear report. Lawrence, Kan., puts in a claim as a starting point, and every blessed town between that place and Toledo, Ohio, files a claim as a disappearing point. It exploded and disappeared at every town along the route. This is in evidence, and we do not see how any board or committee can go behind the returns. All agree that it was the greatest meteor of the age, but there are double certificates from every locality as to size and appearance. Credible witnesses differ on vital points. To be consistent, the committee must report the meteor varied in size from an average full moon to a buggy wheel. An outrageous claim is put in by Toledo. It is claimed that the meteor seen at that point was an exclusively Toledo affair; that it was not the big blazing affair originated over in Kansas, because the Toledo meteor had no tail—was bobtailed in fact, and generally demoralized. The vote of Toledo should be thrown out.

Presiding Elder Adams says homes are being provided for all the preachers, and he asks all Presiding Elders who have men coming up for admission or ordination, to let him know in time the number, so he can find places.

The Rail Roads give reduced rates.

A Note from Bishop Peck.

Bishop Peck, in a note from his home in Syracuse, N. Y., dated Dec. 26, 1876, says, "I accomplished my Texas tour, met my appointments on the way back, and reached my home in safety in time for Christmas. The whole journey was one of gracious care from God, and I trust of some success in re-arranging the work in that great field (Texas) for another year."

It is not the province of government to show us the way to another world, but to afford us protection in this.

REV. C. L. Madison says in a note from Austin, Texas: "I have just arrived at my appointment and my first work shall be for the paper. Please send me a dozen specimen copies and look out for a good list." That has the right ring.

THE Illinois Supreme Court has decided that children in the public schools of that State cannot be compelled to study any branches but those laid down on the common school law.

THE new Democratic city government of New Orleans have entered quietly upon the discharge of its duties. Hon. Ed. Pilsburry is Mayor, and the following are Administrators: Messrs. Brown, Davis, Diamond, Edwards, McCaffrey and Beustoroff.

THE triple government of Mexico—or practically the dual government—is in a state of great uncertainty; everybody would be glad to have a change. Each aspirant for the presidency would hail some improvement in his prospects, and the people are about as unhappy as distraction can make them.

WHEN the report reached London of the probable election of Mr. Tilden, the bonds of the United States lost in value. On the other hand old Confederate bonds were quoted on the market for the first time since the war, and a few transactions were reported at the rate of three or four cents on the dollar.

AFFAIRS in Europe have assumed a more threatening aspect. Fears are expressed that Turkey will not accept the terms of reform submitted by the Great Powers. She objects to an international commission to superintend the reforms proposed. Her refusal will probably cause the governments that have held the conference to abandon her to her fate. But it is folly to speculate.

THE Wesleyan University has had much to say about co-education of the sex. It seems that as preparatory to class day a Miss Ellis has been elected class-poet, and a son of Bishop Haven, class-orator. Young Haven and others of the class rebelled and compelled the young lady to [illegible] very [illegible] thing we [illegible]. The SOUTHWESTERN [illegible] in the absence of the [illegible] father some old maid [illegible] of the young lady should [illegible] a good spanking.

Our Publisher's Announcement.

In another column will be found the announcement of Messrs Nelson and Phillips who, beginning with the present number, assume, by direction of the General Conference, the publication of the SOUTHWESTERN.

All our readers will rejoice with us in this announcement. It signifies very much for our work in the South. Messrs Nelson and Phillips, represent the Book Concern of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in taking charge of the paper, they bring with them the good will of the whole church. This fact gives proof again that the Church proposes to stand by our work in the South, and that all talk about forsaking this work in whole or in part, has no foundation in fact. The Methodist Church has no more thought of ceasing to push her work in New Orleans than in New York.

This is a fitting time and place to record a few facts of history about our church paper in New Orleans. In 1866, at the time of the organization of our church in the South, Dr. Newman and his associates established the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. For four years that paper did noble work for our cause in the South. It was hoped that by the assistance proffered by the General Conference of 1868, the paper would become an official Journal of the church, but it was decided, instead, to establish the paper at Atlanta. The ADVOCATE was continued however in this city until the close of 1869. Afterward it was merged with an educational journal published by the State Superintendent. In 1873, by a united effort of the Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas Conferences the SOUTHWESTERN was started, and has been published bi-weekly until now, by direction of the General Conference it is made a weekly and given a place in the the family of official ADVOCATES.

We cannot throw away this history. To make it has required too much hard work by good and true men to be lost. And so in taking official honors we will not forget from whence we came, but well say New Series Vol. 1. No. 1., and gathering up the past will add, whole number 331.

And now Brothers what say you? Shall the SOUTHWESTERN be a success, or shall it fail? The past year has seen more newspapers die than any year since newspapers had a beginning, and the SOUTHWESTERN will die as easy as any, if it does not have subscribers enough to make it live. What say you? Will you take hold of the canvass strongly? Our Texas Brothers have by Conference action expressed their joy that the paper is made official, and promised each a definite number of subscribers. Brethren of Texas, you cannot afford to let one of those pledges go unfulfilled. And, another thing, the sooner you send the promised names the better.

The SOUTHWESTERN ought to be in every Methodist family of the South. It has never given an uncertain sound. Its opposition to all recognition of caste in the church has been and will continue to be uncompromising; its faith in the doctrines and polity of the church will continue unquestionable; and its opposition to every form of sin in Church or State will be outspoken and persistent.

What say you Brethren of the Southwest? The private circular letter of the Publishers is already in your hands. Some of you are already doing nobly. But many have not been heard from. Are you at work? If not, will you not begin at once?

General Conference Journal.

The Journal of the General Conference of 1876, makes an octave volume of 663 pages. It is well printed by the New York House, and very ably edited by the Secretary of that body Rev. G. W. Woodruff, D. D. This record of the doings of the great council of the Church should be in the hands of all Methodists who desire to be well informed in the changes made in the organized laws of the body. The "Journal" makes three hundred and seventy-two octave pages; and the "appendix"—comprising the Fraternal Letters and Reports of the chief agencies of the Church etc.—makes two hundred and fifty pages.

Anniversary of the Freedman's Aid Society.

The ninth anniversary of the Freedmans Aid Society was held in Pittsburg Nov. 11th. On the Sabbath before sermons were preached in all our churches of Pittsburg and Alleghany City. Bishops Bowman and Wiley, Drs. Rust, Bidwell, Felton and Wheeler and Mrs. Willing weae among the preachers.

Monday afternoon a womens' meeting was held at South Common Church, Rev. L. B. Beacon pastor, Mrs. Bishop Clark presided. Mrs. Dr. Rust reported the receipt of letters from prominent ladies expressing great sympathy with the work and offering aid. $4000 had already been subscribed for women's work. Mrs. H. Wheeler and Mrs. Jennie F. Willing addressed the meeting. The latter asked;

"Who are these freedmen and women whom we are asked to support?" She urged that we must elevate and evangelize them. Reference was made to the late political contest; she described the aid colored people had given, and said; "If the dominant party is beaten, it will be from its tardy justice to the black race. She regarded this as missionary work. The movements of the Catholics were shown in scathing terms, and she closed by saying that our Church through this society had evangelized 50,000 of these people, and yet, though there are 4,000,000 of them, the Church has but seventy five missionaries.

Monday evening the Anniversary was held in Smithfield Church, Rev, C. W. Smith pastor. Dr. Rust read an abstract of his report. Dr. Bidwell gave the address of the evening. One who heard says:

The doctor showed in his opening word, the importance of the freedmen's works and the necessity and duty of our Church taking part in their intellectual and moral improvement. He demonstrated that in no sense was it a political work, as it was a problem oldes and mightier than the republic. Its importance was such that the destiny of the republic hinges upon this freedmen's question. It was one of humanity, and high above politics. Referring to the outrages committed upon them, he said, We of to-day are no more responsible for their slavery than we are of original sin. He then discussed the duty and object of the society; it is to give a Christian object and incentive to a heretofore down-trodden race.

The question is, What shall be done? There is one way out of the wilderness for that race. We cannot expel them from the country; we can not kill them off at once, although attempts are being made in some parts of the country to kill them off; but t cannot be done; there are too many of them. The various schemes were then named. What was needed was an incentive to lift them to their feet, and let them get hold of the chariot of Mesiah, and they will respect themselves and gain respect. The nation could not do this; it was for the Church, and the M. E. Church should add this great glory to her name.

Dr. Rust's report shows the receipts of the Society for the past year to have been $58,205, all of which he has disbursed. In nine years the Society has received and disbursed $582,000. The year just closed shows these results: sixty teachers; three thousand pupils; mostly those who are to teach or preach. Many of these study on week days and preach on Sunday. The school property in the South is worth nearly a quarter of a million.

The glorious work must be carried foward. Its blessings to the South cannot be estimated. Let the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society be explained from all our pulpits and the people asked to help.

A Specimen of Romish Tolerance.

Minorca is one of the Baleanic Islands in the Mediterranean Sea, and has a population of 44,000. It is one of a group which forms a province of Spain, and so comes under the so-called laws of religious tolerance of that country. The Catholic Bishop ot Minorca has lately issued a circular excommunicating all heretics, meaning protestants. The circular reads more like an emanation from the Prince of Darkness than from one professing to represent Jesus Christ. Here is a quotation:

"We renew and reiterate our sentence of the highest order of excommunication against heretics of every sort, kind and description, againts their pupils or adopted children, against their fathers, mothers, preceptors and all who set at meat with them. We fully excommunicate all who aid or look kindly at them; we excommunicate the domestic servants of all heretics; we excommunicate all and every person or persons who dare to let a house to a heretic or Protestant for school or services, and every one who gives money, or makes a loan or leaves a legacy to such persons; we excommunicate every one who lives on terms of friendship with such hecetic, and every one who dares to say or write one word in their defense. The clergy of my diocese are commanded to read this out on three successive Sundays during divine service, and take good care that all its injunctions be carried out to the letter."

The Roman Catholic Church of to day is the same as in the dark ages when she burned the purest and best living men, save in one thing, she has not the power to enforce her diabolical decrees.

THE missions of the Southern Methodist Church, do not seem to prosper very well in Montana and Colorado. In 1876 $6,000 were appropriated, to nineteen preachers and six hundred members, and in two years nineteen adults have been baptized. So says a Southern correspondent in the Northern Advocate.

Ministers outraged in South Carolina.

The following is received from one of our ministers, clipped from a South Carolina paper:

THE CHIVALRY ASSAULTING CLERGYMEN AND TEACHERS.—On last Tuesday night, on the South Carolina railroad cars, Rev. Drs. Webster and Cooke, the latter President of the Claflin University, in Orangeburg, were assaulted, insulted, and called radical s—ns of b—s, by the South Carolina chivalry of red-shirt notoriety and rifle-club fame. They demanded that he should discontinue to teach those niggers in that nigger school, or they would break it up when Hampton was Governor. Dr. Cooke's hat was taken off his head and slammed over his face, and it was by the greatest forbearance that they saved their lives. This is a morsel of the quiet and peace which prevails in South Carolina. Dr. Cooke was demanded to take a drink of Hampton whisky, but he declined.

It is accompanied by a letter from the minister referred to above. He says, "The half is not told in the article. The assault was wholly unprovoked, as the men came to these brethren, and asked Who they were? Where they lived? Where they were going? How they voted?"

Drs. Webster and Cooke are leading ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, both men of national reputation, and selected for their work in the South because of their culture, prudence and devotion to duty. This treatment, too dastardly and mean to be characterized by words, is received at the hands of representatives ot the Hampton democrasy of South Carolina.

The honorable men of the party will regret it no doubt, but will they publicly denounce it? We fear not. The hero of the Hamburg massacre, M. C. Butler, is their chosen representative to the U. S. Senate, and if the murderer of freedmen can thus be flattered and promoted, we have but little faith that the abusers of those who work for the education of the freedmen will hardly be rebuked.

"Roman Catholics to the Polls."

In the election just past a circular was quietly distributed in Brooklyn, headed as above "Roman Catholics to the polls." On the circular were the following, "We must take part in politics" Cardinal McClosky—"Catholics let us all stand together, Freeman's Journal"—"We must learn that we are Catholics first and citizens afterward," Bishop Gilmour. In the middle of the circular was a cross surmounted by a Papal Tiara. The circular read:

It is scarcely necessary, we trust, to urge our fellow Catholics to assemble everywhere around the Democratic colors; for they are all by choice or necessity external to the Republican party, and it is incredible to believe that any Catholic who has a modicum of self-respect and love for his Church can co-operate with that party.
—Southern Catholic.

Then followed a list of Catholic Candidates.

As in Brooklyn so everywhere. With only a few exceptions, Catholics throw their influence and votes with one political party. They congregate largely in great cities, and their votes do much to control the elections. Only San Francisco and Philadelphia of the large cities of the country went Republican. The following figures show this:

	Tilden	Hayes	Total
NEW YORK.	112,208	58,658	170,866
CINCINNATI.	29,466	28,770	58,236
PHILADELPHIA.	61,047	76,474	137,521
BALTIMORE.	32,199	22,100	54,299
BROOKLYN.	54,256	37,306	91,562
BOSEON	23,688	20,388	44,076
CHICAGO.	33,645	28,574	62,219
ST. LOUIS.	21,157	18,849	40,995
SAN FRANCISCO.	20,279	21,165	41,544
LOUISVILLE.	12,372	5,847	18,319

This concentration of the vast patronage and influence of the Catholic Church into one political party is a suspicious and dangerous fact. That church is to-day, in every nation where it has power, opposing freedom of thought and denouncing protestants as heretics fit only to be damned.

Another Terrible Accident.

A railroad train of seven cars, in which were one hundred and seventy-five people, fell through a bridge near Cleveland, Ohio, on the 29th ult. The fall was sixty feet into a small river, which was frozen over. The ice broke, and the train at once took fire. Over one hundred people were either crushed to death, burned, drowned or frozen. The weather was intensely cold. Thirty-one bodies are so burned as to be beyond identification. No account of the cause of the accident has been attempted. The train was running slowly, and near the station of Ashtubula.

Our Work in Mason, Texas.

Rev. I. D. Peterson was sent to Mason, Texas, in the West Texas Conference by Bishop Andrews, about one year ago. He went without missionary aid, began his work with no organization. His report to his Conference in San Antonio a few days ago shows a membership of forty-two, a good Sunday-school numbering seventy-five, and a church building under way which will cost $2,500. He has been returned to the work and begins the year under these encouraging auspicies. This good work is but a specimen of what is being accomplished by our Church among the white people of Western Texas, in the towns now springing up inthat vast region.

Under date of Dec. 12, Bro. Peterson writes: "The corner stone of our new church was laid Dec. 10th." He was assisted in the services by Rev. Mr. Hart of the German M. E. Church South. The Church is to be built of stone, 28x43, and will cost, when finished, $2500.

The Congressional Investigating Committees.

The House Committee presided over by Mr. Morrison, (Democrat) and the Senate Committee presided over by Mr. Howe, (Republican) are still busily at work taking testimony upon the conduct of the late election in this State. Several Sub-Committees are also in other parts of the State taking testimony. As the reports are published in the daily press throughout the whole country, we do not attempt even a synopsis. At the proper time we shall discuss the chief point of the investigtion.

From the Lakes to the Gulf.

The Illinois Central Railroad is soon to control and run the New Orleans, St. Louis & Chicago Railroad. This will make one continuous line, under one management, from Chicago to New Orleans, a distance of over nine hundred miles. Steps are already taken to largely increase the capacity of the road, and no pains or money will be spared to place the whole line in first-class order. Trains will soon run to Chicago on as good time as from that city to New York. Mr. Clark, who is to take charge of the road, is spoken of in the highest terms as being especially interested in increasing trade between New Orleans and the West and Northwest.

A NOTE from Dr. J. B. Chess of San Antonio, announces the death of Col. C. C. Gillispie of that city.

This gentleman was at one time a brilliant minister of the M. E. Church South. For four years he was the editor of the N. O. Christian Advocate. He was the founder of the Galveston Christian Advocate. He entered the confederate army and served with distinction. After the war he became dissipated but continued to write for the secular press extensively and well. He was a man of good culture, genial manners and never lacked for friends. Our acquaintance with him was slight, and only for the one habit which ruined him, his friendship was to be coveted. Poor man! The last known of him by his friends he was at Austin and intoxicated. Let us not judge him harshly but pity him and hasten to help the victims of intemperance whom we daily meet.

DR. Walden of the Western Publishing House lately spent a few days in Atlanta, Ga., looking after the interests of the Methodist Advocate. That paper speaks well of his visit and states that he preached with acceptability in the Southern Methodist Church of that city. At one time it was thought probable that the Atlanta Depository might be closed and the size of the Methodist Advocate lessened. But neither will be done. The outlook for 1877, is pronounced encouraging. We wish our Atlanta contemporary long life and a largely increased subscription list.

THE Roman Catholic Church spends $200,000 a year for missionary purposes in the South, principally in large cities. This amount is over and above what is raised by Catholics on the ground.

The Nashville Christian Advocate has not a word of complaint or criticism about this, while every year that paper growls about the money used by the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South for missionary purposes.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

Dr. O. H. Tiffany of Chicago is to succeed Dr. Chapman as pastor of St. Pauls M. E. Church, New York.

DR. JOCLYN, of Michigan, will accept our thanks for a copy of his Conference minutes.

Rev. Dr. J. D. Adams and family have gone to Florida for the winter.

President Grant it is reported will take an extended tour at the close of his term.

Rev. J. Mitchell, of Virginia Conference, is transferred to Georgia, and made Presiding Elder of Atlanta District.

Rev. W. Jessie Grant lately transferred to West Texas Conference has reached his appointment at Lawrence, Texas, and reports that "everything indicates a prosperous year."

Rev. I. J. Lansing, of the Georgia Conference is doing good work in New England for the Freedmens' Aid Society. His addresses are well received.

Bishop Simpson's eldest daughter, Ella H., was married Dec. 14, to Rev. C. N. Buoy, of the Philadelphia Conference. Bishop Foster performed the ceremony.

Bishop Simpson has edited, and Everts and Stewart, Philadelphia, have published a "Cyclopedia of Methodism" which is highly spoken of as containing in one volume very much about Methodism.

Rev. R. M. Hatfield, of Philadelphia, has been compelled to rest a year from active ministerial work. He goes to Florida for the winter, abroad next summer, and hopes to renew work in Rock River Conference next fall, to which he has been transferred.

Joseph Smith, whose father of the same name was one of the founders of the Mormon church, strongly condems polygamy. He says the sign which his father gave has departed, and if the Church will put away polygamy it will prosper. "Orthodox" Mormons are "going for" Joseph.

Letter from Dr. Godman.

Dear Bro. Hartzell:—

In the order of Providence our stay in the North has already been protracted, and will probably be extended for several months more. This is not to our liking, although it seems to be our duty. When we came North in June we expected to return home in October. In August it was decided that we should remain until January 1st. It has lately been decided that we continue in the present work at least until the first of April. I presume your readers, or some of them, are aware that we are engaged in labors for the Freedmen's Aid Society, for the particular benefit of the work in Louisiana. Nothing but the hope of putting our work on a better financial basis would induce us to endure the rigors of a climate we have learned to dread, and the afflictions of a work that has in it "all cross and no crown." But we rejoice in the cross for the work's sake. Success is encouraging. Nearly three thousand dollars already secured, we are encouraged to think there is more ahead. We beseech our good friends to pray that we may have glorious success.

The New Orleans University, during our temporary absence, is in good hands. Professors Collins, Morrow and DeWolfe will do perfect work, and, with their faithful assistants, will meet all the wants of the School. The University is dear to our hearts. It grieves us to be away; we long for it daily. The association, with our students, and the beholding their improvement is more than meat and drink to us. We hereby send our affectionate rememberance to all our students, and request them to love the University as heretofore; to love and honor their teachers as they have always done; to be faithful in all their duties, and to stay by their work, expecting our return at the earliest practicable day. I am glad to say to all our good friends that I am resting in the Lord. The commotions without do not disturb the peace that flows from Him. He reigns in the world. The wrath of men is made to praise Him. Only good will come to our work from the existing excitement. The Lord's poor will soon be in a better position than before. We've only reason to be hopeful. We are happy to find the cause we represent so dear to the great body of the Methodist people. To keep them informed of our work and its conditions is our duty—hitherto not fully done.

In conclusion let me exhort all our friends to keep up the University, fill it up with students, pray for it, and make it more and more a power for good. We expect soon to send it some good things.

Very truly,
W. D. GODMAN.

Holly Springs.

For more than four weeks, since Thanksgiving Day, we have had cold weather almost without cessation, and for a week past the ground has been hidden by a mantle of snow, and at this writing, 5 p. m., Dec. 28, it is falling fast. Had we the necessary requirements it doubtless be put to a happy use. A citizen who has kept a daily record for many years says that this has been the coldest December that he has ever chronicled.

Our schools have vacated for holidays, and many students have gone to different parts of the State to engage in teaching. From thirty to forty of those who have been in attendance at Shaw University during the past term will teach for the next three or five months. While this will delay them in their college course it will nevertheless be productive of good, for they go out thoroughly in earnest to labor for the good of those among whom they may associate, and not less than a thousand children will be placed under their instructions. Their absence from the University will leave many seats vacant to be filled by those who could not be present during the past term, and we would urge all those interested in the success of the University and the well-being of the people to exert every effort to send young men and women to us for instruction that by study and discipline they may become fitted for usefulness and success in any and every department of life. Our next term opens January 3.

On Christmas evening our Sabbath school engaged in a very interesting literary exercise, after which a curtain raised and brought to view a beautiful tree well loaded with the many presents that kind friends and good old Santa Claus had hung thereon.

A reading association has lately formed among us, which, it is hoped, may prove a great blessing to old and young. At present one of the recitation rooms of the University is used as a place of meeting and already a good variety of reading matter lies upon our tables, much of it being furnished by our Church publishing houses.

We would highly appreciate the kindness of any friend who would subscribe for a good paper to be sent to us; send us good books or other reading matter. Send to "Reading Association," care W. W. Hooper.

Harmony of Science and Religion.

Now, at eighty-two and a-half years of age, still by God's forbearance and blessing, possessing my mental powers unimpared, and looking over the barrier beyond which I soon must pass, I can truly declare that in the study and exhibition of science to my pupils and fellow-men, I have never forgotten to give all honor and glory to the infinite Creator—happy if I might be the honored interpreter of a portion of His works and of the beautiful structure and beneficient laws discovered therein by the labors of many illustrious predecessors. For this I claim no credit. It is the result to which right reason and sound philosophy, as well as religion, would naturally lead.

While I have never concealed my convictions on these subjects, nor hesitated to declare them on all proper occasions, I have also declared my belief, that, while natural religion stands on the basis of revelation, consisting as it does, of the facts and laws which form the domain of science, science has never revealed a system of mercy commensurate with the moral wants of man. In nature, in God's creation, we discover only laws—laws of undeviating strictness, and sore penalties attached to their violation. There is associated with natural laws no system of mercy. That dispensation is not revealed in nature, and is contained in the Scriptures alone.

With the double view just presented, I feel that science and religion may walk hand in hand. They form two distinct volumes of revelation, and, both being records of the will of the Creator, both may be received as constituting a unity, declaring the mind of God; and, therefore, the study of both becomes a duty, and is perfectly consistent with our highest moral obligations.

I feel that, as this subject respects my fellow men, I have done no more than my duty; and I reflect upon my course with subdued satisfaction, being persuaded that nothing which I have said or omitted to say in my public lectures, or before the college classes, or before popular audiences, can have favored the erroneous impression that science is hostile to religion.

My own conviction is so decidedly in the opposite direction, that I could wish that students of theology should be also students of natural science—certainly of astronomy, geology, natural philosophy and chemistry, and the outlines of natural history.—PROF. SILLIMAN in, Phrenological Journal.

The Situation in Louisiana.

While Congressional Committees are examining hundreds of witnesses in this State, and seeking to get at (it is hoped) the truth relative to the many charges of intimidation and violence in certain parishes during the late election, still other and stirring events are daily transpiring.

The fact that the issue has a national significance, and that the eyes of the whole nation are upon this State has had a wonderful conserving influence. Had the contest been simply local, there would probably have been bloodshed before this.

Monday, January 1, was the time for the assembling of the Legislature. Governor Kellogg had taken, as he thought was necessary, the precaution to have the State House guarded by a heavy force of police, and only those who had been declared legally elected were admitted. By the declaration of the Returning Board the Senate was Republican by [illegible] majority and the House was Republican by 16. The Democrats claim that by a true count the Legislature is Democratic by a small majority.

At the appointed hour, 12 m., the Republicans were in their places in the Senate and House. The Democrats came in a body and refused to enter unless the police were removed. General Badger of the State police, had the building in charge, and through his representative Capt. McCormick informed the gentlemen that those who held certificates of election from the Secretary of State would be admitted and no others. The Democrats then withdrew and marched in a body to St. Patrick's Hall. Before leaving the State House, Mr. Trezevant, [illegible] the old House of Representatives, which was Democratic, [illegible] stated that he would [illegible] the roll (as the law required) [illegible] doors should be thrown [illegible] everybody who was [illegible] admitted. The following correspondence will indicate the points at issue:

House of Representatives,
Tuesday, January 2, 1877.

Hon. W. P. Kellogg, Gov. of La:

As a committee of the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, we have come to inform you that the House of Representatives has organized in St. Patrick's Hall, in this city, and has there elected a Speaker, Hon. Louis Bush, of Orleans, and are now ready to proceed to business.

Our reasons for assembling in that hall we desire to state, at the same time entering our solemn protest against the occupation of the State House by armed police and militia and against the unlawful and unwarranted exclusion of duly elected Representatives of the people.

At the hour of assembly, on Monday, January 1, we presented ourselves at the door of the State House, which we found in possession of armed men, police and militia, with the doors barricaded and closed.

On duly requesting permission for the Representatives elect to enter, and after duly demanding that the barricades be removed, that the armed police and militia be withdrawn, and being met with a refusal, in order to avoid tumult and bloodshed, we withdrew and organized according to the law and constitution of the State.

The Clerk of the House, also having presented himself, demanded that the police, militia and unauthorized armed men be commanded to retire, and the barricades be removed, and that the legally elected members of the Legislature be allowed to enter, and this being also refused, retired to St. Patrick's Hall, where upon call of the roll a duly elected number of Representatives were found to be present, and the House was duly organized.

In the name of that body, the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, we desire to enter our solemn protest against the exclusion from the State House of the duly elected Representatives of the people; against the presence of armed Metropolitan Police and soldiers, and against the barricades which excluded the Representatives from entering their hall. We enter this our solemn protest against such unlawful and unwarranted proceedings in the name of the people whose rights have been trampled on and overthrown, and in the name of all who believe in the liberties of our State.

[illegible], of Orleans.
J. M. Williams,
of East Baton Rouge.
[illegible], St. Landry parish.

Governor Kellogg replied:

Gentlemen—There are several statements contained in this communication which are incorrect. There were no military, properly speaking, in the State House yesterday. There was a force of police armed no differently from the way in which they are ordinarily armed as conservators of the peace. They were simply here for the purpose of protecting the members of the Legislature. They are not here for the purpose of interfering with any member of either House. They were specially instructed not to interfere with any member, but to protect them from interference by others.

It has been stated there were United States troops in the State House. There were none. It has also been stated that there has been a communication cut between this building and the New Orleans Hotel, on [illegible] street, for the [illegible] of [illegible] United States [illegible] with greater rapidity into the State House. That is not true. Whatever communication exists between the State House and any other building has existed for some time.

As to this House, which you claim has been legally and properly organized, [illegible] that the Secretary of State [illegible] furnish the Clerk of the House with a list of all persons legally declared elected members of the House of Representatives. The Clerk was furnished yesterday with such a list. Sixty-[illegible] whose names were [illegible] appeared in the regular roll of the House of Representatives in the State House and organized according to law, and [illegible] two or [illegible] appeared in St. Patrick's Hall. Therefore I must decline to receive any communication from a body which lacks nearly twenty of a quorum.

The same may be said as to the Senate. A legal quorum of Senators holding over and Senators declared duly elected met in the Senate chamber, in the State House, nineteen in number, and later in the day one of the holding over Democratic Senators appeared also in the Senate chamber, making twenty Senators present out of thirty-six.

Thus there is a Legislature, both House and Senate, fully organized, [illegible]

[illegible] withdraw all the guards from the vicinity of the hall and from the approaches to the hall and leave him in full and undisputed control of the hall itself. But he went further, after that yielded all his demand and asked me to remove what he termed the barricades on the lower floor of the building, there being [illegible] the upper floor where the Hall of Representatives is situated. These barricades were placed there simply to prevent any danger of a mob breaking into the Treasurer's and Auditor's offices. This, as you know, is an old hotel; the doors of the lower floor are composed largely of glass and could be easily broken by a mob such as surged around this building yesterday. The fact that there was this danger must convince every candid man, I think, that it was proper to take precautions to protect these State officers.

I am much obliged to you, gentlemen, for your call. Good morning.

Notes from [illegible]

"I have read with high interest the great book of Rev. J. P. Newman, D.D., on the 'Thrones and Palaces of Babylon and Nineveh.' The book has the charm of thrilling adventure, and of varied and learned observation, in a journey through a land whose history, dating to extreme antiquity, can never be otherwise than interesting to the scholar and captivating to the ordinary reader. His pictures, varied and life-like, are not less instructive than entertaining. Even the Harpers have surpassed themselves in the elaborate and elegant style in which they, as publishers, have done their part."

Fear of Man (25-27).—The first act of the two rival kings was to strengthen their possessions. Rehoboam "built cities for defence in Judah," some fifteen in number, and strongly garrisoned them with men and provisions. 2 Chr. 11: 5-12. Jeroboam fortified Shechem and Penuel.

Two things he dreaded. 1st. That the hearts of the people would be turned again "unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam, king of Judah"—an expression which indicates that even in the eyes of Jeroboam his rival was the rightful ruler of the land, despite the fact that the Lord had assured himself of his sovereignty. 2d. He was afraid of being killed. The fate of Ishbosheth (2 Sam. 4: 7) was cause enough for such a fear. If the people had once more turned to the house of David, assassins would not have been wanting who would have slain Jeroboam to secure the desired unity again, and to carry favor for themselves.

Fatal Steps (28-31)—Fear of may leads directly to contempt of God. First, "the king took counsel"—but not of God. He acted on the advice of others, but it is plain enough that he set forth the exigencies of the case so strongly as to compel their verdict. The counselors of a king very rarely have stamina enough to oppose the royal will when it is evidently fixed in its purpose.

Jerusalem contained the temple, the ark, the cherubim—all the articles which commanded the veneration of the people. To decentralize the worship it was necessary to have something to take their place, which should excite equal devotion and reverence. Inasmuch as the calf was regarded as a proper representation of deity—a notion inherited by the Israelites from the Egyptians who worshipped Apis, the sacred bull—he made "two calves of gold," or, probably, of wood, painted with gold.

It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem. How tender and thoughtful for the ease of his people! To them he made it appear as though the movement was inaugurated wholly out of consideration for their comfort. In going up to Jerusalem to worship, some of them were compelled to journey over a hundred miles. He knew that in announcing that this injunction was removed it would speak very welcomely to human nature. Set the one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan. They were at the two extremes of his kingdom, neither one being much more than a day's journey from any part of his dominions. How this convenience contrasted with the former stern regime! The flesh is very ready to rejoice at the removal of all occasion for self-denial and wearying labor.

This thing became a sin. A very grievous sin. It opened a long career of idolatry to the people. It was a disobedience to the second commandment. It led to the high-handed outrage of ordaining a new, man-appointed priesthood, to the changing of one of the prescribed sacred feasts, to the driving from their homes those that remained loyal to their faith, and to Jeroboam's officiating as a high-priest without the pretext of even the least authority so to do.

The subsequent history and punishment of Jeroboam is an interesting and necessary supplement to this lesson. The testimony of the man of God against the altar at Bethel is given in the next chapter. His prophecy that the priests who then offered incense upon it should be burnt thereon themselves was literally fulfilled. 2 K. 23. 15, 16. The sign that was then given in testimony of its truth, enforced as it was by the sudden withering and restoration of his own hand, had no lasting effect on the king. "He returned not from his evil way." 13: 33. Next came the death of his child as another warning, and finally, his defeat by the son of Rehoboam. After he had resolved upon his evil course he was stubbornly perverse to the end. When he was dead his bad reputation lived on after him. He became known to subsequent generations as "Jeroboam, who made Israel to sin." 2 K. 10: 31; 13: 6; 14: 24. By his iniquity he not only caused his own house to be cut off, but Israel itself was given up because of his sins. 14: 16. The judgments that followed the worship of the first golded calf, and those that resulted from the worship of these, and of others, have given rise to a proverb among the Jews, which reads: "No punishment happeneth to thee, O Israel, wherein there is not an ounce of sin of the calf."

St. Mary's Total Abstinence Society, of Galveston, the first organization in the Island City to send aid to Savannah during the recent yellow fever scourge, has over one hundred active members, does not owe a dollar, and has over $1000 in its treasury. It is composed almost entirely of Catholics.

PUBLISHER'S ANNOUNCEMENT, 1877.

The last General Conference made the Southwestern Christian Advocate an official weekly Church paper, and directed that we should publish it. We found it better to leave the paper under the former management during the remainder of 1876. Beginning with January 1, 1877, we assume the entire management of the paper. Subscribers whose subscription have not expired, and have paid, will receive the paper to the full amount of their subscription. All other subscriptions are considered out, January 1, 1877. All money due for subscriptions to January 1st should be sent at once to assist the former publishers to meet unpaid bills.

In beginning the publication of the Southwestern we ask, and shall expect, the most hearty co-operation of all the ministers within the patronizing territory. Without this co-operation the paper will fail. We propose that in proportion to its size the Southwestern shall not be second to any paper in the Church. Our purpose will be to adopt in to the wants of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, and we hope that our ministers, not only in the South, but in the whole Church, who feel a special interest in our Southern work, will unite with us in making the paper a success financially.

We have adopted the cash system, and send papers only as paid for. This is better for all. We will gladly send specimen copies free to any who ask for them. If subscribers cannot pay for the whole year, let them pay for part, and the paper will be sent during the time paid for.

$2.00 will pay for the Southwestern one year, including postage. All ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents—to whom the paper will be sent for $1 a year.

YOUR PAPER FREE.

To any person sending us four subscribers and $8.00 we will send the Southwestern one year. This offer holds good until April 1, 1877.

"Down in the Mouth."

Where there is a continued dropping down into the back of the mouth, with irritation and inflammation of the nasal cavities and throat, with hawking, spitting, and a sense of fullness about the head, be not deceived or fancy it a simple cold. You are afflicted with that scourge of this climate, Catarrh, the forerunner of Consumption. In its early stages a few bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will effect an entire cure. When confirmed, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical discovery should be used in connection with the Remedy. These standard medicines have been before the public many years, and their use has been attended with the most gratifying success. A full discussion of Catarrh and its rational treatment is contained in "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," a book of over nine hundred pages, illustrated with two hundred and eighty-two engravings, bound in cloth and gilt, price, post-paid, $1 50. Address, Publishing Department, World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y.

Consumption Cured.

An old physian, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousand of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. [1284]

A Very Sick Woman.

While calling at the office of a friend the other day, we were handed a letter from which we read the following: Friend Craddock—My best friend, for thus I must address you, as you have done me more good than any one on earth under God, and I believe I owe my life to you, and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you have done. It would take several sheets of paper to enumerate all my sufferings, so will only speak of the most important. For four years I had hemorrhages, beginning in February and lasting until fall; palpitation of the heart, soreness of the breast bone and short ribs, pain in the back and lower part of the abdomen, cold hands and feet even in August, constipation and headache. I had tried doctors, far and near, but all in vain. Some said I had consumption, others liver disease. I quit all doctors and wrote to you for help, and obtained it from your great "East India Hemp." I depend upon you alone for a perfect restoration to health, and feel that I shall not be disappointed. Please send two more bottles, with Pills and Ointment, which I think will do the work. Yours truly,

A. E. Richard.

Happy Influence of a great Specific.

For the preservation or recovery of health and strength, the diet should be wholesome and nutritious. When it happens that the alimentary processes are disturbed by improper or half masticated food, the best remedy for the evil results of abusing the digestive organs is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most agreeable, prompt and gentle remedy for dyspepsia, and for the bilious and evacuative irregularities which result from it. The liver and bowels, in common with the stomach, experience its beneficient influences. The refuse of the system is carried off through its natural outlet, a healthy flow and secretion of the bile is promoted, and a powerful impetus is given to assimilation in consequence of its use. It healthfully stimulates the bladder and kidneys when they are inactive, and by its tonic and regulating action fortifies the system against malaria. Jan14t

Among the exhibitors at the Centennial Exhibition may be mentioned the well-known Organ manufacturers of Brattleboro, Vt., Messrs. J. Estey & Co. The "prominent absence" of such a firm from the "list of awards" has doubtless occasioned many questions as to the reason. Explanation is simple indeed. They did not compete. They simply exhibited their instruments on their own intrinsic merits, with no effort to obtain recognition except from the public.

We cannot too highly commend such a course, as compared with some exhibitors whose sole aim seemed to be not to give the public pleasure in examining their wares, but to obtain the bronze medal.

Enquiry elicits the fact that Estey & Co. are the largest manufacturers and the heaviest exporters of their class, one-half of the entire amount of organs shipped to European markets being from this house.

RICHARD WAGNER, of whose ability to judge there can be no doubt, writes, "The tone of the Estey Organ is very beautiful and noble and gives me the greatest pleasure. My great friend Franz Liszt is also charmed and delighted with them."

MME. ESSIPOFF says, "I can play with exquisite enjoyment for hours on these beautiful instruments."

OLE BULL.—"Excel in fine, powerful tone."

MME. LUCCA.—"I am surprised at their full, noble and organ-like tone."

RUBENSTEIN.—"Tone full, noble and exceedingly animating."

There is no doubt about the meaning of such expressions as these from the leading musicians of the age, and Estey & Co. may well claim to lead the world.

How tenderly and sweetly falls the gentle "good-night" into loving hearts, as members of a family separate and retire for the night. What [illegible] hasty words and thoughtless [illegible] engendered in the hurry and [illegible] of the day, are forever blotted out by its benign influences! A paper pressed upon these takes up enough ink to make a picture on the paper just like that first drawn upon the block. This block is set up in a page with the type, and an electrotype plate is cast from it. Then the printing press goes on multiplying copies of the whole page. The block being engraved on the end of the grain will stand a good deal of printing, but will wear after a time. The copper plates used to print from do not wear readily, and the original wood cuts are kept fresh and new, to cast other plates from when wanted.—American Agriculturist.

Variety in Food.

Fish, flesh, fowl, vegetable—and of this last, root, stem, leaf, bud, seed—are all acceptable to the human stomach. Variety of food is as necessary as abundance, for the supply of the waste of the body. Says a writer: "For the staple articles of diet, bread and milk and meat, almost everybody seems to have an appetite, but there are others that one must learn to like, as tomatoes and okra, to which each reader will doubtless add a long list of other edibles.

"Persons brought up inland look with horror and disgust on lobsters and other shell-fish, while those accustomed to sea food in variety wonder how the inland appetite can be satisfied with its narrow range of foods. To some oysters are a poison; in others strawberries produce the most distressing sickness; the same is true of cheese, and even of milk; yet these articles rank among the most nutritious and desirable articles of diet for the majority of people.

"Travelers learn to eat everything and enjoy everything; in so doing they are indeed wise; and people who stay at home are wise if they accustom themselves to a large and varied range of food, to eat everything, in fact, that is edible, everything which they have not good reason to consider unfit for admission to the human stomach."

A Valuable Secret.

If the anecdote is old, the lesson of life it bears can never grow old, any more than can the divine lessons of the Sermon on the Mount.

It is related of Franklin, that from the window of his office he noticed a mechanic, among a number of others, who was at work on a house which was being erected close by, who always appeared to be in a merry humor, and who had a kind and cheerful smile for every one he met. Let the day be ever so cold, gloomy or sunless, the happy smile danced like a sunbeam on his cheerful countenance. Meeting him one day, Franklin requested to know the secret of his constant happy flow of spirits.

"Its no secret, doctor," the man replied; "I've one of the best of wives, and when I go to work, she always gives me a kind word of encouragement, and a blessing with her parting kiss; and when I go home she is sure to meet me with a smile and a kiss of welcome; and then tea is sure to be ready; and as we chat in the evening, I find she has been doing so many little things through the day to please me, that I cannot find it in my heart to say an unkind word or give an unkind look to anybody."

And Franklin adds:

"What an influence, then, hath women over the heart of man, to soften it, and make it the fountain of cheerful and pure emotions. Speak gently, then; a happy smile and a kind word of greeting after the toils of the day are over, cost nothing, and go far toward making a home happy and peaceful."

HOME AND FARM.

Don't fail to do all the plowing that is possible whenever there is suitable weather.

If you have little feed, keep your stock in warm quarters, and one-third less will serve them.

Give your cows warm, comfortable stables, and plenty of good feed and pure water. A quart each of meal and bran, morning and night, in addition to other food, will more than pay for itself in an increase of milk.

Increase the products while lessening the expense. This is now the great desideratum in farming, and just as that line is reached is any success worthy of the name attained.

Leaks in the barns, stables or houses are expensive. They cause discomfort, and decay in one, and damage of stored crops in the other. A few shingles and nails will save many times their cost. Stop the leaks now.

It has been estimated that on every large farm in the Southern [illegible] [illegible] individual.

HIGHEST HONORS

AT THE

UNITED STATES

CENTENNIAL

World's Exhibition, 1876.

MASON & HAMLIN'S

Cabinet Organs,

Unanimously Assigned the

"FIRST RANK

IN THE

SEVERAL REQUISITES'

Of such Instruments.

The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the First Rank in the several requisites of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the only instruments of this general class awarded this rank. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as it is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition, so that it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The difference in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the reports of the Judges, from which the following is an extract:

"The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company's exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums show instruments of the First Rank in the several requisites of Instruments of the Class, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."—Signed by all the Judges. The Mason & Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the only ones assigned this rank. The triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and

FIRST MEDALS

PARIS, 1867; VIENNA, 1873; SANTIAGO, 1875;

PHILADELPHIA, 1876,

and have thus been awarded highest honors at

Every World's Exposition

at which they have been exhibited, being the ONLY AMERICAN ORGANS which have ever obtained at any competition with best European makers, or in any European World's Exposition.

New styles with improvements, exhibited at the Centennial; elegant new cases in great variety. Prices very lowest consistent with best material and workmanship. Organs sold for cash or installments, or rented until rent pays. Every Organ warranted to give entire satisfaction to every reasonable purchaser or the money returned. DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 13, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

JNO. P. BENTLY,
Chief of Public Debt Division, 1st Auditor's office, Treasury Dep't Washington, D. C.

National Hotel, Washington, Dec. 2, '74.
Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

GENTS.—I very cheerfully state that I have used Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, prepared by you, with decided benefit, and although yet somewhat troubled with rheumatism, I am in much better condition than I was some months ago, which improvement I alone attribute to this remedy.

Yours, truly, ALEX. H. STEPHENS,

For us to style these books the model series, would be to reiterate the sentiments of many of our educators who rank among the highest in their profession.

The Readers for gradation and general instruction are second to none.

The Arithmetics are compiled from actual business transactions, finely printed, and elaborately illustrated.

The Grammars are all that the exacting can desire in this particular branch of study heretofore so dry and uninteresting to the young.

The Spellers full and complete, arranged according to the principles of orthœpy, grammar, and a new system of definitions.

Our Geographies, the Advanced now ready, and the Primary in press, have cost months of hard labor by the most experienced professors in this particular branch of education. The Child's Book of Nature, on Plants, Animals, Air, Water, Heat, Light, etc., is so arranged that it is instructive and attractive to all.

Copies for examination with a view to introduction sent to teachers and school officers on receipt of half the retail prices.

Catalogue of School and College Text-Books mailed free to any teacher or school officer on application.

parishes for parish purposes. Taxation for all State purposes, including schools, is now limited by constitutional amendments to fourteen and a half mills, and by law of the State the rate of parish taxation can in no case exceed the rate of State taxation. Constitutional amendments limit the expenditures of the State government to the actual revenues received and render null and void all warrants issued in excess of revenue. The rate of taxation in the city of New Orleans at the commencement of my term of office was: State, including schools, twenty-one and one-half mills; city, thirty mills; total, fifty one and one-half mills. The rate of taxation in the city of New Orleans for the present year is: State, including schools, fourteen and one-half mills; city, fifteen mills; total, twenty-nine and one-half mills. Constitutional amendments limit the city debt to the highest amount attained previous to the passage of these amendments, and prohibit under severest penalties the issuance of any warrant or evidence of indebtedness except against money actually in the treasury. The total expenditures of the preceding State administration for the support of government from 1869 to 1872 inclusive, were $11,622,005. The total expenditures for the support of government during the four years of my administration have been $4,200,825, a saving of $7,412,180. The Legislature of 1865-6-7, composed exclusively of opponents of the Republican party, appropriated $17,150,554, an excess of appropriation over revenue for those years of $13,750,554.

During the past summer our new consols were admitted upon the New York Stock Exchange and are now quoted [illegible] other unquestioned bonds in the markets of this country and Europe. As the nature of these bonds and the guarantees by which they are surrounded become more widely known they cannot fail to appreciate in value. The interest on all bonds funded up to date has been promptly met at maturity. Payment of the interest falling due January 1, 1877, [illegible]

It is a matter of history that the [illegible] have been lowered and limited were carried into effect by the Republican party with the aid of many Conservative business men of the community, against the united efforts of the political party opposed to the present State administration. The justice and necessity of these provisions are now, I believe, admitted by all, and their validity is unquestioned. I regret to note that at the recent election other constitutional amendments reducing the salaries of officials, limiting the expenses of the General Assembly and abolishing superfluous offices have been defeated by votes [illegible] with that organization which manifests most clearly a desire to advance the general welfare.

The assumption that the Southern States cannot prosper under governments [illegible] in strict accordance with the requirements of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States, is disproved by the [illegible] logic of facts. The [illegible] rolls of the different parishes of the State for the year 1876, filed in the office of the State Auditor, give statistics of the agricultural productions of the year. From [illegible] of the parishes complete returns [illegible]. It is fair to assume [illegible] thousand barrels of molasses, and two hundred and seventy thousand barrels of rice, with more than sufficient corn to supply all home demands. These statistics do not include cypress lumber, [illegible] and other natural products, nor do they include many other items which go largely to make up the agricultural wealth of the State, as for instance oranges and other fruits, tobacco, one variety of which is cultivated to a considerable extent in some of the parishes, oats and other cereals which in the hilly districts are successfully raised, and meat cattle and vegetables, [illegible] of which the State is almost self-supporting. All these considered, it is safe to say that the value of the products of the State during the present year will range from fifty-five to sixty millions of dollars. By whom have these results been produced? Not to any appreciable extent by white labor. It is one of the lamentable legacies of slavery that by a large class of the white population the cultivation of the soil is regarded as a badge of degradation. The cotton, sugar and rice, which maintain the commerce of New Orleans and afford support to the great bulk of the population of our chief city are the products of free colored labor.

The fact is indisputable that the agricultural districts of the State are rapidly gaining in prosperity, while the city of New Orleans, the chief centre of turbulence and political discord, is daily declining in wealth. Our cotton crop is equal to that of the most prosperous years before the war, the sugar crops have largely increased; the rice crops have nearly trebled within the last few years. No country in the world, no State in the Union with similar advantages of salubrious climate, offers equal inducements to immigration. The rich sugar lands on the Teche and elsewhere yield one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars per acre and are taxed upon low assessments not [illegible]

[illegible] trolling few who terrorise over the Conservative sentiment of the community, Louisiana would offer an unequaled field for the unemployed capital and the ill-paid labor of other communities. In no other State in the Union is the capitalist so fully insured against excessive taxation as in this State under the recently adopted constitutional amendments. In no other State can equal returns be obtained for an equal amount of capital invested in agricultural pursuits.

It would be gratifying to me if, in reviewing the events of my four years' term of office, I could point to rail roads built, steamship lines established, telegraphic communication extended, fertile lands reclaimed from overflow, natural resources developed, and above all, harmony and good feeling established on a firm basis between the two races by the honest acquiescence [illegible] settlement. I do not think these results are far distant, but it would be encouraging to note more rapid progress in each direction. In some parishes of the State, notably those which are most prosperous and peaceful and strongly Republican, kindly relations exist between whites and blacks. The colored people have become, to a large extent, either the owners of the lands they cultivate or jointly interested with their white employers in the products of their labor. This of itself establishes a community of interest and of sentiment between the two classes. It was one of the recommendations earnestly urged in the first message I had the honor to address to the Legislature of Louisiana, that the laborers should be given every opportunity to acquire capital by fair means, that they should be guarded from imposition, and encouraged to invest their earnings in some permanent form, thus becoming capitalists in interest, and by consequence capitalists in sentiment, and, above all, that they should be protected in the exercise of the ballot, the guarantee and safeguard of their rights. In this way, it seemed to me, antagonism between labor and capital would be avoided and harmony would be established between the races. Wherever this policy has been carried out, peace [illegible] ed in every respect with the past history of their section, [illegible] frankly accepted the [illegible] war, were elected to [illegible] Republican or Independent tickets. The hangings, whippings, maltreatment and murders [illegible] other portions of the State to influence political results [illegible] ted to be not only [illegible] civilization and humanity but political blunders, [illegible] their own correction through the election laws of the [illegible] them to slavery.

In the communication I have had the honor to lay before the General Assembly heretofore, I have scarcely alluded to political questions. There has been much in our political history during this time [illegible] but I have preferred to confine my recommendations chiefly to measures calculated to advance the material interests of the State, trusting that time and returning prosperity would soften asperities and harmoniously adjust the changed relations of capital and labor, and the political status of the [illegible] who refused to charge the grand jury in relation to the murders then committed, has ever since been biennially re-elected to the same office by the majority of the voters of the city of New Orleans.

In the spring of 1868 the interposition of military power under the direction of Congress enabled the colored people to exercise their newly-conferred right of suffrage, and to elect a Republican State government. Whatever may be the errors or shortcomings justly chargeable against that administration (which entered upon its duties under circumstances of great difficulty), it is a matter of record that no disposition was shown to wait and judge it fairly by its acts, or to accord to it moral support in any effort for the general welfare. It was at once denounced as a usurpation thrust upon the people by federal bayonets, and the young men of the State were invited by public resolution to form themselves into clubs and arm for its overthrow. A few months later in that same year the candidate of the national Democratic party for the Vice Presidency of the United States declared the constitutional amendments void and the reconstruction acts a nulity, and called upon the President to use the army of the United States to suppress the usurping Southern governments established under those enactments. As a natural consequence of this declaration and of the scenes of violence which followed, scarcely more than five thousand out of the forty-eight thousand colored men in Louisiana who had voted in the spring for a Republican Governor were permitted to cast their votes in the fall for a Republican President. These are matters of notoriety. It is not necessary to trace in detail the subsequent history of colored suffrage in this State, through the Fusion frauds of 1872, the massacres of Colfax and Coushatta, the White League riots of September, 1874, and the later outrages attending the last election, which have shocked the moral sense of the whole country. Viewed separately or together, these crimes disclose one motive; their accomplishment has tended to procure one end. Their perpetrators are shielded by public sentiment; their defenders are rewarded by election to public office in communities where hostility to Republican principles predominates.

It is a painful fact in the history of the State that when a number of white citizens were arrested, tried and convicted before a jury in the United States Circuit Court of the murder of more than a hundred surrendered, defenceless colored men at Colfax court-house, the most influential residents of New Orleans formed associations for their relief. The entertainments given for the benefit of the so-called "Grant parish sufferers" were the most popular of the season. No terms of opprobrium were found too strong for the United States Circuit judge who, acting under a strict sense of duty, held that the proceedings taken under the reconstruction acts of Congress against these accused persons were legal and valid, and no praise too extravagant to be bestowed upon the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, who, acting, it is to be presumed, under an equally strict sense of duty, declared those proceedings unconstitutional and void. The Grant parish massacre is still regarded as a justifiable assertion of white supremacy.

It is argued with apparent plausibility that the disorders admitted to prevail in some of the Southern States are the result of the inefficiency of the Republican State authorities and their inability to enforce the laws and bring the guilty parties to justice. In August last the executive of this State officially directed the attention of the State Central Committee of the opposing party to the organized violence exercised in certain parishes of the State toward prominent Republicans. The Chairman of that Committee replied that the parishes named were presided over by Republican officials, whose duty it was to bring evil-doers to justice under the State laws, and that if there was any truth in these charges it was conclusive proof that the Republican party was responsible for the disorders which had occurred in this State. Similar arguments are continually repeated. It is pointed out that in Georgia and Alabama and other Southern States, which have been "redeemed," as it is called, from Republican rule, peace prevails and political murders are comparatively unknown. The very statement of this proposition carries with it confession of guilt. It discloses the fact that the disorders in the South are created by the opponents of Republicanism for the purpose of obtaining control of the government, and that until they obtain possession of the offices, whether they have such a majority of the legal voters as would justly entitle them to those offices or not, political turmoil will continue.

The first case of successful prosecution for political crime has yet to occur in Louisiana. Instances are unhappily not wanting where bold efforts made to enforce the laws have been promptly followed by the assassination of judges, prosecuting officers and sheriffs. It may here be recalled that during the local election for State officers and Congressmen in 1874, the State Central Committee of the opposition passed a formal resolution pledging their influence to secure a discontinuance of political violence throughout the State upon certain conditions, which being complied with, open acts of violence against Republicans almost immediately ceased. No local tribunals can prevent or punish political offenses whilst the controlling public sentiment amongst the more influential citizens sanctions or at least connives at those disorders. There seems to me but three ways by which peace can be maintained and the laws of the State and of the United States can be enforced in Louisiana against political offenders.

1. The surrender of the State government to the minority who controlled its destines before the emancipation of the slaves.

2. The acceptance by that minority in good faith of the constitutional amendments which express the issues decided by the war.

3. The enactment by Congress of such appropriate and valid legislation as will secure the enforcement of those amendments against organized, insidious and deep seated hostility.

The first of these plans I believe would be subversive of freedom and of the principles upon which a republican form of government is based. I shall be unfeignedly glad if I am called upon to welcome as my successor in office one whose fidelity to the principles on which, in my opinion, the future peace and prosperity of the community depend, has been abundantly proved, and whose tried integrity and experience in the public service entitle him to full confidence. I will ask you to accord to him earnest support in maintaining the laws and advancing the material interests of the State and in securing and protecting the humblest citizens in the rights guaranteed to him by the constitution of the country.

WM. P. KELLOGG, Governor.

Snatched as a Brand from the Burning.

In one of the Tabernacle meetings in Chicago, Mr. Moody referred to the letter he had received near the commencement of these meetings from a broken-hearted father and mother in Scotland, begging him to look out for their lost son, who had been a wanderer for years, during which no word had reached them to say whether he was dead or alive. They thought perhaps he might have come over to America, and asked that Mr. Moody would read the letter publicly at every place where he held meetings, so that their lost Willie might know that nothing but love awaited him if he would come home. This letter was read at the tabernacle and at Farwell hall, and Mr. Sawyer was directed to watch for him in the inebriate's meeting, for that was the class among which he was only too certain to be found, if ever found at all.

Last Friday a poor fellow, homeless and helpless, presented himself among the inquirers at the reformed men's meeting, at the inquiry-room at the tabernacle, whose Scotch accent led Mr. Sawyer to ask his name. He replied, Willie ——. "Oh, you are the very man we have been looking for," said Bro. Sawyer. "Looking for me; how is that?" "There's a letter for you from your father and mother." At this announcement the poor young man almost fainted with surprise and joy. He thought he was a castaway, and had no thought that any of his friends would ever own him again. He had sinned against them so much, and fallen so low; but the love of his father and mother, like the love of the Savior, had outlived all his abuse of it, and the wanderer was not only found for his parents in Scotland, but also for his Father and Savior in heaven. "He is here today," said Mr. Moody, "and I want he should speak a few words."

With such a sad history for an introduction, no wonder the great audience listened with open ears and gentle hearts, while the lost-one-found, a slight, florid, Scotch laddie, of perhaps thirty years of age, gave the following account of himself: Twenty years ago I was a happy boy, starting out from my home in Scotland to a school in a distant city. My father thought to make me a doctor, but my mother hoped I would be a minister. At school I fell in with evil companions, and, as the result, my life has been one long day of debauchery, the memory of which has lashed me with a whip of scorpions. When I was twenty years old I went away to Australia, and rushed through that country as a gold-seeker. Then, growing homesick, I came to Europe, and landed in Amsterdam. My father came to meet me, and after a while secured me a responsible position in a dry-goods house. I married one of the sweetest little women that ever drew the breath of life, the daughter of a minister [illegible] years she died of a broken heart on my account, and when I shut down the big black coffin-lid over her white face, I felt as if my last hope was gone. We had one daughter, and when I took the little child in my arms and bade her good-by, to go out and wander over the face of the earth, she gave me a hug as of iron, her tears burnt into me, and she said, "Papa, will you be long away?" From that time I roamed the wide world over, miserable, hungry, naked—a blot on the face of the earth. When I first came to Chicago, I tried for a while to do better—obtained a situation in a house which sent me out to travel; but with plenty of money I went back to my cups again; lost my situation, lost my friends, lost all. Then I missed my mother.

On Friday last I came to this hall, and went into the inquiry-room after the meeting was over. Mr. Sawyer asked me my name, and said he had been looking for me for six weeks; told me there was a letter for me from my father and mother. Then they prayed for me. Man could not save me, but I bowed at the foot of the cross, and asked the mercy of Him who died on it for me, and He saved me. And now I would rather live on crusts of bread, moistened only with my sincere tears, than go back to the life of sin from which I have been saved.

The vast congregation could not restrain its tears. Thousands were weeping and sobbing. And when Mr. Moody, with his voice full of sobs and cries, poured out a prayer to God to bless this lost one now found, and make him a preacher of righteousness, as his godly mother had designed, the scene was beyond description for tenderness and emotion.

The Pastor.

It is one of the essential conditions of the true minister of Jesus that he be Christ-like in heart and life. No man may consider himself fully qualified to go forth and save souls until he can bear testimony that Jesus is his Savior. When our Savior was on earth he was the constant friend and companion of men, even of sinners—gentiles. He came down to the lowest place of our poor humanity and laid his throbbing heart against the heart of the world. He wept with those that wept, and mourned with them that mourned. Every cry of distress or shriek of mortal woe echoed in His breast. He was touched with all the "feelings of man's infirmities." Herein was Jesus seen to be the brother of every man. Now whenever in His Providence he calls an individual to go forth as a herald of the gospel, it is not to do a sort of professional work—to run a round of duties in a mechanical way—receive a certain sum of money, and fill up a certain number of days or hours in a certain kind of prescribed work, but to have the spirit of Christ, and to do the work of Christ—to be pastors, overseers, as well as teachers, of the flock.

We live in a remarkable age—an age of unparalleled enterprise and thrift. The heart of the great nation seems to be stirred to its depths. Every thing is now done on a gigantic scale. Here is some danger to be shunned. We are inclined to carry this spirit into the church, and here, too, we are trying to do things on the same large scale. All this will do providing our efforts are such as will be calculated to promote the glory of God. We like large churches and corresponding congregations—large collections for Bible, missions, poor and other worthy objects. But large churches simply for the sake of out-doing somebody else—large congregations attracted to hear mere human utterances only—these will not save this world. Better not be large. Better be "little and unknown—prised and loved of God alone."

This age is remarkable for its production of large and stately church edifices all over the country. It may be there is a Providence in this, and [illegible] God will come down and fill them with his glory—[illegible].

But just here is a point of danger—let it be guarded. Every young man of talent must know that good [illegible] as a preacher just now command a premium. The rage is for [illegible] churches—great and respectable congregations. And rich churches in all denominations are on the qui vive to find men of mark. The question too often is—Can he preach [illegible]? This is the main point [illegible] must be filled, the people [illegible] drawn and held. Here [illegible] placed before the young minister. He is inclined to [illegible] preacher rather than a pastor. [illegible] is wanted, and if he can [illegible] and hold large congregations, that will do—those who can do this [illegible] almost anywhere. [illegible] is important. No one [illegible]—no man can preach too well. But never was there a greater demand for pastors of the flock. The inducements held out by our elegant churches and congregations afford a sufficient stimulus to ambitious young men to make effective preachers of themselves, but on the other hand the details of the pastor's work often drag heavily and are consequently neglected. Love of applause may stimulate the preacher, love of Christ and souls alone can make the pastor. Which motive is most worthy?

There exists among preachers of [illegible] the opinion that fine preaching [illegible] and active pastoral labors are incompatible; that a man must be either preacher or pastor, that he cannot be both. This may be true if preaching be defined by simply the [illegible] preparations of elaborate discourses, addressed rather to the intellect than to the heart, learned [illegible] requiring vast learning [illegible]—but if by preaching [illegible] explaining and enforcing [illegible] God, practical talk on [illegible] brought down within [illegible] of the average intellect, [illegible] nature, ex[illegible]—yet all [illegible] intelligent good [illegible] to be both a good teacher of mind and a good shepherd of souls. And every young man who may chance to run over this brief article, should make his idea of the perfect preacher include that of the perfect pastor.

Bishop Wiley and his Friends.

The removal of Bishop Wiley from Boston to Cincinnati has been the occasion of two very pleasant incidents.

The Boston Preachers' Meeting, through a committee of which Dr. Mallalien was chairman, Dec. 9, sent to Bishop Wiley a farewell note in which is said:

Your residence among us was a source of unusual pleasure and profit; and your departure from us at a period when acquaintance was ripening into high regard and Christian affection, and when our churches were coming to prize the services you were able, or disposed, to render our smaller as well as more important interests, is occasion of sincere regret. We had hoped you might long abide among us, affording us the pleasure of your society and of that of your family, and the advantage of your counsel. But it was to be otherwise.

While we cheerfully acquiesce in the new arrangement as the order of Providence, and therefore best, we can but feel sad that your impaired health should be the cause of it, and we beg to assure you of our sympathy in the affliction, and of an interest in our prayers that the great Head of the Church will restore you to entire soundness, and afford you many more years of usefulness in His cause.

While your residence may remain at a distance, we are pleased to know that your official connection continues as heretofore with the whole Church. Our Methodism is one. Its common banner, borne by our chief officers, floats over the whole country. Our Bishops are general superintendents; they all belong to us all.

As one of that noble body of chief pastors to whom are committed so grave and extensive interests, we may hope occasionally to see you on your rounds of duty, in New England, and you may be assured that the delightful associations of the past will ever cause your coming to be hailed with delight.

On Thursday evening, Dec. 28, a formal reception was tendered Bishop Wiley by the ministry of Cincinnati. The pleasant meeting occured in the Wesleyn College. Dr. Walden presided and Dr. Nast made the opening prayer. Rev. Wm Young made an appropriate address of welcome.

The Western says: Bishop Wiley responded to this address in a simple, earnest style. He spoke of the embarrassment which a formal welcome of this kind caused him to feel where he felt himself at home. He expressed his joy at being privileged to return to Cincinnati, and lauded its people for the generous, openhearted, open-handed manner in which they received frank and upright strangers who came among them. He would not reflect upon the people whom he had last lived among. In all his wanderings he had never found a warmer-hearted people in a colder climate, but Cincinnati had attractions which no other place had. He reminded the brethren that, though he was a resident Bishop of Cincinnati, he was nevertheless a wanderer on the face of the earth. Bishop Soule said, when declared elected after the counting of the ballots in the General Conference: "Now my wife is a widow and my children orphans." He would ever be with them in sympathy, however. Though his work should call him to the Gulf, to the far East, or even across the ocean, he would still be resident Bishop of Cincinnati. In concluding he asked a blessing on the work and all assembled.

Half an hour was consumed in shaking hands with the Bishop, after which an adjournment was had to supper rooms. All in all, it was a thoroughly enjoyable affair. The brethren and sisters of the Churches mingled cordially together without regard to nationality or race. Bishop Wiley has a warm place in the hearts of the Methodists of this vicinity.

The Year that is Past.

How rapidly we are making history! The events of a single year in the Nineteenth Century are such as to astonish us, both by their numbers and importance.

We clip the following from the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, as a good statement of some of the wonderful events of the year that is past:

Can we do better than to start with our Centennial, and the matchless exposition that crowned it! These must stand out prominent in any history that records the national transactions of the year 1876. The fact that the Republic has stood for a hundred years, the most active and testing century to human institutions that has ever proved the works of man, and that, too, amid abundant prophecies of speedy failure, and the most gigantic efforts at overthrow, is one that must modify the judgments of man touching the stability of popular governments. And the immense progress shown to have been made in all that goes to make a nation great, in comparison with [illegible] governments of an opposite [illegible] to the growth and development of human society. The friendly pressure of all nations [illegible] development of opinions favorable to the greater freedom of individual action, and bespeaks a growing feeling of brotherhood among the peoples. Years to come will garner up the results.

That which suggests itself as next in order in the political [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] clearer than has ever [illegible] before.

In our own political affairs another significant and important fact must be regarded, the late passage through the lower house of Congress of the Silver Bill. Whether it shall become a law or not, its importance cannot be overlooked. It shows the direction of public thought, and indicates a method of relief from the burdens of our oppressive debt. If that relief can be afforded without infringing upon the national faith, all will hail with gladness the method proposed by Mr. Bland, even though it add much to the wealth of the holders of silver stocks. We confess we have never been able to see the wisdom of demonetizing a metal recognized by the constitution as a standard of value. Should silver be restored to the throne it occupied, in company with gold, by the action of our government, we may expect marked results arising from it in the business of the world.

[illegible] It indicates such a development of our industrial enterprises as bids fair to make us the most independent among the nations of the earth.

[illegible]

The burning of the Brooklyn Theater has taken its place in history as one of the saddest on record.

It had been a year of deep interest in the religious world. In the progress of Christianity its enemies have not been slow to predict its failure, and speedy departure. No year has been more fruitful in such prophecies than the present. With the advancement of science there has come in an overbearing materialism that has asserted its superiority over all spiritual truths, and indeed, [illegible] if not denied, their existence. Christianity has to do with the spiritualities of the world, primarily, and if there be no such truths, it must be dismissed. We have no place for it.

But in the midst of these ill prophecies, how God has vindicated his cause, in the conversion of thousands. The result of the evangelist labors of Moody and Sankey at New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, have been an ampler refutation of objections to the supernatural, than all the logic of the learned. The wicked turning from his wickedness and following virtue, the profane exchanging his profanity for prayer, are arguments that make their way in spite of all opposition.

These illustrations of Gospel power have been the most prominent, but in thousands of quiet churches all over the land, the triumphs of saving grace have been multiplied, and thousands have been born into the kingdom of God. It has been a year of "refreshing from the presence of the Lord." The clouds still cover the sky, and the rain is falling yet. The windows of heaven are waiting to be opened that the floods may descend.

Space forbids looking abroad, and we must stop.

Inauguration Day.

Monday, the 8th, was inauguration day. Hon. S. B. Packard and Hon. C. C. Antoine were inaugurated Governor and Lieutenant Governor in the State House. The Hall of Representatives, where the ceremonies took place, was crowded, and the ceremonies were impressive and solemn.

Gen. Nicholls and Hon. L. A. Wiltz were inaugurated by the Democrats in front of St. Patrick's Hall. The crowd was large and enthusiastic. There were no disturbances during the day. Both Packard and Nicholls are gentlemen against whom personally nothing can be said. Either one, under favorable circumstances, would make an excellent Governor. Gov. Packard is in full possession of the archives of the State, is sustained by a legal quorum of both houses of the Legislature, as determined by the Returning Board, the legally constituted tribunal of the State to pass upon the election returns; is recognized as the legal Governor by the United States authorities, and should his city and State police be unable to enforce his authority it is understood that United States troops are at his command. On the other hand his opponents claim that the Returning Board count is wrong, and that General Nicholls was fairly elected. General Nicholls has the sympathy and support of the largest portion of the white people of the State, who pledge him money to carry on his government, and, if necessary, military force to sustain his authority.

The issue centers directly on the action of the Returning Board. That Board, under the law, has judicial as well as ministerial powers. Its existence is claimed to be just on the principle that intimidation and violence may be defeated by making it fruitless. The late election was quiet throughout the State except in the five parishes, Ouachita, Morehouse, East and West Feliciana and East Baton Rouge. In these there was sufficient violence and intimidation, in the judgment of the Returning Board, to require throwing out most of the polls. The question whether or not the evidence justified this action is the point now being investigated by the two Congressional Committees in session in this city. Their reports are looked for with great interest.

The Jetties.

Gen. Comstock, United States Engineer, has given Capt. Eads a certificate to the effect that, through the jetties, there is an outlet to sea at South Pass, 20 feet deep and 200 feet wide; and the Captain is now in Washington to receive his first payment of half million dollars from the U. S. Treasury. The bar at the head of the Passes is rapidly being removed. The depth there will soon be 24 feet, and as soon as the river rises, the Jetties will be thrown open to the commerce of the world.

Strangely enough in this undertaking, Capt. Eads has met with much opposition and adverse criticism. The success of the Jetties will conflict with many interests between this city and the Gulf, such as dredging, towing and piloting; and there were others who had theories of their own they hoped to get the government to adopt for deepening the channel, or for the construction of canals of various descriptions. But Captain Eads is accustomed to such opposition. He met it in the construction of gun-boats during the war, and of the St. Louis bridge since, and in those cases as in this, he quietly pressed his work forward to complete and triumphant success. All honor to the man who, commencing life as a poor boy, has by his own exertions attained a rank as an engineer second to none other in any land!

Before commencing the improvement at South Pass he expressed his confidence that the jetty system would be equally applicable in deepening and straightening the river above. The great Mississippi valley will now be ready to hear further from him on that subject.

A correspondent, (T. F. Parker,) in the New York Advocate estimates that $118,555,997.36, are spent a year, in the United States for tobacco, snuff and cigars. As the majority of church members are adults, Mr. Parker estimates that over nineteen millions of the expense is incurred by Protestant Christians, and nearly four millions by Methodists.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

Mrs. Daniel Webster still lives in New York city. She is 83.

Hon. Robert Toombs of Georgia has joined the Southern Methodist Church.

Bishop Foster is receiving the heartiest welcomes by Boston Methodists.

Bishop Marvin, of the M. E. Church South, has reached Japan, and reports the missionaries of his church in good health. He sailed for China Dec. 6, and was in good health.

M. E. CHURCH.

Our First German Church in this city has decided to build a parsonage. Bro. Braun, the new pastor, has already captured the hearts of his people and is exerting an extended influence.

Mt. Zion M. E. Church, New Orleans, at its last quarterly Conference passed complimentary resolutions concerning their pastor, Rev. J. Hayward, who has closed his three years pastorate in that church. The resolutions speak highly of him and commend him to whatever church he may be appointed.

Rev. Anthony Ross is one of the oldest and most effective ministers of the Louisiana Conference. Three years ago he was stationed by Bishop Janes to what was called the Perdido Street Mission. The Board of Church Extension owned the ground and gave its use to the Mission. Bro. Ross now closes his three years pastorate, begun without a member and no building, with a good congregation worshipping in the basement of an $8000 church, all finished outside. Over $3800 have been raised and expended.

The Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Foochow Methodist Episcopal Mission was held in Foochow, from October 25 to November 1, 1876, inclusive. Several were admitted to full connection, and a fine class of ten was received on trial, seven of whom are to attend the theological school for their preparatory training. Six students from the theological institution, having completed their term of three years, were put into the itinerant work. There has been a slight falling off in numbers during the year, but the work has not retrograded. The statistics are as follows: Members, 1,254; last year, 1,227, increase, 27; probationers, 536; last year, 651, decrease, 115; baptisms, children, 491; last year, 436, increase, 55; total, 2,281; last year, 2,314, decrease, 33. A telegram of December 31, from Chicago, says:

"In the Tabernacle this afternoon, Mr. Moody read a telegram from Major Whittle, who is now at Ashtabula, endeavoring if possible to identify and collect the remains of P. P. Bliss and wife. The dispatch states that so horribly mutilated and disfigured are the bodies of the dead that up to this time he has been unable to discover a single clue that would lead to their identification. There were nearly 13,000 people in the Tabernacle when the dispatch was read, and from one end of the building to the other the people sobbed and prayed aloud. It was one of the saddest scenes ever witnessed by the eye of man. Mr. Moody stepped forward with tears in his eyes, and read the text, 'Be ye also prepared,' etc., but he could go no farther; his voice was choked with grief, and he was compelled to take his seat. Mr. Sankey tried to sing in vain. Again and again he broke down. All were praying and weeping. Young and old alike were stricken with grief. The doors were thrown open earlier than usual, and the vast audience moved out, it being found utterly impossible to go on with the regular exercise."

Christ Saving Fallen Women.

One of the marked results of the great revival under Mr. Moody in Chicago and the Northwest, has been the interest awakened for the salvation of fallen women. A special meeting was held for them in the [illegible]. About 7000 people were present, and in the crowd were hundreds who had come from their homes of vice. The meeting was one of power. We quote a part of Mr. Moody's sermon:

There is one thing I want you to notice. We haven't got the name of any of these three fallen women that Jesus saved. People sometimes call societies for the reform of fallen women Magdalen Asylums but there isn't a word in the Bible against the character of Mary Magdalen in this respect. It is true, she had seven devils cast out of her; she might have been a maniac, but I don't think she was a fallen woman. If she had been I don't think we should ever have known her name. Christ will not tell their names; those lost women whom He saved may have a place in heaven without any one knowing of their former sin and shame.

The next is a careless woman, as perfectly indifferent when she meets the Savior as any woman here tonight, who has come to the tabernacle merely out of curiosity. Mr. Moody then related the scene of Christ talking with the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well, concluding with the remark, "Just see what that [illegible] woman has done! She [illegible] on the Messiah herself, and [illegible] a whole town to accept Him. The Son of God is not [illegible] to talk with this fallen woman, and the result of it is that she and [illegible] others are saved.

Forty-six years have intervened since the last lesson. They were years of derangement and uncertainty in the kingdom of Israel, and of increasing stability in the kingdom of Judah.

The prophecy of evil hung over Israel on account of the calf-worship, which Jeroboam had set up (14: 7-16), and the covenant of the Lord with David, that his mercy should not depart from his successor as it had from Saul, still guarded the kingdom of Judah.

OMRI.—(23-28). The recorded acts of Omri are very few. One of them was to change the capital from Tirzah to Samaria. In the "six years" he reigned in the former place, it was evident that the four years of war must be included; or, his whole reign would have been sixteen years instead of twelve. Samaria, the place chosen in its stead, was remarkable both for strength and beauty of situation. It is situated on a hill with steep but accessible sides, and has a level top, from which one can behold the sea, the plain of Sharon and the vale of Shechem. For this hill, Omri paid two talents of silver, or a little over $3,000. Samaria was the centre of idolatry in Israel, and was often sentenced by the prophets.

Wrought evil.—Omri introduced another dynasty but not another course of action. The new helsman kept the ship of state on the same old course. He learned no lesson from his predecessors. Micah 6: 16, gives a clue to that which he did that was worse than anything done by his predecessors.

With their Vanities.—Vanities was an admirable word to apply to idols. It was vain to worship them; vain to reverence them, and vain to trust in them.

Slept with his Fathers.—[illegible] John 5 [illegible] was his idolatry [illegible] story of his idolatry [illegible] two centuries. [illegible] was a worthy [illegible] and Omri. Ahab [illegible] rather than an [illegible] prominent for wickedness and defiance of Jehovah. She was to him [illegible] energy and power. As if it had been a light thing. Was it a light thing to walk in the ways of Jeroboam, that he must add to it by marrying a daughter of Baal? Baal was their chief deity. Innocent children were frequently offered to Baal as sacrifice. [illegible] priests danced (or in the [illegible] expression of the original, limped) about the altar, and, when their prayers were not heard, cut themselves with knives.

Jezebel was the daughter of the high priest Baal. Worthy daughter of her infamous sire [illegible]. The chapter closes with the chronicle of the fulfillment of the remarkable prophecy concerning him who should rebuild Jericho. Josh. 6:26. We are not told how it was fulfilled, but it was terribly done. It affords a striking testimony to the power of God, whose worship had been set aside, that his curse was ratified in its most [illegible] that he showed [illegible] on the walls of the [illegible] Bel-[illegible]

President Grant's name is mentioned in connection with the next Senatorship of Illinois. But he says respecting it, that he could not be Senator from Illinois for three good reasons. First, he does not consider that he had resided in the State continuously enough during the past twenty years to properly represent its interests; second, he had been a servant of the public for the past sixteen years, and on the 4th of March next, proposed to see how it would seem to be a sovereign; and third, he was earnestly in favor of the re-election of General Logan.

PUBLISHER'S ANNOUNCEMENT, 1877.

The last General Conference made the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE an official weekly Church paper, and directed that we should publish it. We found it better to leave the paper under the former management during the remainder of 1876. Beginning with January 1, 1877, we assume the entire management of the paper. Subscribers whose subscription have not expired, and have paid, will receive the paper to the full amount of their subscription. All other subscriptions are considered out, January 1, 1877. All money due for subscriptions to January 1st [illegible] at once to the former publishers to meet unpaid bills.

In beginning the publication of the SOUTHWESTERN we ask, and shall expect, the most hearty co-operation of all the ministers within the patronizing territory. Without this co-operation the paper will fail. We propose that in proportion to its size the SOUTHWESTERN shall not be second to any paper in the Church. Our purpose will be to adapt in to the wants of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, and we hope that our ministers, not only in the South, but in the whole Church, who feel a special interest in our Southern work, will unite with us in making the paper a success financially.

We have adopted the cash system, and send papers only as paid for. This is better for all. We will gladly send specimen copies free to any who ask for them. If subscribers cannot pay for the whole year, let them pay for part, and the paper will be sent during the time paid for.

$2.00 will pay for the Southwestern one year, including postage. All ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents—to whom the paper will be sent for $1 a year.

YOUR PAPER FREE.

To any person sending us four subscribers and $8.00 we will send the SOUTHWESTERN one year. This offer holds good until April 1, 1877.

LITERARY NOTES.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

☞ We cheerfully devote space in each issue of the Southwestern to the announcement of the publication of such books and periodicals as publishers are pleased to send us, giving names, publishers and when given us, the price, and where for sale. Beyond this we promise nothing, but will give reviews, criticisms—favorable or unfavorable—as our space will allow and our judgment dictate.

WIDE AWAKE FOR JANUARY, 1877.—Christmas, in the superlative degree, pervades the holiday number of Wide Awake. Mrs. L. C. Whiton opens it with one of the loveliest of this year's Christmas poems. Opposite is the frontispiece, an engraving of Raphael's St. [illegible]. Edgar Fawcett and Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, [illegible] represented by holiday poems, "Children's Faces," and "About a Maiden." H. R. Hudson furnishes [illegible] tale, "Two Days Before Christmas." Margaret Eytinge's "What Happened to the Baby" is still funnier. But the "star" story is "Lill's Travels in Santa Claus Land." It is magnificently illustrated by Jessie [illegible] with scenes in Santa Claus Land, Santa Claus and his Reindeer appearing on one of the pages. Mrs. Handy of Richmond, Virginia, writes about "A Confederate Christmas Tree," while Wm. M. F. Round opens his "Child Marian Abroad" with Child Marian's jolly "Christmas on Shipboard." Sophie May's serial, "Quinnebasset Girls," opens well. "Good-for-nothing Polly," who is growing in character, is still the same good-for-nothing boy in his daily practice. The Little Folks all over the country are represented by the letters which they have sent with their dolls to the Dolls Fair, as Christmas gifts to the children in the hospitals.

A Very Sick Woman.

While calling at the office of a friend the other day, we were handed a letter from which we read the following: Friend Craddock—My best friend, for thus I must address you, as you have done me more good than any one on earth under God, and I believe I owe my life to you, and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you have done. It would take several sheets of paper to enumerate all my sufferings, so will only speak of the most important. For four years I had hemorrhages, beginning in February and lasting until fall; palpitation of the heart, soreness of the breast bone and short ribs, pain in the back and lower part of the abdomen, cold hands and feet even in August. constipation and headache. I had tried doctors, far and near, but all in vain. Some said I had consumption, others liver disease. I quit all doctors and wrote to you for help, and obtained it from your great "East India Hemp." I depend upon you alone for a perfect restoration to health, and feel that I shall not be disappointed. Please send two more bottles, with Pills and Ointment, which I think will do the work. Yours truly,

A. E. RICHARD.

Happy Influence of a great Specific.

For the preservation or recovery of health and strength, the diet should be wholesome and nutritious. When it happens that the alimentary processes are disturbed by improper or half masticated food, the best remedy for the evil results of abusing the digestive organs is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most agreeable, prompt and gentle remedy for dyspepsia, and for the bilious and evacuative irregularities which result from it. The liver and bowels, in common with the stomach, experience its beneficient influences. The refuse of the system is carried off through its natural outlet, a healthy flow and secretion of the bile is promoted, and a powerful impetus is given to assimilation in consequence of its use. It healthfully stimulates the bladder and kidneys when they are inactive, and by its tonic and regulating action fortifies the system against malaria. Jan1 4t

Cowardly Assaults.

When a candidate for high office is so well liked and so popular with the masses as to make his defeat difficult in a fair and honorable fight, mean and cowardly men are not wanting who delight in manufacturing lies and slandering his good name. There are also those whose selfishness prompt them to prostitute their honor, pervert truth, and ignore right, for the sake of injuring a competitor in business, whose prosperity they envy, and with whose business sagacity they have not the talent to successfully compete in an honorable way. These thoughts are suggested by the mean, cowardly attacks made upon me and my medicines, by those who imagine their pecuniary prospects injured by the great popularity which my standard medicines have acquired, and the continued growth of my professional practice. Narrow-minded practitioners of medicine, and manufacturers of preparations which do not possess sufficient merit to successfully compete for popular favor, have resorted to such cowardly strategy as to publish all sorts of ridiculous stories about the composition of my medicines. Almanacs, "Receipt Books," and other phamphlets, are issued and scattered broadcast over the land, wherein these contemptible knaves publish pretended analyses of my medicines, and receipts for making them. Some of these publications are given high sounding names, pretend to be issued by respectable men of education and position, for the good of the people—the more completely to blind the reader to their real object in their circulation, which is to injure the sale of my medicines. "The Popular Health Almanac" is the high-sounding name of one of these publications, which contains bogus receipts without a grain of truth in them. Not less devoid of truth are those which have been published by one Dr. L., of Detroit, in the Michigan Farmer, and by other manufactures of medicines, in several so-called journals of Pharmacy. They are all prompted by jealousy and utterly fail in accomplishing the object of their authors, for notwithstanding their free circulation, my medicines continue to sell more largely than any others manufactured in this country, and are constantly increasing in sale despite the base lies concocted and circulated by such knaves. The people find that these medicines possess genuine merit, accomplish what their manufacturer claims for them, and are not the vile, poisonous uestrums which jealous, narrow-minded physicians and sneaking compounders of competing medicines represent them to be. Among the large number of pretended analyses published, it is a significant fact that no two have been alike—conclusively proving the dishonesty of their authors. It is enough for the people to know that while thousands, yea, I may truthfully say millions, have taken my medicines and have been cured, no one has ever received injury from their use.

little by little night after night—gaining an hour's motion in about a fortnight, two hours' motion in a month, twelve hours' motion (or half the complete circuit) in half a year, until, finally, at the end of the year they have gained a complete circuit.

It is because of this steady, turning motion or rotation around the pole of the heavens, that the stars of the Dipper (say, for instance, the pointers) form as it were a clock in the sky, by which the astronomers at any rate, though also any one who is willing to give a little attention to the matter, can tell the hour within a few minutes on any night in the year.

A few observations made in this way on a few nights during the course of the year, will give a clearer idea of the steady motion of the star-dome (resulting in reality from the earth's steady rotation on her axis) than any amount of description either in books or by word of mouth.—Prof. R. A. Proctor in St. Nicholas.

Pray on My Plate Too.

A little bright-eyed three-year-old was seated in his high chair at the dinner table. Mamma had arranged the little uneasy, while for a moment his sprightliness and fun had made him the observed of all the family. She had placed him snugly up to the table, pinned on his bib, and succeeded in getting his little mischievous hands quiet, and making him "hush," when the father proceeded to ask the blessing. While this was in progress, our little chubby made a discovery. It was that all the plates on the table, except his own little plate, were in one pile at "papa's place," and, as it seemed to him, were put there to get the benefit of the solemn ceremony. So, scarcely waiting for the "amen," he held out his own plate in both hands saying, "Please, papa, pray on my plate, too." May this little fellow always be as eager to share the benefit of his father's [illegible].

HOUSE AND FARM.

Irish Potatoes.

The Peerless is one of the most valuable sorts. It yields enormously; it is one of the best varieties for a main or general crop: it thrives on a stiff soil, stands frost, and is good for general market purposes; plant from Jan 1, 15th of February in Lower Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas, and later in the northern portions of [illegible].

Jackson Whites—Another excellent variety. This potato stands frost and wet weather, and does best in a light soil. It is an excellent [illegible] potato. Plant from 1st of February to 1st of March, according to latitude.

Early Rose requires a light soil, and should be planted late, as it will not stand frost. It is equally valuable for market purposes as for private use. It is oval in form, shallow eyes, pink skin, flesh white, and cooks dry and mealy. It is one of the most popular varieties, and especially adapted to our Southern climate for home use, but does not sell as readily as the two others in the New Orleans market. Should be planted about the 15th of February [illegible] March.

In planting select Eastern potatoes for seed, secure them only from [illegible] dealers, as it is best to pay [illegible] more per barrel for [illegible] than to adopt a foolish [illegible] buying cheap seed that [illegible] 25 or 50 per [illegible] seed.—[illegible] Journal.

Cows' Milk.

The art of feeding cows so as to produce the greatest quantity and the best quality of milk, is neither understood nor practised generally. An experienced writer, who says that one good cow gives all the milk that is needed in a family of eight persons, and from which cow was made two hundred and sixty pounds of butter last year, gives the following as his treatment. He says: "if you desire to get a large yield of rich milk give your cow every day water slightly warm, slightly salted, in which bran has been stirred at the rate of one quart to two gallons of water. You will find if you have not tried this daily practice that your cow will give twenty-five per cent. more milk immediately under the effects of it, and she will become so attached to the diet as to refuse to drink clear water unless very thirsty; but this mess she will drink almost any time and ask for more. The amount of this drink necessary is an ordinary [illegible] time, morning, [illegible] Farmer.

CENTENNIAL

MASON & HAMLIN'S

Cabinet Organs,

Unanimously Assigned the

"FIRST RANK

IN THE

SEVERAL REQUISITES'

Of such Instruments.

The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the First Rank in the several requisites of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the only instruments of this general class awarded this rank. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as it is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition, so that it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The difference in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the reports of the Judges, from which the following is an extract:

"The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company's exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums show instruments of the First Rank in the several requisites of instruments of the Class, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."—Signed by all the Judges. The Mason & Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the only ones assigned this rank. The triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and and in view of these facts your Committee would recommend the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That the reading of the Bible is a great means for the dissemination of evangelical truth,—that as Pastors we will not only read the Bible in our Churches, but that we will impress upon our several congregations the necessity of reading the same in their families, and that we will encourage the use of it in our Sunday services.

Resolved, 2. That we pledge ourselves to support the Bible Cause by taking up the collection for the same, as the Discipline directs, and that we will see to it that every family in our congregation is supplied with a copy of the Word of Life.

Resolved, 3. That we will do all we can, and in every way we can to promulgate "the glorious gospel of the blessed God," that to this end WE WILL FORM BIBLE CLASSES, not only in the Sunday School, but also wherever it is practicable among adults and members of the church and,

Resolved, 4. That we will pray the great "Head of the church" more abundantly to send out his light and His truth, and prosper the great cause, "that His way may be known upon the earth, his saving health, among all nations."

FOURTH DAY.

January 13, 1877.

Mr. Brooks made the opening prayer.

Minutes were read and approved.

Lynch, recommended by Seventh Street Church, New York city, and Allen Luster of La Teche were admitted on trial and elected to local deacon's orders. Thomas Montgomery from Stony Point, and Pinster Davis, of Donaldsonville were admitted on trial.

Dr. J. Mathews of the M. E. Church South was introduced.

The Bishop submitted from the General Conference the proposition to so far suspend the 3rd Restrictive Rule as to permit a modification of the "plan of our itinerant general superintendency," by adding to paragraph 218 of the Discipline [[illegible] of the Discipline of 1876] these words, namely: "The Conferences having authority to determine the number of districts; provided no Conference shall have less than two or more than eight districts, nor shall any district have more than sixty pastoral charges," so that the whole paragraph may read, "To form the districts according to his judgment, the Conferences having authority to determined the number of districts; provided no Conference shall have less than two, nor more than eight districts, nor shall any district have more than sixty pastoral charges."

After some discussion a count vote was taken resulting as follows: None for and forty-six against.

By a show of hands the Conference voted unanimously that by the above vote it was desired to express the sentiment that no change was desirable in present polity of the Church.

The Bishop also submitted from the General Conference the proposition to amend the Second Restrictive Rule, by striking out from the fifth line of paragraph 94 of the Discipline [¶ 70 § 2 of the Discipline of 1876] the words "forty-five," and inserting instead thereof the words "ninety-nine."

This proposition gives to the General Conference the right to change the ratio of representation from one for every forty-five to any number up to 99 as in its judgment deemed best.

The vote stood: None for and forty-six against.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretaries be directed to publish the Conference journal as approved, and that the published minutes be the official record of the Conference.

The Committee on Education reported:

[illegible] said to Jesus, "Thou art a teacher come from God." Our Savior [illegible] not make education the test, but he recognized its value. Some of the disciples were not men of much scholarship, they were men of good common sense, true [illegible] and they, like the grand old men of the present time did a work which more scholarly men could not have done so well. The church is like a beautiful building. One class of men lay the solid foundation away down in the trenches, other men rest the walls and still others do the painting. The painter would make a poor out if somebody did not first lay down the solid rocks on which the structure rests. All honor to the men who have laid the foundations of Methodism broad and deep and solid. Our dear Lord [illegible] ever chose some men of scholarship [illegible] was an educated physician, John [illegible] a thinker, a metaphysician of the first order, while Paul was the most learned man of his time. So that the Lord has selected men of all grades from the rude fishermen to the princely Paul. Paul could write, [illegible] made his pen talk to the whole world [illegible] could not have written as Paul [illegible] could mount the [illegible] a Jewish palace and thunder [illegible] crowd of scoffers and unbelievers [illegible] trembled like aspen leaves [illegible] "What shall we do to be saved?" [illegible] was great in one way—Paul was [illegible] another.

The Methodist Episcopal Church [illegible] lost sight of the benefits of education [illegible] at the very beginning Mr. Wesley [illegible] for the education of all the people [illegible] along through our history, the church has recognized not the advantages merely but the necessity of education. [illegible] saved who are not scholars but [illegible] is not enough, we must be a blessing to the world around us. If we were to [illegible] claims of education, we should [illegible] our history as Methodists. It is [illegible] glories of our common Methodism [illegible] have more schools, and more [illegible] them than any other denomination [illegible] And it increases our power [illegible] fully in the world.

The Methodist Church has had [illegible] of very learned men. Mr. Wesley [illegible] profound scholar, Adam Clarke [illegible] mentator and Asbury, [illegible] it would take hours to [illegible] What would we have been [illegible] for our educated men. Who [illegible] written our books, and taught [illegible] leges?

Resolved, 1. That we deem it our solemn duty as christians and as Methodist ministers to sustain our school by sending to it our children and then setting an example to our people worthy of their imitation.

Resolved, 2. That we will use our influence constantly to encourage our young men and women to seek a good education, and that we will hold up New Orleans University as in all respects worthy of their confidence and [illegible] if it is not so we will not cease to labor until it becomes all that its name implies.

Resolved, 3. That in our judgment the school should be placed more directly under the management of a responsible local Board.

Resolved, 4. That in our judgment as soon as practicable one or more colored professors should be employed in the School.

Resolved, 5. That we have confidence in the ability and devotion of Dr. Rust, Secretary of the Freedmens' Aid Society; Dr. Godman President, and the other members of the Faculty, and believe that they should be properly sustained in their work by the Church at large.

J. H. McCARTY, Chairman.

The report was discussed at length by J. H. McCarty, Dr. Rust, and others, and unanimously adopted.

J. C. Hartzell offered the following which was adopted:

Resolved, That we highly appreciate the services of Rev. W. D. Godman, D.D., President of the New Orleans University, in his work of raising money for the University and the Orphans' Home. We are glad to learn that already he has secured $3,000, and we earnestly commend him to the friends of our Southern work.

The following was also adopted:

Whereas, Rev. J. L. J. Barth, an effective Elder of this Conference, who heretofore has been an efficient and successful minister in our German work, contemplates entering upon the English work;

Resolved, That we here record our high appreciation of Brother Barth as a minister and Christian worker, and whatever his labors we shall follow him with our prayers and good wishes.

J. C. HARTZELL,
E. WILLIAMS.

Also the following:

Whereas, The Board of Managers of the Freedmens' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church are maturing plans for Christian work among the Freedwomen of the South.

Resolved, 1. That we have heard of this movement with great pleasure, and regard it as a step indicated by wise Christian philanthropy, and as promising glorious results for Christ and His Church.

Resolved, 2. That we are pleased to see in our midst Mrs. Dr. Rust, a prominent representative of this movement, and hereby request her to address the Conference and explain the character of the work contemplated.

The Committee on the matter of a Theological Union reported, and on motion the following was adopted as a substitute:

Resolved, That the Committee, with the University faculty, be authorized to make all necessary arrangements to organize a Theological Union in connection with the New Orleans University.

Rev. J. A. Ivy, Agent of the Southwestern Bible Society, was introduced.

After announcements the Conference adjourned, with benediction by S. Chinn.

HAVE more than thou showest, speak less than thou knowest, lend less than thou owest.

Letter from Mexico.

In leaving Macing, one meets with very little of interest until he reaches the mountains and begins their ascent. Here and there a deep gorge is crossed which reveals a little vista of romantic beauty. Its dark sides festooned with flowering vines, the little rivulet at its bottom dashing and dancing about among the rocks, and the old time-touched Spanish bridge near by with its massive arch, remind us of the firm tread of the conqueror.

It is mid-day when we reach the mountains and we are glad to escape from the hot rays by entering a little opening in the stony wall—the outlet of the valley of the Chiquihuiti.

Our most exalted ideas of the romantic beauty of this glen were barren and threadbare when contrasted with the enchanting scenes that broke upon our view, while treading its mazy windings.

The road follows every convolution of its ragged sides by a pathway hewn out of the solid limestone and bounded by heights on the one hand, while on the other, the dark depths make one cling convulsively while enjoying this exquisite art album of nature.

The falls at Atoyac are so noted and have been sketched by so many readier pens, that I need but mention them. Indeed they cannot be described. The eye alone can transmit to the soul the beauty of the scene.

The special charm lies in the completeness and harmony of the picture, resulting from the elevation from which it is seen.

One gathers at a single glance the imprisoning mountain sides covered with a deep dense growth of tropical vegetation, the opening valley beyond with its orchards of banana and orange, the little stream bordered with the trailing morning glory that has clambered down the rocks to embrace it, opening into a tiny lake here, that mirrors attending nymphs in its crystal depths, and then gathered into a closer embrace ere it leaps in a sheet of foam from the lips of the precipice, and hurries away full of bubbling laughter to the plain below.

Nothing is wanting but a description, the picture is perfect. We catch the words may beautiful, from [illegible] their meaning—very, very beautiful.

As we advance into the broader valleys and reach a greater elevation, the tropical features of the country, become more marked and at Cordova, we enter the great orange and coffee producing belt of the country.

These two products grow together in the same field, the coffee filling up the territory between the orange trees and reaping the benefit of their dense shade during the intensely hot season. The coffee berry is about the size of a small acorn and contains two kernels, which are removed by the process of hulling. When ready for picking, it is of a bright red color and gives the loaded bushes a most beautiful appearance.

Here we meet with large fields of luxuriant cane that attest the rich possibilities of this country were it fully developed. With a fertile soil, a delightful climate, unlimited water power, and direct communication by rail with the coast, one would confidentially expect to find rich and flourishing agricultural and manufacturing communities. There are a few, but until a people of more enterprise and push shall reign here one's anticipations are not likely to be largely realized.

Ouzaba is an interesting little place, the centre piece of an exquisite valley surrounded by high mountains themselves the foothills of the snow-clad peak that towers up, a beacon light on the West.

In an old convent, once a monument of the supreme dominion of Popery, we find a neatly fitted up chapel, the residence of the Methodist Church. Bro. Stevens gives a warm welcome and reveals while showing us about and telling of the present and past of his work, the key to its success in his own faith and devotion. The church cannot too highly appreciate, nor too devotedly sustain these men who in many instances are working alone and separated from all the fond associations of life and counting all personal danger and loss as nothing compared with the glory to be revealed through the faithful ministry of the Word. Having seen them and their work, we honor them as worthy representatives of a church and a christianity that is destined to bless and save this country. We tarry here for the night, the morrow must speak for itself.

J. F. WILLIS.

Ouzaba, Dec. '76.

The Rev. Dr. Babb, of San Francisco, says: "The results of the mission works among the Chinese on this coast are seen already in the conversion of hundreds, and the converts give as good evidence of piety as the average Anglo Saxon church members. Some of them are quite intelligent, and earnest laborers for Christ."

His Last Charge.

The last words of the late Bishop Andrew, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, were: "Tell the preachers to remember the Sunday schools. Feed my lambs."

The words of this dying man of God ought to be repeated all over the land. Think of them. Think of the man, the charge, the work. A bishop lies face to face with death. The work of his life as the leading representative of a Christian Church, is done. The gates of eternity are opening to receive him. Watch him. He has not forgotten the interests of the Church whose field of toil he is about to leave. Nothing lies nearer his heart than the highest prosperity of the work to which his life has been given. He can work no more; but he can yet speak. What last solemn charge shall he leave for his surviving brethren? Listen: "Tell the preachers to remember the Sunday school. Feed my lambs."

Yes, tell the preachers! The lambs need their care. The Sunday school is trying to feed and shelter them. It is a blessed agency, and it needs the preacher's inspiring help and intelligent, earnest leadership. No true preacher can afford to forget or treat slightingly the Sunday school. The words of the dying bishop are but the echo of the pleading, pathetic voice of the Son of God, crying to his servants and messengers: "Feed my lambs."

The chief Shepherd has laid this solemn trust on the hearts of the under shepherds. Can they afford to disregard it? Can they turn a deaf ear to his command and be guiltless in his sight? Can they be so blind or so wicked as to refuse to lay hold on this tried and approved agency of the times for the salvation of the young? Can they stand aloof from the great and God-approved Sunday-school work without shame and remorse? "Tell the preachers to remember the Sunday school. Feed my lambs."—Evangelical Messenger.

Keep the Gate Shut.

An English farmer was one day at work in his fields, when he saw a party of huntsmen riding about his farm. He had one field that he was especially anxious that they should not ride over, as the crop was in a condition to be badly injured by the tramp of horses. So he dispatched one of his workmen to the field, telling him to shut the gate and then keep watch over it, and on no account to suffer it to be opened. The boy went as he was bidden; but was scarcely at his post before the hunters came up, peremptorily ordering the gate to be opened. This the boy declined to do, stating the orders he had received, and his determination not to disobey. Threats and bribes were offered alike in vain; one after another came forward to act as spokesman, but all with the same result; the boy remained immovable in the determination not to open the gate. After awhile one of the noble presence, advanced and said in commanding tones:

"My boy, do you know me? I am the Duke of Wellington, one not accustomed to be disobeyed; and I command you to open that gate that I and my friends may pass through."

The boy lifted his hat and stood uncovered before the man whom all England delighted to honor, and answered firmly:

"I am sure the Duke of Wellington would not wish me to disobey orders. I must keep this gate shut nor suffer any one to pass but by my master's express permission."

Greatly pleased, the sturdy old warrior lifted his own hat and said:

"I honor the man or boy who can be neither bribed nor frightened into doing wrong. With an army of such soldiers, I could not only conquer the French but the world," and the Duke put spurs to his horse and galloped away, while the boy ran off to his work, shouting at the top of his voice:

"Hurrah, hurrah! I've done what Napoleon couldn't do—I've kept out the Duke of Wellington."—Christian Weekly.

IF one should give me a dish of sand and tell me there were particles of iron in it I might feel for them with the finger in vain. But let me take a magnet and sweep through it and how would that draw to itself the most invisible particles by the mere power of attraction. The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies. But let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find, in every hour some heavenly blessings—only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Holmes.

IF there were less scientific accuracy and more general participation in the singing in our shrines, it would be better for all of us. A hymn set to a simple melody, sung by an entire congregation, with all their hearts and all their lungs, is true worship.

THINK for yourself—and think much more than you talk.

At a meeting of North Carolina bondholders in New York, on the 4th, a resolution was adopted authorizing the appointment of arbiters, for the purpose of adjusting, if possible, on some fair basis to both parties, the debt of the State.

From the report of the Postmaster General it appears that the expenditures of this Department during the last fiscal year were $33,263,487.50. The revenues were $29,181,697.50, leaving a deficiency of $4,081,790 08.

A recent census of India shows that 636 of the natives are authors and poets, 130 astronomers, 23,000 fortune-tellers and pedigree-makers, 30,000 religious merchants, 8,000 painters and sculptors, 38,600 actors and jugglers, and 1,000 snake-charmers.

Cardinal McCloskey's health has grown steadily but slowly worse since his accession to the important station which he now occupies. He said mass at St. Peter's Church, New York, on Christmas day, and the long service, together with a fast preceding it, told upon him severely.

George Muller, so widely known as "man of faith," is preaching on the Continent eight or ten times a week, to audiences of two or three thousand. At present he is laboring in Switzerland, and is loudly called in Germany. Past threescore-and-ten, he preserves, to a remarkable degree, the zeal and fervor of earlier days.

The steamer Amerique, from Havre for New York, went ashore at Seabright, four miles north of Long Branch, N. J., a few days since having on board two hundred and sixteen persons, including officers and crew, all of whom, with the exception of three sailors, were rescued in the life-saving station.

Special cable dispatches to the Herald say that Russia has 100,000 troops concentrated on the frontier ready to march into Turkey, notwithstanding the reports of Russia's unreadiness for war. The Russian naval preparations are as complete as could be expected, and the Black Sea fleet is in position at the mouth of the Dnieper. This position, outside of Nicolief and east of Odessa, is well situated for offensive movements.

The Postmaster General concludes his lengthy report by saying, "The fact that in only seven of the States and two Territories the receipts equal the expenditures is sufficient to show that a long time must elapse before the remainder will be able to bear their share of a self-sustaining service. So long as the Post Office Department must follow the pioneer to the remotest settlements and put him in communication with the centers of trade and business, and also carry the mails to towns and cities in the first years of their existence as frequently as they are conveyed to those of larger population and more matured growth, so long the general treasury will probably have to bear a part of the cost. When our new States and Territories shall become more populous and their inexhaustible resources more generally developed, the earnings of the Department will be more than sufficient to defray its expenses."

A new treaty has been consummated between our Government and the Nicaragua government, for the construction of a ship canal upon the route selected by the engineers, who recommended the Nicaragua route. This treaty has been transmitted to the Senate. It provides for the construction of a ship canal from the Atlantic coast, at or near Greytown, running by canal to the San Juan River, and following it by slack-water navigation to Lake Nicaragua, across the lake to the Rio Del Medio, from thence by canal to the Rio Del Botto on the Pacific coast. The President, in speaking of this project, says it has always been one of interest to him. He thinks it entirely feasible. Foreign nations, so far as heard from, indicate a desire to recognize its international character, and some of them will aid in its construction. The estimate of its cost is [illegible] 000,000. The length of the canal requiring excavation is sixty-one miles.

BEFORE AHAB.—It is no sign that God has forgotten a man, or a nation because, unfettered and unharmed, they go on in their evil ways. He had not forgotten Saul all those years when he was persecuting his saints. It was in the very climax of his career that the light from heaven shone suddenly around him as he was on his way to Damascus, breathing out threatnings and slaughter, and in that awful instant he found himself in the very presence of the Son of God.—Eccl. 8: 11. Saul and Ahab both, no doubt, were rendered more bold in their wickedness by the fact that no evil consequences seemed to follow on their acts. Ahab built his temple, and erected his altar to Baal, and set out the grove for Ashtoreth, and by no sign did God enter his protest against this profanation. Other altars were erected and other groves planted to their false deities, and their worship became popular; and still God was silent. As in the case of Saul, it was at this moment of supreme self-congratulation that the Lord suddenly tore away this sense of security, and brought him face to face with the God of Israel whom he had despised.

ELIJAH THE TISHBITE.—As a flash of lightning out of a clear sky, so appears Elijah in this history. His appearance and disappearance are instantaneous — but, nevertheless, the lightning leaves its mark. We know nothing of his antecedents. From the suddenness with which he came into view, it would seem as if God had laid his hand on some wild mountaineer, instead of one brought up in some school of the prophets, or educated at the feet of some Gamaliel.

His appearance was wild and calculated to strike terror, 2 K. 1:8. Stern, solitary, disdaining the luxuries of life, the wild surroundings of Gilead would be congenial to his character, and perhaps, helped to make it. Yet he who could scathingly denounce Ahab was distressed with [illegible] of [illegible] For Ahab and [illegible] the priests of [illegible] sion, but [illegible] as she, there[illegible] unfathomed [illegible]

[illegible] Ahab [illegible] apparently he [illegible] that Jehovah [illegible] in existence. He at least had comforted himself with the thought that "The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it." Rather a startling way to be thus disabused of one's illusion's! Before whom I stand — "serve." Deut. 18: 5. Very unpopular thing in those days to serve God. Baal was the reigning divinity. To confess the true God was to incur odium and run the risk even of death. Most dangerous of all to avow him to the very face of Ahab.

Shall not be dew nor rain.—That meant famine and famine at its very worst. Such a punishment for idolatry was distinctly threatened in the law, Deut. 11, 16, 17, 28: 28, 24; Lev. 26: 19. According to my word. How came the prophet to know this? From James 5: 17, 18, we learn that he had earnestly prayed that it might not rain. His assurance, therefore, was based on some intimation that his prayer would be answered.

[illegible] was sure to run dry.

Commanded ravens to feed thee.—The most selfish bird in existence, and most unlikely to be a purveyor of food. Elijah believed what God told him and went; while there he trusted God's ravens for every single [illegible] by [illegible] no [illegible]

Dependent times these were for her. Water was scarce, and no food left but a little meal and a little oil. She was thinking of death, when before her stands a singular looking man who at first demands of her a little water. This she readily consents to give, partly out of compassion and partly, perhaps, from the thought that the giving of a little water would make no special difference—it was starvation that was looking her in the face. Bring me, I pray thee a morsel of bread. Then her despair finds utterance. She has only a handful of meal in a pail—only a little oil in a pitcher. She was just going to make a cake of [illegible] there in place of [illegible] and then wait for death. Elijah might well have said [illegible] woman is not the one who is to sustain me; she has not enough [illegible] to sustain herself. [illegible] me thereof a little cake first [illegible] singly cool that must have [illegible]

A PAPER FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.—The Youth's Companion, of Boston, is one of the most judicious and enterprising sheets in the country, and in breadth of miscellaneous reading, has no superior.

Happy Influence of a great Specific.

For the preservation or recovery of health and strength, the diet should be wholesome and nutritious. When it happens that the alimentary processes are disturbed by improper or half masticated food, the best remedy for the evil results of abusing the digestive organs is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most agreeable, prompt and gentle remedy for dyspepsia, and for the bilious and evacuative irregularities which result from it. The liver and bowels, in common with the stomach, experience its beneficent influence. The refuse of the system is carried off through its natural outlet, a healthy flow and secretion of the bile is promoted, and a powerful impetus is given to assimilation in consequence of its use. It healthfully stimulates the bladder and kidneys when they are inactive, and by its tonic and regulating action tortifies the system against malaria. Jan1 4t

A Very Sick Woman.

While calling at the office of a friend the other day, we were handed a letter from which we read the following: Friend Craddock—My best friend, for thus I must address you, as you have done me more good than any one on earth under God, and I believe I owe my life to you, and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you have done. It would take several sheets of paper to enumerate all my sufferings, so will only speak of the most important. For four years I had hemorrhages, beginning in February and lasting until fall; palpitation of the heart, soreness of the breast bone and short ribs, pain in the back and lower part of the abdomen, cold hands and feet even in August, constipation and headache. I had tried doctors, far and near, but all in vain. Some said I had consumption, others liver disease. I quit all doctors and wrote to you for help, and obtained it from your great "East India Hemp." I depend upon you alone for a perfect restoration to health, and feel that I shall not be disappointed. Please send two more bottles, with Pills and Ointment, which I think will do the work. Yours truly,

A. E. RICHARD.

Consumption Cured.

An old physian, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousand of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. [1 2 3 4]

PUBLISHER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

The last General Conference made the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE an official weekly Church paper, and directed that we should publish it. We found it better to leave the paper under the former management during the remainder of 1876. Beginning with January 1, 1877, we assume the entire management of the paper. Subscribers whose subscription have not expired, and have paid, will receive the paper to the full amount of their subscription. All other subscriptions are considered out, January 1, 1877. All money due for subscriptions to January 1st should be sent at once to assist the former publishers to meet unpaid bills.

In beginning the publication of the SOUTHWESTERN we ask, and shall expect, the most hearty co-operation of all the ministers within the patronizing territory. Without this co-operation the paper will fail. We propose that in proportion to its size the SOUTHWESTERN shall not be second to any paper in the Church. Our purpose will be to adapt it to the wants of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, and we hope that our ministers, not only in the South, but in the whole Church, who feel a special interest in our Southern work, will unite with us in making the paper a success financially.

We have adopted the cash system, and send papers only as paid for. This is better for all. We will gladly send specimen copies free to any who ask for them. If subscribers cannot pay for the whole year, let hem pay for part, and the paper will be sent during the time paid for.

$2.00 will pay for the Southwestern one year, including postage. All ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents—to whom the paper will be sent for $1 a year.

YOUR PAPER FREE.

To any person sending us four subscribers and $8.00 we will send the SOUTHWESTERN one year. This offer holds good until April 1, 1877.

Come Now and Let Us Reason Together.

Why do people so frequently say to Dr. Pierce, "I suppose your Golden Medical Discovery cures everything!" Because it has been the practice of knavish charlatans to manufacture worthless nostrums and attempt to dupe the ignorant and credulous by recommending them to cure every form of disease. To such an extent has this been practised that it is no wonder that many have acquired prejudices against all advertised remedies. But Dr. Pierce does not advertise his standard preparations as "cure-alls," does not claim that they will perform miracles, but simply publishes the fact that they have been developed as specifics for certain forms of disease for which he recommends them, after having tested their efficacy in many hundred cases with the most gratifying success. It is a fact known to every well-informed physician that many single remedies possess several different properties. Quinine, for instance, has a tonic quality, which suggests its use in cases of debility; an anti-periodical by which it is efficacious in ague; and a febrifuge property, which renders it efficacious in cases of fever. The result of its administration will also vary with the quantity given and the circumstances under which it is employed. So, likewise, the Golden Medical Discovery possesses both pectoral and alterative, or blood-cleansing properties of the highest order. By reason of these two prominent properties it cures two classes of diseases. First, those of the respiratory organs, as throat, bronchial, and lung affection, chronic coughs and asthma, and second, diseases of the blood and glandular system, in which affections all skillful physicians employ alteratives, as in cases of blotches, ruptions, ulcers, swellings, tumors, abscesses, and in torpor of the liver or "biliousness." While its use is, by its combination of properties, suggested in cases of pulmonary consumption, yet you need not take it expecting it will cure you if your lungs are half consumed, nor because it is recommended as a blood medicine would its proprietor advise you to take it expecting it to cure cancer. It will not perform miracles, but it will cure many grave forms of disease.

We look at the conduct of great men for the model of our lives; suppose we take this humble Christian woman for our example and try each day to make some human being happy. What blessings our efforts would spread over hearts and homes which are now chilled and dreary. When we die their tears will be a nobler monument than the sons of Astor are placing in the marble they are piling over their father's grave.

Waiting and Watching for Me.

When my final farewell to the world I have said—
And gladly lie down to my rest;
When softly the watchers shall come to my bed
And fold my pale hands o'er my breast;
And when [illegible] my purified vision at last,
[illegible]
Will any one there, at the beautiful gate,
Be waiting and watching for me?

There are little ones glancing about in my [illegible]
In want of a friend and a guide;
There are dear little eyes looking up into [illegible]
Whose tears might be easily dried.
But Jesus may beckon the children away
In the midst of their grief and their glee—
Will any of them, at the beautiful gate,
Be waiting and watching for me?

There [illegible] who linger awhile
In [illegible] their dearest have left;
And a [illegible] word or an action of love
[illegible] spirits bereft.
[illegible] to the long-standing
[illegible]
The [illegible] to let free—
Will [illegible], at the beautiful gate,
Be [illegible] for me?

Oh, should I be brought there by the boun[illegible]

[illegible] the weary about in my

[illegible] and Temperance.

tle the above question by precedents, and Germany is presented as the model land. The brewers in their essay say:

"In Germany the State uses every possible means to provide for the people good, wholesome malt liquor, which is the habitual beverage of the people, used by them at their meals and at their places of amusement, rendering them temperate, industrious, healthy and contented."

If contented, why the stream of emigration? Of the 5,567,229 persons of foreign birth in the United States in 1870, 1,690,533 were from Germany—nearly as many as from whisky-cursed and foreign-ruled Ireland. Bavaria, the state that is particularly cited, that produces relatively more beer than any other state in the world, is represented here by 204,119 persons born on her soil, equal to one-twentieth of her present population. It is also certain that there are temperance societies in Germany, composed of those who, familiar with the character of the prevalent drinking customs and alarmed at their tendency, are moving with their combined moral influence against them.

But if all that is claimed in favor of the measure in Germany, were true, it would not follow that Americans could diminish drunkenness by its adoption. Germans in Germany are very different from Americans, native or foreign in America. It is plain that the effect of malt liquors upon our active, nervous American people, native or foreign, can not be argued from their effects upon the phlegmatic, steady-going Germans, who are content under limitations that were onerous to the millions who have sought a home in America.

England has aimed by legislation, since 1830, to substitute brewed for distilled liquors among her people. The plea for the passage of Wellington's Beer-House Act was the hope of diminishing intemperance by facilitating the sale of malt liquors. Her course is commended in the brewers' essays; but a Committee of the British Parliament reported that the Beer Act had done more than all other agencies to increase drunkenness and prostitution, and to brutalize the English laborers.

During the last ten years the United States have collected revenue on above two billion gallons of fermented liquors. This entire volume has been consumed, and yet where and in what measure has it diminished drunkenness? The brewers' Centennial estimate of the capital employed in producing malt liquors is $178,486,350, and of the wages annually paid, $18,370,800; where and in what measure has this vast capital and expenditure diminished drunkenness?

The next point made by the author is that "Malt liquors induce and increase intemperance." According to the brewers' essay, beer contains 5 per cent of alcohol. Whisky contains from 40 to 50 per cent of alcohol; therefore ten pints of lager beer or seven pints of ale contain the same quantity of alcohol as one pint of old Boubon; and one pint or two glasses of lager beer or seven pints of ale contain the same quantity of alcohol as one pint of old Bourbon; and one pint or two glasses of lager beer as much alcohol as half a gill—a moderate drinker's "dram"—of whisky; hence not a few of those who drink beer or ale become intoxicated by it. It is the thing—alcohol—not the quantity, that creates the appetite, and it may be safely aserted that the use of any beverage containing sufficient alcohol to stimulate, though never so gratefully, will inevitably create an appetite for intoxicating drinks.

The breweries of the United States produce one-half as much alcohol as the distilleries. In 1874, United States revenue was paid on 61,814,875 gallons of distilled liquors, the great bulk of which was whisky, so that the average was not more than 50 per cent of alcohol—about 31,000,000 gallons. The brewers' essays place the amount of alcohol in malt liquors, at 23,850,000 gallons, or two-thirds the amount.

Dr. Walden closes these references to the apologies for the use of malt liquors by asserting that were it possible to extract from them the alcohol, leaving in them the healthful albumen, sugar, and gum, the bitter principle of hops, and carbonic acid gas, and the "large proportion of water, from which all organic impurities are eliminated," the demand for these liquors would cease, and every brewery would fail in a twelvemonth. These liquors are consumed by the million barrels not for the nutrition, if there be any, but for the alcoholic stimulation!

The next assertion is that the malt-liquor interest exerts a baneful influence in politics. The liquor interest, as a whole, is recognized and [illegible] to in the caucuses and [illegible] of political parties. In [illegible] of the country, with [illegible] party, a temperance re[illegible] [illegible] most restless under temperance laws, the most fruitful in expedients to embarrass their execution and degrade them before the public. In many States this interest could, if it does not, dictate the liquor-laws.

But for this element, the influence of the liquor interest in politics and legislation would rapidly wane. It began to develop its strength just when a rising temperance sentiment was influencing legislation in almost every State, and but for it prohibitory laws would, ere this, have cut off the traffic in ardent spirits throughout the land. It is the aggressive force, cajoling some by the bold assumption that its effect is not injurious, winning others by the plausible pretense that its use is promotive of temperance, and winning a still greater number by the boastful control of foreign and native voters.

Its destruction of the Sabbath is a two-ofld attack upon our civil institutions—a stroke at the supremacy of law by its wanton violation, and an attempt to subvert the American Sabbath. The magnitude of the malt-liquor interest makes it a dangerous power. According to the brewers' essay the total capital invested in breweries, malt houses, etc., is $178,486,350, and the number of men employed in the breweries, etc., is 35,207. The first lesson to be deduced from these figures is that the liquor interest is more potential than the distilled liquor interest. The two thousand six hundred breweries employ directly three times as many hands and four times as much capital as the seven hundred grain distilleries. Of 39,198,148 acres in corn in 1874, it required only 840,000 acres to supply grain for the distilleries, while 1,580,626 acres, nearly twice the breadth, did not meet the demand of the breweries for barley. The value of the corn raised for the distilleries, at the average price for the year was $9,700,000, for the barley crop, $29,983,787—three-fold the value of the corn.

Its power is further indicated by its growth. The barley crop of 1840 yielded 4,161,504 bushels; of 1850, 5,167,015 bushels, of 1860, 15,825,898 bushels; of 1870, 29,761,-305 bushels; of 1874, 32,551,500 bushels. In 1850 only 300,000 acres of barley were raised, in 1874, 1,580,625. In the course of twenty-four years the annual yield of corn has not quite doubled; that of wheat has increased three-fold; of barley more than six-fold. The growth of this industry is unprecedented and marvellous; it has sprung into these proportions in a quarter of a century: it is characterized by all the vigor of a life; and boastful of its achievements, it rears its own Centennial buildings on a scale that illustrates its effrontery and its magnitude.

The writer concludes his admirable essay with a presentation of some of the logical sequences of these facts and arguments. We will quote but one:

That the rapidly augmenting power of the malt liquor interest is an occasion for alarm, especially in view of its dictation to political parties, its influence on Legislation, its disregard for wholesome laws, its contempt for the opinions and sentiments, wise and pure, of the American fathers; its antagonism to habits and observances that are distinctively American; and that, if not checked by the constitutional exercise of wise laws, if the social customs upon which its growth depends are not rebuked and remanded by a better sentiment to the Old World, it will ruthlessly ruin what it has already seriously marred.

The Character of Dueling.

The Bennett-May duel gives the Christian Advocate (New York) occasion for the following comments:

The character of dueling is not difficult to find. It is essentially cowardly. It sinks down to the level of mere brute courage. A bear, a bull dog, or a wild boar is not lacking in this low grade courage, that can endure physical peril. True courage is moral—the courage that dares to do right in spite of an offended public opinion.

It is demoralizing. It makes life, God's gift, cheap, and pride, Satan's gift, dear. It uses elevated station as a protection against insulted justice. A poor man, trying with his best weapons to kill his fellow, is either hung or sent to the Penitentiary. These men set a bad example. If they can kill with impunity, the poor men, who want bread more than a lady's hand, can use the same harsh means; and if life is made too cheap it will not long protect bread.

It is criminal. It defies law. This is no time for prominent men to make light of law. The republic can spare many thousands of these law breakers better than it can afford to have the law tampered with in these times.

During the reign of Henry IV. of England, a servant of the Prince of Wales, afteward Henry V., was put on trial for some crime and condemned. The Prince, overcome with rage, rushed into the court-room and demanded his servant's release. The Chief Justice, Sir William Gascoigne, mildly reminded the Prince of the dignity of the ancient laws of the kingdom, and advised him to seek a pardon from his father, the King. The Prince, in a rage, flew at the Judge, and was about to do him violence. But the Judge, preserving the dignity of his office, frowned down upon the Prince, and awed him into silence by his majestic sternness, and said: "Sir, I keep here the place of the King, your sovereign lord and father, to whom you owe double allegiance. In his name I charge you to desist, and henceforth give a better example to those who shall hereafter be your own subjects. For your contempt and disobedience I commit you to the prison of the King's Bench, there to remain till the pleasure of the King, your father, be known." The Prince, awed into sense, suffered himself to be led to jail by the officers of justice. A courier hastened to inform the King, who, on hearing it exclaimed: "Happy is the King in having a magistrate who has the courage to execute the laws, and still more happy in having a son who will submit to the punishment inflicted for offending them." In this country the people are sovereign, and ought not to fall below this royal standard. How deserving of public punishment are these men, who trample the law for the sake of revenge or notoriety! What dignity of character they have thrown away! What dignity they might have added to the law by seeking redress only through the law!

This act is criminal in its offense against manhood. It reduces the average of manhood. We are all poorer and meaner on account of this offense. We were all struck down when these brave men brawled on the public street. We were all set up as targets when, fleeing from the officers of justice and from the dignity of the law, these men went away to shoot at, and try to murder each other. How low and helpless their dignity, when they could resort to such public outrages to redress private grievances! The old Roman consul, a prisoner chained in his cell, met the hired assassin with the supreme authority of his eye. The slave got down on his knees and crawled out of the cell. What would these men do in such a presence? It is too late in the century to tolerate such offences against the dignity of human nature.

Something About Cattle Raising in Texas.

The business of cattle raising is of a nature so peculiar that the perspective immigrant is curious to learn of its characteristics.

There are two sorts of cattle raisers—the small and the large. All the small cattle men, and many of those to whom it would not be profane to apply the words of Holy Writ, "the cattle upon a thousand hills are theirs," were poor immigrants, located in the stock country, and possessed of but a few cows. The natural increase of cattle is a compound multiplication, and its calculation closely resembles the school boy's wondrous problem about the horse-shoe nails, at a penny for the first, two cents for the second, and so on up to thirty-two.

No man is entitled to the distinction of a large cattle raiser until he is the owner of more than five thousand head. This class of cattle raisers usually conduct the business upon a farm or ranche, where their families live, and where they raise crops of corn and other products, from which their support is derived until their cattle become marketable. Having but few cows, the cattle are accustomed to the farm and become quite gentle. About the first of March they commence dropping their calves. The owner then rides about every few days, seeking the cows with young calves. These he drives up, and puts the calves into a large pen. The mothers naturally remain close at hand, returning to the pen every night. The cows are turned in one at a time, and the calf allowed about half its mother's milk, when it is roped off, and the balance taken by the milkmaid, who is usually a stalwart cowboy. When the milking is over, the calves are turned out for the night to graze, and the cows kept in the pen. This treatment, rude as it may seem to the professional dairyman, is sufficient to keep the cows gentle, and is all that they get until November, when cows and calves are turned out together, the calves being first marked and branded.

This matter of marking and branding has developed a vast amount of human ingenuity. The calf has but two ears, and the problem is how to cut those ears that each one of a thousand owners may have his own easily recognized and recorded mark. The combinations of a burglar-proof safe lock are not more intricate than the combinations of under bits, over bits, slopes, crops, half upper crops, holes, splits and swallow forks. The brand book of Texas cattle is the most curious specimen of picture writing extant. Naturally, the first brands were simply the initial letters of the owner's name, but as those were appropriated by the first comers, others were forced to resort to other devices, so that one writer declares he saw in Texas cattle branded with hearts, spears, arrows, coffee-pots, fiddles, hands, stars, diamonds, the Greek alphabet, keys, figures, bars, circles, semi-circles, crescents, hats, crosses, boots, spurs, and forms of all other conceivable things.

After all the cows within a few miles of the farm have been gathered, all the cattle raisers of the neighborhood combine for a grand cattle hunt, which unites business and pleasure very equally together. There is generally fifteen or twenty in one of these crowds of hunters.

These hunts are always made in the summer, when the grass is very high, and all the animals are, as the saying is, "rolling fat." At night the cow-drivers camp out and sleep soundly. When all are up they prepare for the hunt. Dividing themselves into squads of from two to four, they start out, diverging their course so that when six or eight miles from camp they will be a mile distant from each other. Each party then commences to gather all the cattle whose owners are represented in the hunt. As the hunters always ride in the direction of camp, it so happens that they all meet before sundown. The cattle are then penned or herded for the night. After one locality has been thoroughly searched, the herd is removed to another. When all that can be found have been gathered, the herd is driven to the nearest farm, and all belonging to its owner left, and so on until the whole is disposed of; and at each a fair proportion of the "mavericks" are also. This term is used to designate such yearlings as follow no particularly branded cow, and whose ownership can not therefore be ascertained. The custom is for any man having stock in the range to brand all the mavericks he can find. Young men without cattle frequently join in the hunt for a share of the mavericks. Many of largest stock men made their first start this way, and have grown wealthy by their industry and the natural increase of their mavericks.

Boys' Work and Girls' Work.

Are we not sometimes over-nice in drawing the line between boys' work and girls' work, and so get the distinction overdone, much to the disadvantage of both parties?

What an opportune moment for choosing this subject! As I look up from my paper, glancing out the window, I see a woman across the lot cleaning out a sooty stove funnel. Now, if I had been asked whose work that would be, I should have said, most emphatically, "the boys' work, of course."

That woman seems to take it as her work, and now that I think of it, perhaps she finds it easier to do it herself, nicely and carefully, emptying the soot, as she does, outside the yard fence, than it would be to clean up the floor, the steps, the stove and the funnel itself, after the emptying had been carelessly done. So I will say, by way of parenthesis, it may be a good thing for a girl to learn how to clean stove funnels, so that if the choice ever lay between doing that and a smoky stove, she could be mistress of the situation.

But to go back to my text. There are many kinds of work which seem very naturally to adjust themselves as belonging either to boys or girls, and the division is apt to be so arbitrarily made, that both miss the instruction and practice which might make them, in a measure, self-dependent.

For instance, sewing is girls' work, no one disputes that; but what harm will it do the boys to learn to sew on buttons, or even sew on a patch, or sew a seam neatly! They may never need to do it, but hundreds of men have needed to do just such work when away from home, and hundreds more would have been more comfortable had they known how to do it.

I never knew a girl to learn the carpenter trade; but, with perfect propriety, she could learn the use of common tools, so as not to be perfectly helpless when there is a nail to drive, a board to saw, or a bit of planing to be done.

Of course a home is not furnished which has no hammer, saw, plane and such every-day tools in readiness for use. Why! mother's hammer is just as much a necessity in our house as mother's scissors, and it finds numberless odd bits of work to do which you might call the boy's work if you were very precise.

It is not half the trouble to learn to open a barrel of flour that it oftentimes is to wait for somebody to come whose business it is to do such things, for everybody knows that waiting is hard work when one is in a hurry. And besides, it is a real comfort to feel that girls can do things as well as boys.

Scrubbing floors, scouring knives, washing dishes, grinding coffee, and even cooking is not boys' work, in a general way, but I have seen boys do these things when it was the greatest help, and it did not make Betties of them either. No noble-minded boy thinks it beneath his dignity to do girl's work sometimes, if he has leisure, and his mother or sister needs his help. Neither should girls be particular to leave undone all the boy's work, when they can make themselves helpful to fathers or brothers, as girls often can.

On a farm this interchange of kindness is almost necessary, where there are so many hurrying times and no one ought to feel abused, who occasionally does that which belongs to somebody else to do.

I would much rather know how to do that which I never have to do, than find it necessary to do that which I do not know how to do, and that is the general feeling of all self-reliant persons.

Now if there were a little less precission in drawing the line of division, and both boys and girls were taught to do the work which comes to hand, both would be better for it, and there would be less danger of the domestic wheels being thrown off the track by family jars.—Son of the Soil.

The Heart-Lock.

A lock was shown to Gotthold, constructed of rings which were severally inscribed with certain letters, and could be turned round until the letters represented the name Jesus. It was only when the rings were disposed in this manner that the lock could be opened. The invention pleased him beyond measure, and he exclaimed, "O! that I could put such a lock as this upon my heart."

Our hearts are already locked, no doubt, but generally with a lock of quite another kind. Many need only to hear the words, gain, honor, pleasure, revenge, and their hearts open in a moment, whereas to the Savior, and to His holy name, they continue shut.

Take my poor heart, and let it be Forever closed to all but Thee.
Take Thou my breast, and let me wear
That pledge of love forever there.

A Young Man's Dying Speech

"I took the pledge," said an old man, "at the foot of the gallows when I saw a young man hung." The sheriff took out his watch and said, "If you have anything to say, speak now, for you have only five minutes to live." The young man burst into tears and said: "I had only one little brother; he had beautiful blue eyes and flaxen hair, and I loved him. But one day I got drunk and, coming home, found him gathering berries in the garden, and became angry without a cause, and killed him with a rake. Whiskey has done it—it has ruined me. I have but one more word to say—never, never, NEVER touch anything that can intoxicate."

OH, what a blessing is Sunday interposed between the waves of worldly business like the divine path of the Israelites through Jordan! There is nothing in which I would advise you to be more strictly conscientious than in keeping the Sabbath holy. I can truly declare that to me the Sabbath has been invaluable.—Wilberforce.

The Ice Tree.

The ice storm comes, a leafless tree is clothed with ice from bottom to top— ice that is as bright and clear as crystal; every bough and twig is strung with ice beads, frozen dew-drops, and the whole tree sparkles, cold and white, like the Shah of Persia's diamond plume. Then the wind waves the branches, and the sun comes out and turns all those myriads of beads and drops to prisms, that glow and hum and flash with all manner of colored fires, which change and change again with inconceivable rapidity, from blue to red, from red to green, and green to gold; the tree becomes a sparkling fountain, a very explosion of dazzling jewels; and it stands the acme, the climax, the supremest possibility in art or nature of bewildering, intoxicating, intolerable magnificence! One cannot make the words too strong.—Mark Tain.

An Illinois farmer says: "My cattle follow me until I leave the lot, and on the way up to the barnyard in the evening, stop and call for a lock of hay." Brown says there is nothing at all remarkable about that. He went into a barnyard in the country one day last week, where he had not the slightest acquaintance with the cattle, and an old bull not only followed him until he left the lot, but took the gate off the hinges and raced with him to the house in the most familiar way possible. Brown says he has no doubt but that the old fellow would have called for something if he had waited a little while, but he didn't want the folks waiting for dinner, so he hung one tail of his coat and a piece of his pants on the bull's horns and went into the house.

In Boston, last Sunday, a gentleman had been addressing the children gathered in a Methodist chapel, and in concluding his remarks told the little ones that they might ask him any questions that suggested themselves. He was gratified by a seven-year-old girl, who immediately piped out, "Who's elected?" He couldn't tell.

Spirituality the Law of Christianity.

A great truth not to be forgotten is indicated in the words at the head of this article. Christianity is a specially spiritual system. This is announced by the prophet Joel: "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit." Here we note a time and a work. The prophet says of the time that it is "afterward," evidently alluding to the reign of the Messiah. Peter in his famous sermon on the day of Pentecost quotes from Joel, but uses the term "last days" instead of "afterward," referring to the then present dispensation, the establishment of the kingdom of Christ in the earth. The "last days" were inaugurated by a spiritual baptism. The Messiah's kingdom was begun on that memorable day when in answer to prayer, long and fervent, fifty days after the covenant of grace was consummated on Calvary, there was a spiritual baptism such as the Church of God never experienced before. We do not suppose that there was no spirituality in the patriarchal and Mosaic dispensation. God was ever with His Church in spirit from Adam to Christ. We only affirm that the new dispensation is one of enhanced spiritual power and privileges. And this is evidenced in the writings of the prophets and in their fulfillment in the day when three thousand were converted and added to the Church. And again is this confirmed by the language of the Savior, who said, John xiv, 16; "And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever." And again, "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." Also, in chapter xv, verse 26: "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me." Now, in the old dispensations God appeared to men in the form of an "angel of the Lord" and in the "flame of fire." Jesus was a higher revelation of God. God manifested in the flesh to take away our sin, to "destroy the work of the devil." The "angel of the Lord" was a divine revelator; the fire was a revelation. Christ was a revelation of God to man, a medium by which the finite takes hold of the Infinite. This was, then, the design of the dispensations. This highest revelation was the beginning of the "last days." Now, what is the distinctive feature of this dispensation? Jesus has answered, "I will send you the Comforter," "He shall abide with you forever." The Spirit proceeding from the Father, and the Son, shall be the source of the Church's power, light, and comfort to the end of time. God the Father and the Son shall reign by the Spirit in the Church forever. This is a spiritual dispensation in which we are to be emancipated from the bondage to all selfishness, lust, materiality. It is the privilege of every Christian, of the whole Church, to be baptized with the Spirit and with power from on high. It is the duty of the Church to pray that Pentecost may come again, and continue till the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God.

It is the duty of the Church to make use of every lawful means to elevate man from the deep pit into which sin has cast him. For this purpose the Church should foster educational interests; and since education is a necessity, it should always be under the guardianship of the Church. The Church should diffuse a wholesome literature; it should present literary attractions superior in taste and range to that of the world. This is the duty of the Church. Not less do we advocate learning in the ministry. We cannot have too much sound learning in the pulpit. The minister of Jesus should be competent to grapple with any question of science, [illegible] of history, of general [illegible]. The Church should have [illegible] worship with all the finish [illegible], and com[illegible] and refines the [illegible]. The temple of Jesus [illegible] in all respects equal to the cause which it represents. But all these must only be the instruments of the Spirit. The education of the Church must be a sanctified education; our college presidents and professors should aim to teach young men the language of holiness, the science of salvation, the art of "holy living and dying," as well as the languages, sciences and arts that belong to our college curriculum. The Church in all her borders should pray that our seminaries of learning may be centers of spirituality as well as of learning. It is a matter of gratitude to God that college revivals are no uncommon thing with us. May they be more abundant!

The same may be said of our papers and books. Our publishers should keep before the mind of the Church such writings as will foster the spiritual growth of the Church. Biographies of our sainted dead—"Methodists die well," is an old and true saying. Works on all our distinctive doctrines should be held out to view constantly. Our literature, as well as our educational interests, should be sanctified. Let us keep in mind that our mission as a Church is not to lead the world in culture, but in religion, and all our efforts must be in this direction. If not successful here we shall be successful nowhere.

And there is one other thing to be named, that is, the ministry. We who have been called to this work should not forget that the pulpit is not a literary rostrum. Our sole business is to preach Jesus to the hearts of men. I think it is true that Methodism, with her organization, with her peculiarities, with her spiritual requirements, cannot be the Church of the upper classes, though she does number some of them in her fold. Well, what of that? Thank God, Methodism has a grander field; her mission, like that of her Head, is to the poor. These are more numerous. It is her glory, and it is great glory. While the upper tens reject Methodism as they rejected Christ, the lower thousands come to her fold with songs of praise to God.

Our preaching should be simple, tender, pathetic, practical, pointed, spiritual. We should aim our arrows at the heart. We should study to affect and influence the spiritual nature and meet the spiritual wants of our hearers. How disappointed many a poor soul has gone from the house of God who went there to be refreshed with spiritual food, but was starved on dry metaphysics. Great Spirit, breathe on the sons of Levi the rich influence of the Spirit! Clothe them with the meek mind that was in Jesus. Let everything in the Church be subordinate to the Spirit. Let us sing and pray and preach and publish and educate and build churches, and do everything else with the distinct remembrance that spirituality is the great law of the Christian Church, as gravitation is of the material universe. Forget this, and we become as "sounding brass or tinkling cymbal."

Missions for the Century.

BY R. W. ALLEN.

The first century of the American Republic has been remarkable for Christian Missionary work. Before the century commenced, but little had been done, comparatively, for the conversion of the heathen. The Moravians had entered Greenland, South Africa and the West Indies; and by their sacrificing labors had met with some success. Schwartz and a few associates of the German Halle-School had commenced a noble work among the Danish Tranquebar and nearly connected regions of India; otherwise, the Protestant Church was doing nothing for the evangelization of the heathen world.

The oldest of the missionary societies is the English "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel into Foreign Parts," which had its origin in the Independent Parliament of 1648, but had done really nothing in converting the heathen. Later, as the results of the labors of the Wesleys, sprang up the "Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge," and a little later, the "Church Missionary Society." In 1792 the "English Baptist Missionary Society" was organized; in 1795 the "London Missionary Society"—Congregational; in 1810, the "American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions;" in 1814, the "Baptist Missionary Union;" in 1819, the "Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society;" in 1820, the "Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church;" in 1831, the "American Presbyterian Board of Missions," in 1845, the "Southern Baptist Board;" and in 1846, the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

The first company that ever went to a foreign mission from this country sailed from Salem, Mass., Feb. 19, 1812, consisting of Adroniram Judson, Samuel Newell and their wives. On the 23d of October, 1819 the first missionaries to the Sandwich Islands sailed from Boston—twenty-two in number—sent by the American Board. What has been wrought in the conversion of the heathen to Christ since the above dates,—1812 and 1819? The results as now spread before the Church are wonderful, marvelous! The modern missionary enterprise has been an extraordinary success. The heathen world is dotted all over with mission stations, from which Gospel light is radiating into the surrounding darkness; in it there are more than four thousand centers of Christian work and Gospel teaching, twenty-five hundred congregations, and two hundred and seventy-five thousand communicants of Christian churches, and one million three hundred and fifty thousand nominal Christians. There are about sixteen thousand laborers, including foreign missionaries and native pastors and teachers, acting under the various missionary Boards in heathen lands. Look at the fields where these laborers are toiling for the Master, and what do we behold? In more than three hundred islands in the Pacific, in Northern and Eastern Turkey, in Persia, in Hindoostan, in Burmah, in China, in Madagascar, in South Africa, Serre Leone and South America, what multitudes have been brought to Christ!

The Sandwich Islands have become Christian, and have one of the largest churches in the world, numbering forty five hundred members. The inhabitants of these islands were gross savages fifty years ago. The Fiji Islands in 1835 were inhabited by a fierce, blood-thirsty race of cannibals, now they have been largely Christianized, and where their horrid rites were once performed, ninety thousand happy Christians meet every Sabbath to worship God. Greenland has been Christianized by the Moravians. In India and Burmah, where fifty years ago there was scarcely a representative of the Christian faith, there are now nearly eight thousand missionaries and native teachers, thirty-five hundred mission stations, and a membership of eighty thousand converts! What a work for Burmah! The Friendly Islands, fifty years ago, were savage and full of dark superstition and cruelty, but now number upwards of thirty thousand Christians. On the Western coast of Africa, once the slave market of the world, there are a hundred organized churches with a membership of a hundred and fifty-seven thousand; in Serra Leone there are fifty thousand Christians. China is opening wonderfully to the Gospel; more than forty of its walled cities, and about four hundred of its villiages, are now occupied as mission stations, and nearly twelve thousand converts have been received into the Christian church. Japan is yielding strongly to Christian influence. There are in Madagascar nearly five hundred thousand Christians, including the queen and her prime minister, and about seven hundred churches. In Catholic countries, Protestant Christianity is rapidly gaining—in Italy, Spain, France, Mexico and South America. Brahminism and Buddhism in the heathen world are declining; so is Mohammedanism. The Church at home is rallying to the support of the mission work as never before. What results of mission labor do we see, beyond anything anticipated by the early friends of the mission enterprise! And all within the century and most within the last fifty years! "What has God wrought?" Let the Church take courage, and rally as never before to the accomplishment of her mission—the conversion of the world to Christ.

Address of the Missionary Board to the Church.

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

The Missionary Board, to whom the church has committed some of the weighty responsibilities of our great missionary cause, crave your attention to some important facts connected with our work.

1. The prayer of the church for the coming of the kingdom, has been heard and answered in giving us safe access to the great centers of population. God has answered beyond our past willingness to enter in and occupy.

2. We have all the appliances, such as a knowledge of the languages, translations of the Bible, familiarity with the customs of the people, and organized companies of workers capable of indefinite expansion, necessary for the speedy evangelization of the world.

3. Our foreign missions have never been more prosperous in their soul-saving work, or more inviting to Christian labor, than now.

4. The claims on the Board have never been so great or so imperative as at preseet.

5. The work as adjusted by the General Missionary Committee must be sustained.

6. The debt must be paid.

Dear Brethren, in view of these facts, we beg you to put forth your most strenuous efforts to relieve the missionary treasury and sustain this work.

1. Secure a liberal subscription from every member of the church.

2. Let every Sunday-school in our denomination be organized into a missionary Society according to the provisions of the Discipline.

3. Let every old contributor be urged to make an advance of at least two per cent.

Yours fraternally,
REV. R. L. DASHIELL, D.D.

Temperance Pentecost.

A wonderful temperance revival, under the leadership of Mr. Francis Murphy, has been in progress for some weeks past in Pittsburg, Pa. We take from the Daily Witness the following, written by Rev. Alexander Clark, Editor of the Methodist Recorder, of Pittsburg:

Some twelve or thirteen thousand have signed the pledge. Many of these have been converted to Christ, and their testimonies are heard every day and almost every hour.

Among the reformed men are several prominent lawyers; merchants and railroad men; indeed, the revival seems to have compassed all classes, for in the same pews may be seen bankers and tramps, iron millionaires and peddlers, learned and illiterate, American, German, Irishman—all moved by the same divine power. Some of the very men, who, a few weeks ago, were down in the gutter, outcast, despised (all the more shame of those who dispised them!) are now clothed and in their right minds, and not only so, but are active talkers and workers for the cause of temperance. Among those are a brilliant lawyer, a colonel of the army, a restored minister and a hundred effective advocates of morality who were so recently in the service of Satan.

The overflow meetings fill two or three adjacent churches at noon, and every evening a score of crowded meetings are held in various parts of the city and suburbs. The subject is the theme of conversation on the streets, in the cars, in the pulpits, in every place and by every body. The results are astonishing. The gospel of glad tidings seems to be reaching every home and every soul. The movement is eminently Christian. It is the power of love. Not even the rum-seller is abused. Nobody is assailed but the devil. The poor sinner is visited, reached, lifted up, and told how to find his Savior. The churches themselves are amazed at the harvest. Ministers are holding special consultations to devise methods of garnering the grain. It is a penticost, almost a millenium, and the children of God are glad.

Letter from Mexico.

IN a private letter to us, dated City of Mexico, Dec. 26, Dr. Butler, Superintendent of our Missions there writes:

Julia and I were delayed in Vera Cruz for two days, till the battles were fought that gave this city and Puebla to the revolutionary forces. Last Friday the last serious resistance was overcome, and now we consider our civil war is over, and peace returning to this distracted land. General Diaz is master of the situation, and we fully expect soon to witness the good effect of the condition of things which he has inaugurated in Mexico. Our roads are opening again and business reviving. We have got nearly all our new arrangements set up and in working order. I am so grateful for the success of my effort, and feel sure it will give an impetus to our cause in Mexico of the most important character.

Last night we had our Christmas service, the grandest occasion I have seen in Mexico. Between four and five hundred persons present in our Church. Thank God.

STATISTICS in regard to marine disasters are startling. The number of vessels, both American and British, which are annually lost is frightful. During the year 1876, 1,052 American vessels suffered disaster on our shores, besides 85 foreign vessels, giving a total of 1,137. Of this number 477 collided; and 209 casualties arose directly from carelessness or ignorance; 312 were wrecked, causing the loss of an immense amount of property and 888 lives.

THE Richmond Christian Advocate denounces the outrages perpetrated upon Drs. Cooke and Webster, as follows: "We notice in the papers an account of most disgraceful conduct on a railroad-car in South Carolina, on the part of certain rude and, we suppose, drunken men toward two ministers of the M. E. Church—Drs. Cooke and Webster. Such conduct is a shame and a reproach to our country, and all good citizens should frown down such outrages. Whatever political opinions these brethren may hold, so long as they deport themselves as Christian gentlemen they are entitled to the protection of the laws of the land. Such rowdies as insulted these ministers bring reproach upon the entire Southern people, and place us in a bad light before the country. We call upon all good people through out the whole South to arise and put down such disgraceful exhibitions."

PERSONAL ITEMS.

DR. GODMAN, President of the New Orleans University, has been North for some months in the interests of that institution. He is expected home during the present week.

AARON SMITH is continued as Superintendent of Plum Street Sabbath-school in this city, and Nelson Collins continued as Superintendent of Camp Parapet Sabbath-school.

PROF. WM. MORROW, who for some time past has filled the chair of Latin Language and Literature in New Orleans University, has been transferred by Rev. Dr. Rust, Secretary of the Freedmens' Aid Society, to the Normal Institute at Huntsville, Alabama. The Professor has won the good will of very many people in the Crescent City, who will gladly hail his return at any time.

THAT invincible and semi-omnipresent Sunday-school Bishop, Dr. J. H. Vincent, keeps the Sunday-school ball rolling. Every month brings out some new element of power in the Sunday-school work, and some new, fresh plans to stir the Sunday-school world. Dr. Vincent is the heart in the great Sunday-school body from whose actions you can feel the pulse throbs at the nation's finger-tips from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He has recently placed us under obligations for a choice assortment of Sunday-school requisites. He has publications adapted to the wants of every worker in the good cause, from superintendent down to the youngest member of the infant class. Address him at 805 Broadway, New York.

OUR TEXAS CONFERENCES.

Rev. I. N. Breeze, West Point, Texas, says: "I find my work on my new appointment in a prosperous condition. The church membership is not large, but we have good congregations, and we pray that we may speedily be enabled to win souls for Christ. Our people are finishing a new and commodious church. We have a large and flourishing Sabbath School. I will take a copy of the SOUTHWESTERN into my pulpit on next Sabbath, and present its claims to the people. I have already the names of several subscribers, and expect to send you a good list."

Rev, Jeremiah Smith, Harrisburg, Texas, sends names of subscribers and adds:

"The church here mourns the loss of two of her members who have just died, Henry Larame and Demas Michael. Bro. Larame was one of our class leaders. As I have but recently come to this work, I had but little acquaintance with him, but his brethern say, that he was a faithful Christian man, loved by all who knew him."

Rev. J. K. Dozier, Belton, Texas, Says: "I pledged at Conference for ten subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN, but I have concluded to not stop with that number." A very proper conclusion, Bro. D. Give the SOUTHWESTERN opportunity and it will help you preach to all you people.

Rev. James H. Cohns, Giddings, Texas, writes: "I came to this work with many misgivings, for there are not many church members, and in the hard times I did not see where my support was to come from. My first congregation did not number over one dozen. But I endeavored to trust all to the Lord, and go forward in discharging my duty, and I am thankful that I can say that God is blessing us. At the end of one month our congregations number near one hundred, and at our last service two persons were at the altar for prayers. I expect to send you a list of names, with the money, in a few days for the SOUTHWESTERN. It is a new thing to our people here to become subscribers to any paper, but they are learning that they must be educated to enjoy the advantages and blessings of freedom."

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

There is a revival movement all through Scotland at present.

A Scotchman, says Mr. Moody, has counted thirty-one thousand promises in the Bible.

The Rev. Mr. Spurgeon has recovered from his last attack of illness, and is now in good health.

A large body of Jesuits expelled from Germany have gone to India, and have opened a college at Bombay.

The Rev. Dr. Morley Punshon, of England, has been obliged to give up preaching for the present on account of illness.

Three thousand islands have ceased to be idolaters within fifty years. In the Sandwich and other islands there is a membership of 70,000.

Prof. Davis, of the University of Virginia, besides the duties of his chair, though a layman, is delivering a series of lectures on the "Life of Christ," Sunday evenings.

At Pleasant Hill, Mo., the two Presbyterian Churches (North and South) have gone into "fraternal relations." The two congregations have united in the support of a pastor, without reference to the question of organic union.

A Presbyterian church composed of twenty members, all Mexicans, is something of a novelty. Such a church has been organized by the Rev. J. M. Roberts, of Taos, New Mexico.

The American Baptist Home Missionary Society has established seven schools in the South for educating freedmen as teachers and preachers, one at each of the following places: Washington, Richmond, Raleigh, Columbia, Augusta, New Orleans and Nashville.

There are five colored Baptist Churches in Nashville, Tenn. In the largest of these a membership of over 1,200 is reported. They have nearly completed a meeting-house, near the State House, at a cost of probably $20,000.

The Moravians carry on, at this time, missions in Greenland, Labrador, the West Indies, and Mosquito Coast, in South Africa, Australia, and Thibet, where they have 307 missionaries, 29 native ministers, 1,530 native helpers, and 21,966 communicants. What can not missionary zeal accomplish in the strength of grace, even in the darkest portions of the earth.

At a meeting of the members of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, at St. Louis, Rev. Dr. Brooks, Pastor, recently a proposition to sever their connection with the Southern General Assembly, and join the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States, was carried by a vote of 197 to 21.

Drs. Wm M. Taylor, R. S. Storrs, W. J. Buddington, H. M. Seudder, Ruy Palmer, Geo. H. Hepworth, David B. Coe, A. H. Clapp, Benj. N. Martin, Wm. H. Ward, and several other clergymen of New York and Brooklyn have united to form a new local Congregational Association, most of them having withdrawn from the old Association in consequence of its indorsement of Mr. Beecher.

Missions have been very successful in Polynesia. More than three hundred islands have been won from idolatry to Christianity within less than fifty years, and their languages reduced to writing. In these tongues the Scriptures have been translated, besides other works for the enlightenment of the people. The number of communicants in Polynesia is estimated at 70,000, with 300,000 adherents.

Says the Christian Guardian, Some of the Japanese newpapers have taken a sudden turn in favor of religious equality. All religions are now tolerated by the Government, but this is claimed not to be enough. The State, it is argued by one of the venacular papers, must "free itself absolutely from all connection with religion." The movement is said to be supported by the "general opinion of the country," and several of the Mikado's Ministers are claimed as advocates of the separation of Church and State. Nowhere are more fearless reformers found than in Japan, and this agitation may amount to something eventually.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

There was a sore famine in Samaria. From the particular attention that is called to it, we should say that in that place the famine was specially sore. That was the capital of Ahab's kingdom, though he had a royal palace at Jezreel. It was the centre of Baal worship. There it was where Ahab had erected a splendid temple to Baal. Elijah's challenge to that god to prevent the drouth if he could was, of course, unaccepted, and the impotency of that deity most clearly exhibited by the fact that the very place where his palace was located was the most affected by famine.

By all accounts this man was a very timid man. He was afraid to bear the message of Elijah to the king for fear of the personal consequences to himself. What is there more probable than that this timorous man should indeed have kept his faith, but kept it in secret?—like those "chief rulers" among the Jews, who believed in Christ, "but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue.

It was not wholly chance that threw Obadiah in the way of Elijah instead of Ahab. That timid soul needed just the strengthening which he obtained at this interview with Elijah. And perhaps it did the prophet good, also, to find that God had at least one secret friend in the court of Ahab. Art thou that my lord Elijah? The peculiar dress, and the weird, wild appearance of the prophet, made it possible not to guess that this must be the man for whom such fruitless search had been made. Ahab, no doubt, had given a faithful description of him over and over again to all his officers and his spies. Obadiah, standing in his presence of authority, and remembering how the heavens had been shut up, and quailing before his intense and burning look, involuntary calls him "my lord." It was the instinctive homage that a weak nature gives to one that is strong and imperious. Go tell thy lord, Behold Elijah is here. It has been so that, for over three years, any one who could have brought that news to the king would have been a welcome messenger, sure of reward and position. But Obadiah dreads the office imposed upon him. What have I sinned? Conscience accused Obadiah then and not Elijah. If he had lived openly and boldly a life of faith in Jehovah, he would not now have hesitated to have carried this message, or thought that its delivering was sent to him as a punishment for his iniquities. He would have rejoiced, rather, at the opportunity. "Thus conscience does make cowards of us all." In the presence of Elijah, worshipping God in secret did not seem such justifiable and commendable conduct as he had often tried to convince himself that it was.

The message brought the man. No time for Ahab to enforce court etiquette, and insist that Elijah shall come to meet him. The prophet was the one to command, and it was Ahab's part to obey. Art thou (hero) that troubleth Israel? Marvelous impudence was this! One would have thought that Ahab would have feared, or at least had some respect for, a man clothed with such superhuman power that he closes the heavens at his word, and keeps them closed for so long a time as Elijah had done. The explanation of this, as given by some, is that Ahab regarded Elijah as only a necromancer, who by the power of his art, had caused the rains to cease. It is, however, much the more probable that he recognized Elijah to be what he pretended to be—the servant of God. But as an animal will sometimes bite the spear that wounds him instead of the hand that threw it, so Ahab unreasonably charged the calamity of Israel upon Elijah instead of bowing to the will of God who sent it. I have not troubled Israel but thou and thy father's house. Elijah had only announced the famine—not brought it upon Israel. He had prayed that it might not rain, but it was not because of that, merely, that God sent no rain, but because of the sins of Ahab and the people. Such apostasy as was theirs was to be followed by drouth. Deut. 28: 23, 24. Ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," etc. Their main sin was not that they had been selfish, impure, frivolous, sensual, but they had deposed the Lord God from his rightful supremacy over Israel. That greater sin included the lesser ones. Had they not done this, they would not have committed the others. Served Baalim. Plural form of Baal.

Ahab had found his master. The hairy garment of the prophet was better than the royal mantle of the king, and his staff was more powerful than the king's scepter. Ahab can utter no more words of reproach [illegible]. Conscience, and the sense of being in the presence of a man [illegible] his mouth. So [illegible] the judgment [illegible]

LITERARY NOTES.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

☞ We cheerfully devote space in each issue of the Southwestern to the announcement of the publication of such books and periodicals as publishers are pleased to send us, giving name, publishers and when given us, the price, and where for sale.

Beyond this we promise nothing, but will give reviews, criticisms—favorable or unfavorable—as our space will allow and our judgment dictate.

THE Sunday-school lessons for February are entirely taken up with that grandest of Old Testament characters, the prophet Elijah. No better treatment of them can be found than is given in "The National Sunday School Teacher." The expositions are exceedingly clear, helpful and inspiring. Besides these helps are those furnished by such eminent contributors as Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., who writes on "The Still Small Voice and its Lessons," Rev. Leonard Bacon, D. D., on "The Division of Israel and its Consequences," and Rev. C. D. Helmer on Baal the Sun-God." The editorial notes, gleanings, news, and hints concerning methods of work, which it contains, are invaluable to superintendents and teachers, and, as usual, are charming reading. The nicely illustrated "Little Folks," which comes with it, is exactly adapted for primary classes. Chicago: Adams, Blackmer & Lyon Publishing Co.

AT the time when Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Bliss were so suddenly killed in the Ashtabula disaster, D. Lothrop & Co. of Boston had in press, and nearly ready to issue, a book entitled "Song Victories of the Bliss and Sankey Hymns," containing one hundred incidents connected with these hymns, also a new fine engraving of Mr. Bliss and another of Mr. Sankey. To this is appended biographical sketches of both Mr. Bliss and Mr. Sankey, the former by Mrs. W. F. Crafts (Sara J. Timanus) who was one of the most intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, with tributes to their memory from other prominent workers. This sketch includes the disaster and death. The book in boards will be sold at the popular price of 50 cents and will be ready in a few days.

During the last few years a number of translations of the "Norse Sagas" have appeared in England and America. Taking the remarkable translation of Professor Anderson, of Wisconsin University, of two of the finest of these Sagas as a text, Professor Hj. Hj Boyesen of Cornell has prepared for the March Number of "The International Review" a somewhat elaborate paper on the SAGA CIVILIZATION; the literary and social ideals of that age, as illustrated by the Sagas. Prof. Fiske of Cornell, and Prof. Boyesen have between them, privately, the only complete library of this literature in the United States.

The number of "Littell's Living Age" for the week ending January 20th contains The Hellenic Factor in the Eastern Problem, by Rt. Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone; an instalment of "The Marquis of Lousie," by George MacDonald; How Russians Meet Death, a characteristic sketch by Ivan Turguenief, translated by Lady George Hamilton; Melancthon, a chapter in the History of Education; The Feast of the Roofs, a Christmas Fairy Tale, from the French, by Helen Stanley; with a liberal supply of choice poetry, and miscellany. Little & Gay, Boston, Publishers.

THE FEBRUARY ATLANTIC.

Mr. Whittier begins the February issue of the "Atlantic Monthly" with a six-page ballad, called "The Witch of Wenham, a charming poem in his best vein. The same number has a short poem, "A Dutch Picture," by Mr. Longfellow, and one by Edmund C. Stedman. A timely and characteristic poem, by Dr. Holmes, on the Presidential question "How Not to Settle It"—appears at the end of the magazine, and is full of good sense and humor. In "Studies of Animal Nature." Bayard Taylor contrives to assemble many fresh and amusing anecdotes of animal sagacity, and argues for a better understanding between men and brutes. "The Political Condition of South Carolina," by a South Carolinian, is an article of great and immediate interest. We find a readable account of "Christmass Eve in a Sicilian Abbey," by Luigi Monti, lately American Consul at Palmero. Edgar Fawcett and Mrs. Piatt contribute poems, and there is a striking anonymous poem, entitled "The Old Grave." The new department, "The Contributor's Club," is full of clever things. After that, there is a "Sunset Song," by Celia Thaxter, set to music by Julius Eichberg. There is an unusual number of book reviews, and the editorial comments on "Art" and "Music" are also worth reading.

It seems that now a Daniel has come to judgment. Daniel Wise reviews "Daniel Deronda" in Dr. Daniel Curry's National Repository.

Happy Influence of a great Specific.

For the preservation or recovery of health and strength, the diet should be wholesome and nutritious. When it happens that the alimentary processes are disturbed by improper or half masticated food, the best remedy for the evil results of abusing the digestive organs is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most agreeable, prompt and gentle remedy for dyspepsia, and for the bilious and evacuative irregularities which result from it. The liver and bowels, in common with the stomach, experience its beneficent influences. The refuse of the system is carried off through its natural outlet, a healthy flow and secretion of the bile is promoted, and a powerful impetus is given to assimilation in consequence of its use. It healthfully stimulates the bladder and kidneys when they are inactive, and by its tonic and regulating action fortifies the system against malaria. Janl 4t

The Prodigal.

Inheritors of vast wealth are proverbially spendthrifts. The golden ore is dug from the mine, refined, and coined, by the labor of other hands and the sweat of other brows. Like children playing with an expensive toy, they can form no just estimate of its value. When the donor weighed it, he cast into the balance so many days of unremitting and fatiguing toil, so many anxious and sleepless nights, so much self-denial and so much care. But the inheritor into his balance throws only pleasure. The one, values it by what it cost him; the other, for what it will purchase. Like the prodigal in the Scripture parable, he thoughtlessly expends it to gratify the caprice and cravings of his nature. Then comes the last scene—the misery, the remorse, and the long and wearisome journey back to the home of frugal industry. But there are other prodigals. On her favorites our bounteous parent, Nature, has lavished her richest treasure, health. But the prodigal values it lightly, for it cost him naught, and recklessly squanders it in riotous living. Present pleasure obscures future want. Soon the curtain rises on the last scene. We see him helpless, impoverished,—the rich treasures of body and mind all lost,—in misery and despair. Remorseful Conscience holds up to him the mirror of memory. In his own reckless folly he perceives the cause of his present pain. He resolves to return. The journey is long and tedious, but if he perseveringly follows the right road, he will at length see the haven of his hopes in the distance, and Nature, seeing her invalid child afar off, will come out to meet him, and receive him back with love and blessing. To find the right road homeward, the suffering prodigal should read "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Therein it is completely mapped out, its landmarks all indicated and its milestones all numbered. [illegible] Price $1 50 (post-paid). Address the author and publisher, R. V. Pierce, M. PUBLISHER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

The last General Conference made the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE an official weekly Church paper, and directed that we should publish it. We found it better to leave the paper under the former management during the remainder of 1876. Beginning with January 1, 1877, we assume the entire management of the paper. Subscribers whose subscription have not expired, and have paid, will receive the paper to the full amount of their subscription. All other subscriptions are considered out, January 1, 1877. All money due for subscriptions to January 1st should be sent at once to assist the former publishers to meet unpaid bills.

In beginning the publication of the SOUTHWESTERN we ask, and shall expect, the most hearty co-operation of all the ministers within the patronizing territory. Without this co-operation the paper will fail. We propose that in proportion to its size the SOUTHWESTERN shall not be second to any paper in the Church. Our purpose will be to adapt in to the wants of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, and we hope that our ministers, not only in the South, but in the whole Church, who feel a special interest in our Southern work, will unite with us in making the paper a success financially.

We have adopted the cash system, and send papers only as paid for. This is better for all. We will gladly send specimen copies free to any who ask for them. If subscribers cannot pay for the whole year, let them pay for part, and the paper will be sent during the time paid for.

$2.00 will pay for the Southwestern one year, including postage. All ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents—to whom the paper will be sent for $1 a year.

YOUR PAPER FREE.

To any person sending us four subscribers and $8.00 we will send the SOUTHWESTERN one year. This offer holds good until April 1, 1877.

A Very Sick Woman.

While calling at the office of a friend the other day, we were handed a letter from which we read the following: Friend Craddock—My best friend, for thus I must address you, as you have done me more good than any one on earth under God, and I believe I owe my life to you, and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you have done. It would take several sheets of paper to enumerate all my sufferings, so will only speak of the most important. For four years I had hemorrhages, beginning in February and lasting until fall; palpitation of the heart, soreness of the breast bone and short ribs, pain in the back and lower part of the abdomen, cold hands and feet even in August, constipation and headache. I had tried doctors, far and near, but all in vain. Some said I had consumption, others liver disease. I quit all doctors and wrote to you for help, and obtained it from your great "East India Hemp." I depend upon you alone for a perfect restoration to health, and feel that I shall not be disappointed. Please send two more bottles, with Pills and Ointment, which I think will do the work. Yours truly,

A. E. RICHARD.

Little Keys.

Hearts, like doors, can ope with ease
To very, very little keys:
And don't forget that they are these—
"I thank you, sir," and "if you please."

Then let us watch these little things,
And so respect each other;
That not a word, or look, or tone,
May wound a friend or brother.

"How Much?" and "How Many?"

"How much was he worth when he died?"
"A couple of millions clear,
Plenty of railway stock beside,
And part of a mine, I hear.
There are few could follow where he did lead;
He died a very rich man, indeed!"

"But how many friends has he left?"
"Neither wife nor child, they say;
Not a heart that will feel bere t
At the news that it hears to-day;
Not a single soul for him to weep,
Not a heart his memory to keep."

"Then I think he was poor, my friend—
But a pauper millionaire,
Oh! it was but a beggarly end,
To have owned no single share
In the only wealth a man can save—
Love that follows him over the grave."

The Wine Cup.

Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine. They that go to seek mixed wine. Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in THE CUP; when it moveth itself aright AT the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.

Teach your Boys.

Teach them that a true lady may be found in calico quite as frequently as in velvet.

Teach them that a common school education, with common sense, is better than a college education without it.

Teach them that one good, honest trade, well mastered, is worth a dozen beggarly "professions."

Teach them that "Honesty is the best policy"—that 'tis better to be poor than to be rich on the profits of "crooked whisky," etc., and point out your precept by examples of those who are now suffering the torments of the doomed.

Teach them to respect their elders and themselves.

Teach them that, as they expect to be men some day, they cannot too soon learn to protect the weak and helpless.

Teach them by your own example that smoking even in moderation, though the least of the vices to which men are heirs, is disgusting to others and hurtful to themselves.

Teach them that to wear patched clothes is no disgrace, but to wear a "black eye" is.

Teach them that God is no respecter of sex, and that when he gave the seventh commandment, he ment it for them as well as for their sisters.

Teach them that by indulging their depraved appetites in the worst forms of dissipation they are not fitting themselves to become the husbands of pure girls.

Teach them that 'tis better to be an honest man seven days in the week than to be a professing Christian (?) one day and a villain six days.

Teach them that "God helps those who help themselves, and that He claims their parent love and is worthy of their strongest faith."

Do all this, and you will have brought them up "in the way they should go."

The Sons of Successful Men.

In the best of books we read of paradise where our first parents were placed. There were four things given to man in his condition of happiness. There were laws defining good from evil; there was the Sabbath which was to be kept holy. There was the work to be done—to till the ground and keep it. The first thing that God gave to man in the garden, was a happy home, when he put husband and wife together and there founded the first household. If you want to make your life happy, it is necessary to have work for brain and muscle, a Sabbath rightly kept, the sweetness and purity of a happy home, and obedience to law.—Rev. John Hall.

HOUSE AND FARM.

Keep the Work Well Up.

We have seen the servant and sometimes the housewife picking up chips, old pieces of wood and bark to make a fire to cook for harvest hands. The impression instantly formed was that the man of the house was indolent, or had failed to systematize his labor. When the season for planting, cultivating or gardening arrives, outside work must all be laid aside, for the events of a day some times entail a loss that months of work cannot repair. It is attending to the details in proper time that renders any business a success, and there is no industry requiring more brains, more diligence, more systematic management than framing. "Eternal diligence" is the watchword of all successful farmers.

All kinds of labor should be done at that time in which it will yield the largest returns. The work of winter outside of the regular feeding stock is not of that imperative kind belonging to other months of the year, and therefore winter affords an opportunity in which to prepare for the remaining portion of the year. Rails are to be hauled, wood provided, clearings made, improvements finished and a position reached from which the farmer will be amply ready to begin farming operations when the proper time and season arrives. A difference of ten days in planting often makes a difference of ten bushels of corn per acre, and this is no truer of this than of other crops. In order to avoid late planting, late tillage, and late harvests, it is necessary to keep every department of farm labor well up, and thus be ready to take every advantage that so satisfactory a state of affairs afford. The farmer who never permits his work to push him, and who does everything at the proper time "decently and in order," has the proud satisfaction of receiving a fair compensation for his time and labor.

There is a seed time and a harvest time, and to be successful we must comply with nature's laws. When the seed time occurs in March, the sowing must not be postponed until June. Promptitude in the commercial world is not more important than in the agricultural, and the men most honored in either are those who transact their business punctually and at the proper time. Success does not depend upon the amount of labor performed nor on the increased gross receipts alone, but upon the profits over and above the expense of production. Management is as essential as labor, and the triumphs of agriculture will accrue to those who think and plan as well as labor.—Journal of Agriculture.

Don't Whip a Frightened Horse.

Never whip your horse for becoming frightened at an object by the roadside; for if he sees a stump, a log, or a heap of tan-bark in the road, and while he is eyeing it carefully, and about to pass it, you strike him with the whip, it is the log, or the stump, or the tan-bark that is hurting him in his way of reasoning, and the next time he will be more frightened. Give him time to examine, and smell of all these objects, and use the bridle to assist you in bringing him carefully to these objects.—Exchange.

ARRANGE YOUR FENCES.—In most localities this important matter can now receive attention. It should not be left for the busy season, for then the head, hands and time of the farmer are fully employed. Beside, all fencing should be well done, and time is a necessity to thorough work. A poor, hastily constructed fence is a nuisance of the first class, and such fences are too frequently found in our agricultural communities.

We have often urged the adoption of portable fences for the inside divisions of the farm. They are cheaply and expeditiously made and are efficient and durable. They can be made of any material the farmer may have at hand, which is also an item of considerable importance.

LET YOUR CHILDREN READ.—We have often noticed that the sons of farmers, who have constant access to reading matter of a suitable character, become first-class citizens, and are, nearly always, leaders in the communities in which they reside. The parent who neglects to provide this food for the mind does his child a grievous wrong, for he virtually robs him not only of the opportunity of becoming "well to do" in the world but of being influential, honored and respected in the highest circles of society. The intelligence gained from reading good books and papers, even by the light of pine-knots, cannot be estimated by any known standard of values. Dollars and cents are trifles of mean value in comparison.

DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 13, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

JNO. P. BENTLEY,
Chief of Public Debt Division, 1st Auditor's office, Treasury Dep't Washington, D. C.

National Hotel, Washington, Dec. 2, '74.
Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

GENTS.—I very cheerfully state that I have used Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, prepared by you, with decided benefit, and although yet somewhat troubled with rheumatism, I am in much better condition than I was some months ago, which improvement I alone attribute to this remedy.

Yours, truly, ALEX. H. STEPHENS,

HIGHEST HONORS
AT THE
UNITED STATES
CENTENNIAL
World's Exhibition, 1876.

MASON & HAMLIN'S
Cabinet Organs,
Unanimously Assigned the
"FIRST RANK
IN THE
SEVERAL REQUISITES"
Of such Instruments.

The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the First Rank in the several requisites of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the only instruments of this general class awarded this rank. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as it is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition, so that it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The difference in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the reports of the Judges, from which the following is an extract:

"The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company's exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums show instruments of the First Rank in the several requisites of Instruments of the Class, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."—Signed by all the Judges. The Mason & Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the only ones assigned this rank. The triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and

AT THE LAST.

The stream is calmest when it nears the tide
And Sorrow and repentance flit the crowd,
And birds most musical at the close of day,
And saints divinest when they pass away.

Morning is holy, but a holier charm
Lies folded close in Evening's robe of balm,
And weary souls must ever love her best
For morning calls to toil, but night to rest.

She comes from Heaven, and on her wings doth bear
A holy fragrance like the breath of prayer;
Footsteps of angels follow her train,
To shed the starry eyes of day in peace.

All things are hushed before her as she
O'er earth and sky her mantle of repose;
There is a calmer beauty and a power
That morning knows not, in the Evening hour.

Until the morning, we must weep and toil—
Plant the rough furrow, dig the weedy soil—
Tread with our feet our rough and thorny
And bear the heat and burden of the day.

Oh! when our sun is setting may we glide,
Like summer evening down the golden tide;
And leave behind us as we pass away,
Sweet, starry twilight round our sleeping clay.

Resolved. That the agents be requested to send the Southwestern to all the ministers of the Conference holding an appointment, and the Presiding Elders are hereby instructed to collect the dollar from all who have not already paid and forward the same at once.

H. R. Revels offered the following which was adopted by a unanimous rising vote:

Whereas, Rev. J. C. Hartzell has, by rare efforts and sacrifices, published the Southwestern Christian Advocate, and ably and successfully edited it for four years, making it a great blessing to our preachers and people, especially in the Southwest.

Therefore Resolved. That we do hereby respectfully ask the Book Committee to appoint Dr. Hartzell, editor of the above paper.

The following was offered on the subject of fraternity, signed by H. R. Revels, S. G. Johnson and J. Campbell:

Resolved. 1. That as a Conference we approve the action of the Cape May Commission, by which formal fraternity has been established between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and that we will everywhere seek to carry out the spirit of true fraternity in the prosecution of our work.

Resolved. 2. That we rejoice in the true meaning of that action, which as we understand it is, that each of the above Churches has the legal, moral and religious right everywhere to preach the Gospel, establish churches and prosecute their various denominational enterprises for the promotion of the Redeemer's kingdom, in Christian harmony and fraternity with each other.

Bishop Wiley commended the resolutions, and stated that already much good had resulted from the establishment of fraternity. He spoke of the kindness he had received in the city. Each church is now to prosecute its work in its own way in all parts of the country—South as well as North

Rev. W. S. Harrison, of M. E. Church South, being present addressed the Conference concurring the sentiments of the Bishop. He read with great pleasure the Cape May report when published. He had felt that there had been too much of a tendency among newspapers in both churches to publish the bad instead of the good things said and done on both sides.

Rev. Dr. Rust made a most happy address, stating his experience while visting the Georgia Conferences where a most fraternal spirit prevailed. He had told the Georgia friends that he was anxious for fraternity, but it must not be at the expense of the black man. He was glad to know that the good men of the South were ready to unite with us in our work and among our colored people. He rejoiced in the growing spirit of fraternity and should labor and pray for the time when unity and peace should prevail among all christians, and when common cause should be made against sin in every form.

The resolutions were adopted by a unanimous rising vote.

The Committee on Freedmens' Aid Society reported giving a summary of the great work done by that Society in establishing and supporting schools in the South. The Corresponding Secretary was highly commended for his devotion to the great work. Adopted.

Committee on Sunday Schools made an able report. The Sunday School Union under the leadership of Dr. J. H. Vincent is doing a work the importance of which cannot be estimated. The holding of Sunday School Institutes was recommended—and all the ministers now pledged to take the Sunday School Union collection. Adopted Adjourned to meet at 2 p. m. Benediction by Rev. W. S. Harrison.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at 2 p. m. C. L. Crump made opening prayer.

Committee on Church Extension reported that the work of the Society had been of incalcuable worth to our Southern work. Our people in many places where now we have beautiful chapels would have been without churches had it not been for the aid of the Board of Church Extension. Every minister should not fail to take the annual collection for the Board of Church Extension. Adopted.

The Conference Board of Church Extension was elected as follows: W. W. Hooper, President; J. G. Johnson, Vice President; J. M. Shumport, Recording Secretary; C. A. Weaver, Correrponding Secretary; A. C. McDonald, Treasurer. Managers: M. Adams, G. Wiley Wells, Willis Tunstall, James Wells.

Bishop Wiley requested Dr. Rust to occupy the Chair, and, upon motion, Mrs. Rust was requested to address the Conference. She took her stand in the altar, and gave an interesting and instructive address on the work and mission of woman. The civilization of any people may be judged by its homes. Women make home what it is, and hence, in all ages a people's advancement is gauged by the elevation of its women. Among savages women do the drudgery. As a people rises in the scale of intelligence woman rises until among the most civilized nations she takes her place side by side with man, as his equal. Mrs. Rust dwelt upon the sacredness of the marriage vow as laid down by God in his law. She drew a picture of what a home ought to be, and exhorted the women before her to seek to make their homes worthy of God's people. Mrs. Rust spoke of the movement among Christian ladies of the North to help the Freedmen, and predicted that soon a large number of Christian ladies would be sent down to labor among them.

After sundry reports and an eloquent and instructive address by Bishop Wiley to the Conference, the following appointments were announced and the Conference adjourned.

A Thrilling Scene.

"Not far from 30,000 cavalry were in line. A little child—a girl—of not more than four years, standing in the front row of spectators, either from fright or some other cause, rushed out into the open field just as a squadron of hussars came sweeping around from the main body. They had made the detour for the purpose of saluting the empress, whose carriage was drawn up in that part of the parade-ground, Down came the flying squadron, charging at a mad gallop—down directly upon the child. The mother was paralyzed, as were others, for there could be no rescue from the line of spectators. The Empress uttered a cry of horror, for the child's destruction seemed inevitable—and such terrible destruction—the trampling to death by a thousand iron hoofs. Directly under the feet of the horses was the little one—another instant must seal its doom—when a stalwart hussar, who was in the front line, without slackening his speed, threw himself over by the side of his horse's neck, seized and lifted the child, and placed it in safety upon his saddle-bow; and this he did without changing his pace or breaking the corrrct alignment of the squadron. Ten thousand voices hailed with rapturous applause the gallant deed, and other thousands applauded when they knew. Two women there were who could only sob forth their gratitude in broken accents—the mother and the Empress. And a proud and happy moment must it have been for the hussar when his Emperor, taking from his own breast the richly-enameled cross of the order of Maria Theresa, hung it upon the breast of his brave and gallant trooper."

Anecdote of Astor.

"Do you ever trust, Mr. Astor?" inquired Mr. K.

"I do not trust strangers, sir," was the reply, "unless they furnish me with satisfactory city reference."

"Then," said Mr. K, "the skins I have selected must suffice this time," and paying for the same he departed.

In the afternoon of the same day, just before the sailing of the New Bedford packet, the young trader returned for his lots of furs. Throwing the whole pack on his back he left the store, but he had not proceeded a dozen yards when Mr. A., called his name, bidding him come back.

"Sir," said Mr. A., "you can have credit for any amount of goods you require, provided they are to be found in my store."

"But," stammered Mr. K., "but, my dear sir, I can give you no city references—I am a stranger here."

"I ask no recommendation," responded the rich merchant, "than that already furnished by yourself. The man who is not above his business need never hesitate to apply to John Jacob Astor for credit."

Thus commenced a trade between two merchants which was continued to the mutual satisfaction and advantage of both for a long term of years. Mr. K. is now one of the most eminent capitalists in New Bedford.

To Young Men.

Let the business of every one alone and attend to your own. Don't buy what you don't want. Use every hour to advantage, and study to make a leisure hour useful. Look over your books regularly. If a stroke of misfortune comes over your business, retrench, work harder but never fly the track. Confront difficulties with unflinching perseverance and you will be honored, but shrink and you will be despised. Seek to acquire the power of continuous application, without which you can not expect success. If you do this, you will be able to perceive the difference which it creates between you and those who have not such habits. You will not count yourself, nor will they count you as one of them. Thus you will find yourself emerging into the higher regions of intellectual and earnest men—men who are capable of making a place for themselves, instead of standing idly gaping, desiring a place.—Co-operative Journal.

Preaching at Ninety-two!

A correspondent of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, in a letter describing the recent session of South Georgia Conference, says:

The venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce was present, and when his name was called for the seventy-second time, he arose and gave us one of those fatherly talks for which he is famous—full of wisdom and sound advice, tender and loving. The Bishop (Dr. George F. Pierce) being unable to preach, selected his father to fill his place Sunday morning. It was a beautiful sight to witness the affectionate admiration of the son, himself sixty-five years old, as he listened to the sage counsel of the father, bending under the pressure of the cares of ninety-two years. We will never behold the scene again.

A Foot Lamp.

One of the most interesting things in the Holy Land is the fact that one melts everywhere, in daily life, things that illustrate the Word of the Lord. The streets of Jerusalem are very narrow, and no one is allowed to go out at night without a light. Throw open your lattice in the evening and look out: you will see what seem to be little stars twinkling on the pavement. You will hear the clatter of sandals, as the late traveler rattles along. As the party approaches, you will see that he has a little lamp fastened to his foot, to make his step a safe one. In an instant the verse comes to your memory, written in that city three thousand years ago—"Thy Word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."—Ex.

A Christian work of art of the fourth century has recently been added to the museum of the Vatican Library. It is a portion of a glass tazza, decorated with painted figures representing the baptism of a child, who is placed under a vessel, from which streams of water issue. The mystic dove, with outspread wings and olive-branch in its beak, descends upon the head of the child. A figure on the right of the child, dressed in tunic, pallum, and girdle, acts as the officiating priest, his name, "Mirax," being placed upon his neck. Near the child's head also is the word "Alba," probably indicating the name. This tazza was probably an offering from relations or friends on the occasion of the baptism of a child in early Christian times.

A Mistake.

Rev. J. W. Dunn, Presiding Elder of Greenwood District, Mississippi, by mistake gave some one of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference, a $50 bill instead of a $5 bill. The mistake occurred at Macon during the closing work of the Conference, on Monday. Bro. Dunn would be under lasting obligations to any one who could help him to secure the lost money. His address is Greenwood, Miss.

Rev. Dr. McCarthy Pastor of Ames Church, New Orleans, delivered an eloquent and instructive lecture in his church to a large audience last Sunday night on, "The future of our country." We hope to give our readers portions of the lecture. Dr. McCarthy has already made a very favorable impression in this city, and many things indicate that the important church of which he is pastor, will rapidly increase in numbers and strength under his care.

Last Sabbath morning we attended divine services at the Carondelet street, M. E. Church South in this city. The Pastor Rev. Dr. Mathews cordially welcomed us to his pulpit and we participated in the service.

The Pastor's sermon was drawn from incidents connected with the transfiguration of Christ, and very strongly it was proven and urged, that transfiguration states in the Christian life were exceptional, and that the great Christian life in this world was in the valley; where [illegible] the poor, the halt, the blind [illegible]. Jesus went down [illegible] to meet and [illegible] possessed of the devil; so Christians are to rather seek to help needy humanity, then to stay on [illegible] of transfiguration.

Dr. Mathews is the most successful Southern Methodist pastor in this city. After every sermon he opens the doors of the church, and nearly every Sabbath some unite by letter or by profession. One thing [illegible] especially [illegible] the congregational singing. The organ gave the tune, a [illegible] voice led, and the whole congregation joined.

Mississippi Conference.

The ninth session of the Mississippi Conference met in Macon Jan. 18, 1877.

Macon is an enterprising railroad town of twenty-five hundred inhabitants. We arrived there Friday morning, the 19th, after a three hundred miles ride by rail via Mobile. The depot is a mile away from the center of the town, and our church is nearly as far from the center in the opposite direction. The rain had been falling for several days, and as a result the mud was—to use the expression of a Maconite, who seemed more anxious to use a big word than to study its meaning—"mighty numerous." Four horses gave propelling power enough to drag the omnibus to the hotel. We were the only passenger in the vehicle. The "conductor" had with him two "friends." So it took an omnibus, four horses, one conductor, and two friends who paid nothing, to get one lone Methodist preacher to the hotel; for all of which we were asked to pay twenty-five cents. Cheap enough. After breakfast another ride brought us to the Church.

Our people have a good Church building, large and well furnished—a credit both to them and Macon. The house was full, nearly a hundred preachers occupying the front part of the Church. Business was well under way. Bishop Wiley has an excellent faculty of pushing Conference work without seeming to hurry things at all. Dr. McDonald was at the Secretary's table where he has presided for eight successive Conferences. Dr. Revels, Revs. J. G. Johnson, J. W. Dunn, M. Adams, L. Bradford, were all on hand, looking well after the work of their respective Districts. The Conference has a large number of rising young men, a good proportion of whom, have spent more or less time in Shaw University.

The SOUTHWESTERN received a hearty endorsement, and its representative a cordial reception. The report elsewhere speaks, we are certain, the sentiments of the Conference. We shall expect at least a thousand subscribers from Mississippi during 1877.

Shaw University rightfully occupies much of the thought and time of each session of the Mississippi Conference. President Hooper is enthusiastic in his work, and a good report comes from all concerning the work done in teaching the past year. A new building is being erected. As usual in our educational work in the South, the Freedmens' Aid Society through Dr. Rust comes to the rescue. The building committee were embarassed and Dr. Rust gave his check for $1900, and in addition proposes to give a dollar for every one raised by the Conference toward carrying the work on. To this the Conference responded by resolving to raise $5000 the coming year. The amount was apportioned to the several districts.

The night services during the session were of great interest. In spite of the mud and rain the house was always crowded. On Friday night occured the anniversary of the Missionary Society. The addresses of Drs. Rust and McDonald were capital; full of inspiration and instruction.

On Sabbath morning Bishop Wiley preached to a large audience in the Court House. Among the auditors was Judge Ames, a brother of Bishop Ames, whose wife is a sister of Gen. Longstreet. They tell some queer stories of how the Judge loves money and plans to save it. All unite in saying that he is one of the wealthiest and most strictly just and intelligent citizens of Macon. His wife is a devout member of the Southern Methodist Church. He was formerly, but is not now a member of any church. At the same hour Bishop Wiley preached in the Court House, Dr. Rust preached in the Southern Methodist Church. Both efforts were highly commended. At three P. M. we preached in our Church, and after the sermon occured the ordination services. At night Dr. and Mrs. Rust were to have spoken, but so terrific was the rain and storm that they did not attend. A good audience was however, present, and the [illegible] were profitable. We were to have preached in the Southern [illegible] but the storm prevented people from attending. [illegible] of Macon, led by [illegible] of kindness extended [illegible] hospitality to the Conference [illegible]. Presiding [illegible] and Pastor [illegible] after the [illegible] of Confer[illegible] Rev. W. E. [illegible], pastor of the M. E. Church South, took a prominent part in providing entertainment for Bishop Wiley and visiting friends. The Bishop was to have been his guest but the illness of his wife prevented. The Cabinet sessions were held in his church. T. J. Pattey, Esq., a prominent merchant of the place and a member of the Southern Church entertained Bishop Wiley. Dr. H. A. Minor gave Dr. Rust and his wife an excellent home, and with Dr. McDonald we were generously entertained by Dr. S. V. D. Hill. These courtesies from our Southern friends indicate that the era of good feeling toward the Methodist Episcopal Church and her work in the South is rapidly hastening. We have every reason to believe that this Conference in Macon will result in lasting good both to the people of that city and our Church in their midst.

Dr. Harrison attended the sessions frequently, assisted in the ordination services Sunday afternoon and in every way exhibited a truly fraternal spirit toward our preachers and people. His remarks on fraternity to the Conference, reported elsewhere, give the key to his line of action. We are very sure that if men of his type ruled in the chief councils of the Southern Church, all anti-fraternal sentiment in that communion toward the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South would soon die out.

Eaton Logwood and Primus Johnson.

On the tenth day of October 1876, shortly before the late Presidential election, several masked men rode up to the gate in front of the residence of Eaton Logwood, in Ouchita parish, Louisiana. They were armed with shot guns. Mr. Logwood was sitting with his back to the gate fixing his wagon, and his little child standing on the door-steps cried out; "Papa those men are coming again!" He turned and saw pointed at him a double-barrelled shot gun. He sprang hoping to get round the corner out of range of the deadly weapon, but he failed and six buckshot entered his body. His brother-in-law, Primus Johnson was sitting a short distance from him on a pile of boards with his back to the gate when the men rode up. He was holding his child in his arms playing with it. Before he was aware of danger some one from the masked party shot him. He sprang and ran round the house, living only long enough to hand his child to his sister Mrs. Logwood, and then dropped dead at her feet. Eaton Logwood too ran around his house and staggering, fell. He was brought to this city, and after weeks of suffering died a few days since.

Eaton Logwood and Primus Johnson were colored men, and Republicans. In all other respects they were respected. Johnston had been a Methodist local preacher for twenty years. Logwood owned his own plantation, made forty or fifty bales of cotton a year, was a man of thrift, was a Steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He had mostly with his own hands and means, built a church on his place where a membership of fifty Methodists had been gathered. He had been active in building a school-house on his place. He was one of a few colored men who went out into that neighborhood to settle and get homes and build up an intelligent respectable community of colored people. He was less than thirty, with a good manly face. His wife is an intelligent woman, who has night and day cared for her dying husband, and is now on her way home to bury his body on their own plantation.

On Logwood's arrival in the city a friend asked us to go and see him. We sat by his bedside and heard his story. No man could listen to him and not be convinced that his words were true. His life had been threatened, and only a few days before he had gone to Monroe and reported his fears, but a friend had told him that surely if he would go home and quietly attend to his business he would be safe. He gave the whole account, and his reasons for believing that because he was a Republican, he was shot by members of the "Democratic rifle clubs," in a manner that left no doubt in our mind that he told the truth. We inquired of his Presiding Elder and Pastor, and from prominent white men of both parties now in this city, and against him or Johnson no words of criticism have we heard. These men were shot because they were leaders among the colored people because they were Republicans.

The night before Logwood died he sent for us, and we went and prayed with him. His mind was perfectly clear, and his faith in Jesus complete. He said he was prepared to die. He had hoped to live and spoke of the church, the school and his home, but if God willed it he was ready to go. We asked: "Eaton, do you bear any malice in your heart against your murderers?" He answered. "No, if they were here today and I could do them a favor I would do it."

Eaton Logwood and Primus Johnson died martyrs to their conviction, as truly as did Cranmer and Latimer, and their triumphs, by faith in Christ, over death and their murderers was as great.

Bishop Wiley.

Bishop Wiley for the first time has presided at the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, and we record with pleasure the very general satisfaction with his administration, and high esteem with which his counsels were received. Bishop Wiley is a quiet undemonstrative man, who listens to advice from all sides, and then in a manner equally quiet, but with a firmness that is unmistakably decided. As a preacher he captivated our people. His eloquence is not impassioned. He makes no attempt at oratorical effect; but he is nevertheless eloquent, and his sermons make a profound impression, instructing and inspiring all who hear them.

We only regret that he could not have remained longer in our city. He preached but to one of our congregations, besides not being able to accept an invitation to preach for our Southern brethren. It seems to us wrong that this great city could not have the presence of one of our Bishops at least two or three weeks once a year.

During one evening of the Bishop's stay, Hon. E. Heath and lady threw open the spacious parlors of their residence and invited their friends to spend the evening with Bishop Wiley. A large and excellent company gathered, and the evening passed delightfully.

Counting the Electoral Vote.

The bill referred to last week, by which a Committee of fifteen was to be created to which was to be referred all cases where two sets of certificates for election came from the same State, has become a law, and the President has sent to Congress a message explaining his reasons for signing the bill.

It is a dangerous precedent for Congress to assume the power to refer the settlement of the electoral vote of a State to any other power than is given by the Constitution. But in the present emergency, when neither Presidential candidate could claim an unquestioned title to his election, some unusual method must be applied. Between possible, if not probable, war and a bad precedent, the nation will choose the latter always. Especially is this wise when the remedy applies only to this one case, and the possible contingencies of the future can be provided for by legislation before another election.

Two vital points are now settled. First, all danger of a war has passed, and our serious Presidential difficulty is to be settled peacefully. Second, whoever is made President will be accepted by all the people.

Let all the people thank God. The second centennial year begins auspiciously.

The bill provides that on the first Thursday in February, 1877, both houses of Congress shall assemble in the hall of Representatives, the President of the Senate presiding. That two tellers shall be previously appointed from the members of each house. That the presiding officer shall open all envelopes purporting to contain the certificates of the several electoral votes and shall hand these certificates and lists of votes to the tellers who shall then count the votes and report the result to the presiding officer, and he shall thereupon announce the state of the vote and names of the persons elected. In case of but one set of votes from a State, objections to the certificates shall be called for, which objections must be made in writing, and signed by at least one Senator and one Representative. All such objections shall be considered and voted upon in each house separately, and the vote of no such State shall be thrown out, except by the concurence of both houses.

In case of more than one set of votes from any State, objections to counting either set shall be made in writing, signed by at least one Senator and one Representative. Such objections shall thereupon be submitted to a commission of fifteen persons, who shall be chosen as follows: On the Tuesday preceding the first Thursday in February, each house shall select five of its members, and on the same day the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States now assigned to the first third, eighth and ninth curcuits (two Democrats and two Republicans) shall select, in some manner, another Associate Justice. These fifteen members shall constitute said commission, and its president shall be the Justice having been longest commissioned. The decision of a majority of this commission upon contesting votes shall be submitted to the joint houses. This decision shall be final unless objections be made in writing, signed by at least five Senators and five Representatives. Such objections shall be voted upon by the houses seperately and only their concurrence shall overrule the decision of the commission.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

To the Senate of the United States:

I follow the example heretofore occasionally presented of communicating, in this mode, my approval of the act to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice President and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D., 1877, because of my appreciation of the imminent peril to the institutions of the country, from which in my judgment, the acts affords a wise and constitutional means of escape.

For the first time in the history of our country, under the Constitution as it is now, dispute exists with regard to the result of the election of the Chief Magistrate of the nation. It is understood that upon the disposition of the disputes touching the electoral votes cast at the late election by one or more of the States, depends the question whether one or the other of the candidates for the Presidency is the lawful Chief Magistrate. The importance of having clearly ascertained by a procedure, regulated by law, which of the two citizens have been selected, and of having the right to this high office recognized and cheerfully agreed in by all the people of the Republic, cannot be overestimated, and leads me to express to Congress and to the nation my great satisfaction at the adoption of a measure that affords an orderly means of decision of a gravely exciting question. While the history of our country, in its earlier periods, shows that the President of the Senate has counted the votes and declared their standing, our whole history shows that in no instance of doubt—of dispute—has he exercised the power of deciding, and that the two houses of Congress have disposed of all such doubts and disputes, although in no instance, hitherto, have they been such that their decision could essentially have affected the result. For the first time, then, the government of the United States is now brought to meet the question, as one vital to the result, and this under conditions not the best calculated to produce an agreement or to induce a calm feeling in the several branches of the Government, or among the people of the country. In a case where, as now, the result is involved, it is the highest duty of the law-making power to provide in advance a constitutional, orderly and just method of executing the constitution in this most interesting and critical of its provisions.

After further discussing the subject the President says:

The country is agitated; it needs and desires peace and quiet and harmony between all parties and all sections; its industries are arrested, labor unimployed, capital idle and enterprise paralyzed, by reason of the doubt and uncertainty of a double claim to the Chief Magistracy of the nation. It wants, to be assured that the result of the election will be accepted without resistance from the supporters of the disappointed candidate, and that its highest officer shall not hold his place, with a questionable title or right. Believing that the bill will secure these ends, I give it my signature.

U. S. GRANT.

Under the provisions of the bill the following have been selected to constitute the Commission: From the Senate: Messrs. Edmunds, Morton, Frelinghuysen, Bayard and Thurman. From the House: Messrs. Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield and Hoar. From the Supreme Court, Judges Clifford, Strong, Miller and Field. Of these fourteen seven are Democrats and seven Republicans. The four Judges have not selected the fifteenth member of the Commission.

The Northwestern says:—The first number of the SOUTHWESTERN printed under the new General Conference arrangement by Messrs. Nelson & Phillips has reached us. The paper has a new head-letter, new title letters, and new type throughout. Rev. J. C. Hartzell remains as editor, and right royal good work has he done in the issue before us. There is abundant room for such a paper in New Orleans, and its value to our Southwestern work, if properly estimated, would give it ten thousand subscribers immediately.

Dr. and Mrs. Rust in the South.

The visit of Dr. R. S. Rust, Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmens Aid Society, and his wife, to the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences just held, was a blessing to both bodies.

Of the Doctor our readers know so much that it is hardly necessary that we should write. Ever since the organization of our Southern Conferences he has been a frequent visitor and has always been welcome. His sermons and addresses are always good and frequently powerful. His hearty interest in the Freedmens Aid work which has led him to devote his life and means to it, gives him at once the hearts of our Southern ministers and people. Besides in these last days the Doctor seems renewing his youth. We doubt if ever he spoke with greater effect than during the past few days at these Conferences.

Of Mrs. Rust our readers know comparatively little, so we will say more. She is a lady of rare culture, and extensive travel and means, who it is evident enters with her whole soul upon the work, so well and long represented by her husband. She feels for our colored people in the South in their poverty and distress, and is anxious to do them all the good in her power. She weilds the pen with grace and ease, and the whole Church will learn much of our Southern work and its wants from her. She is a fluent speaker, and as she stood before the twelve hundred people in Union Chapel in this city and plead with the women to know better their duties and responsibilities, we felt that truly God had qualified her for a great work in her chosen field.

The special mission of Mrs. Rust in the South is to prepare the way for the work of Christian activity among the Freedmen. Of this movement we have spoken before. The purpose is to organize under the direction of the Freedmens Aid Society a systematic missionary work among the freedmen. It is a good work and may God bless those planing it.

Dr. Rust and Mrs. Rust went from Macon, Miss, by way of Marshall, Texas, to attend the Arkansas Conference to meet next week in Fort Smith.

Do You Own Your own Home?

Do you own your own home? If not, you should. Your income may be small, but out of that income you are paying from five to fifteen dollars, yes, even twenty and twenty-five dollars rent every month, and after paying that rent, getting something to eat, and a little clothing to wear, you say there is nothing left. You are discouraged, and if you ever entertained the hope of owning a home 'twas given up long ago, and you plod along, day after day, and year after year, without a thought of anything better all your life. Stop right here and look into this matter. There is something better for you. Scarcely a man or woman who reads the SOUTHWESTERN, but in addition to rent, food and clothing, spends something every month foolishly. 'Tis five cents a day for a glass of beer or grog, if you please, the same for a little tobacco, something at the peanut stand; the wife must have this bright ribbon or that raffle, this breastpin or that pair of cheap ear-rings. You are cheated into buying all this trash because it costs so little that it will never be missed. Then, there is to be a picnic. Well, you have been working long and hard, and begin to pity yourself, and think it is about time you took a day for rest,—then, the tickets are only fifty cents. Yes, you'll go! The ticket is purchased, but now you must have a lunch to take along, then there's a new dress to be bought, for of course you must look as well as any, and before you get through you have spent all the way from one to five dollars. No wonder you've nothing with which to begin the purchase of a home!

In this Southern country where land is to be had for a trifle, you can, one and all, own your own home. And how much more of a man you would feel and with what new life and vitality you would work on day after day, knowing that you was doing something towards getting a home of your own, for your wife and your children, where there would be no more smashing of furniture in moving or loss of time in packing, neither spending of a few dollars for a moving cart; but all this money to be put instead into the paying for your lot, then your house, and then, into making home beautiful and attractive.

You who have an income large enough to pay from fifteen to twenty-five dollars rent, be in earnest! look about you, and if living in the city, select a neighborhood, then quietly ascertain where there is a lot and small house for sale on monthly payments. Arrange to buy, and move into it at once, and stop that rent. At fifteen dollars per month, you will pay one hundred and eighty dollars a year on your new home, add to this the nickles foolishly spent and you'll pay two hundred dollars and interest, and have a nice home too.

If you don't understand the making out of deeds and notes, be sure to get an honest man that does, to look after it for you.

Those of you whose income will let you pay but five dollars rent, save your nickles, and commence to make monthly payments on a small lot of ground.

There is land to be had every-where, both in town and in the country, by paying five dollars a month.

If you prefer living in the country, begin making payments on a single acre—if you cannot do more. Work away with a will, and every day make something, if it be but a few cents towards that, three or five dollar payment at the end of the month. Next fence it, then build a little house and get into it as soon as possible, thus saving your rent. Commence a garden for family use, working it at odd hours so as not to interfere with your regular labor—and even before getting into your new home, you'll be more of a man than you ever thought of being, and be more thought of than ever before by those about you, for you are now lighter-hearted consequently a better neighbor. You manifest a new thriftiness and will be more trusted and respected. Your wife feels a new pride in her household work and will make a more loving companion. The children too will feel the change and prove less troublesome.

As an owner of property, you become a tax-payer and will feel a new interest in the political management of matters. You will think more, and when you speak, your words will have a new meaning and force. The benefit of owning a home of your own is greater than can be written both to the owner, and the community in which you lives.

Dr. Godman's Return.

Dr. Godman, President of the New Orleans University, has returned from the North, and is again at his post, his health greatly improved and his enthusiasm for his work undimished. Mrs. Godman is detained in Philadelphia by illness, but hopes to return South soon.

As our readers know Dr. Godman has been in Philadelphia raising money for the University and our Orphan's Home. Besides $3500 reported to Dr. Rust, under whose direction he labored, the Doctor reports subscriptions amounting to $2,500 toward paying the $5,000 mortgage held by the Freedmens' Aid Society on the Orphans Home property. He hopes to return to Philadelphia in June, after the close of school and prosecute the good work.

And now Dr. Godman wants to correspond with a hundred young men and women in the Southwest who expect to preach or teach, and want to attend a first-class school. Address him corner of Camp and Race streets, New Orleans.

THE Methodist Recorder (Pittsburgh) gladdens us this week by presenting itself in a bright, new dress. Between the words "Methodist Recorder" of the heading is represented a human hand holding a pen which is making the final letter of "Mutual Rights." The brethren of the press will concede to the editor, Dr. Alexander Clark, that motto—he is a respecter of the opinions and rights of others. He knows, too, how to make a religious newspaper. His articles are short, pithy and full of seed thought. He asks his contributors to abridge narratives of local church work, and send him "words of helpfulness to all who are away from Christ," "such winning thoughts as may reach poor sinners in their darkness and distress." May the hand that has written the "Mutual Rights" motto long retain the editorial pen.

But Bro. Clark must allow us one suggestion by way of criticism. His nice heading has the word "THE" set over it—a fashion that is old and that we think should be absolete. As an editor he is progressive, his first article in this number has the caption "Editems;" in fact in some things we think him a little too progressive; in his Methodism for instance he has progressed entirely beyond the Episcopacy.

Mr. Moody sometimes demolishes pleas which base themselves on his example in a most positive and effectual manner. In a late address he said: "I heard a young man just converted say yesterday, 'I can be as good a Christian out of the Church as in it;' and he added, 'Mr. Moody himself is not a Church-member.' Now I wish to say that I am a Church-member, that I have been a Church-member since I was eighteen years of age, and, next to the possession of my Savior, I prize the visible Church. It has been every thing to me, and I urge you to confess your Savior immediately before the world, and have your name enrolled on the records of some Church."

Another shooting affair has occurred in our streets. This time it is Drs. Moses and Walker, two well-known dentists. They had been partners, and disagreed. Dr. Moses made the attack with a rawhide. Dr. Walker resisted and was getting the better of his antagonist, when Moses drew a pistol and shot Walker. It was supposed at first that the wounded man could live but a few hours; but hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

What is the matter of Memphis, Tenn? On the 16th of January, South Memphis, during a storm had a shower of snakes. Specimens of the small snakes have been forwarded to Professor Henry of the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, at his request.

And such horrible murders as have been committed in that city lately! Within a few days three of unusual atrocity have been reported.

Personal.

Bishop Haven has arrived safely in Monrovia, Liberia.

Hon. B. Hill goes to the United States Senate from Georgia.

Alexander H. Stephens is seriously ill. He thinks his end is near.

Dr. J. Vincent goes soon to the Pacific coast to build Sunday-school Institutes.

Rev. J. S. Barger, an old and honored minister of the M.E. Church, recently died in Bloomington, Ills.

Judge Davis of the United States Supreme Court has been elected U. S. Senator from Illinois as successor of Gen. Logan.

Dr. Wm. M. Daily, presiding Elder of the North New Orleans District is lying very ill in this city. Last week his recovery was thought doubtful, but as we go to press the indications are more favorable.

The Situation in Louisiana.

The status quo is maintained in Louisiana. The Nicholls government sought to carry the point that the [illegible] installations of officers did not interrupt the status quo, and put its officers in the offices of Ouachita and Natchitoches parishes. President Grant after investigating the matter, decided that the status quo had not been interfered with in Ouachita, but had been in Natchitoches. The South Carolina Muddle.

The electoral vote of South Carolina is now conceded by all parties to be for Hayes and Wheeler. But the State matters seem to get more and more mixed.

In the matter of deciding whether Chamberlin or Hampton is the rightful governor, a case was made and brought before Circuit Judge Carpenter, who has decided that neither Chamberlain nor Hampton have been legally inaugurated, and that the attempt at inaugurating Chamberlain not being legal cannot be construed as being his resignation, and therefore he is still Governor, holding over. The Democrats have appealed to the Supreme Court of the State. But is understood that that tribunal will take the same view. What the result will be cannot be told, but judging from former decisions of the Supreme Court it looks as if a re-canvass of the vote under its direction would put in Hampton.

The February number of the National Repository has been received. In excellence and variety it surpasses the first number, though the illustrations are not quite so good. Professor Wells writes an entertaining description of the "Turkish Provinces." Dr. Peirce contributes an appreciative sketch of 'Mary Lyon and her Seminary;" the story of "That Boy" continues to grow in interest; the article on "The Brazilian Emperor," by Dr. D. P. Kidder, gives a nearer view of His Majesty's life and character, and a pathetic poem, by Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, on "The Edelweiss," will be read with tender emotion. Two or three selected articles show good judgment and taste, while the Editorial Miscellany will prove attractive to nearly every reader. A thoughtful and well-considered essay on "The American Nation," by the Editor, is deserving of special mention, as also is one of his Ex Cathedra pronunciamentos, on "The Missionary Work of the Church."

Methodist Episcopal Church.

Boston is soon to have a new Methodist Church edifice, built after the most approved plans. The seats are to be graded as in an amphithestre, and the two galleries will extend around three sides. It is estimated that 2,500 people can be seated comfortably. The chapel and Sunday school room will be so arranged that they can be thrown open in connection with the main audience room, increasing the seating capacity to nearly 4,000. The whole cost of site and Church will be $125,000.

The London (England) Methodist Recorder says:

Methodism in America, it should not be forgotten, has an episcopacy of its own. And of the influence to which its bishops have attained, not by peerages and palaces, but by apostolic labors and success, pleasing proof was seen at Philadelphia this year. At the opening of the Centennial Exhibition Bishop Simpson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the presence of President Grant and his cabinet, the judges of the land, the ambassadors of foreign powers, and distinguished visitors from other countries, including the emperor and empress of Brazil and the Japanese commission, was selected to offer up the opening prayer, and to be the mouthpiece of the American people in acknowledging their dependence upon God. This is a pleasing fact, not only as a national recognition of God, but as a testimony to the power and influence of Methodism in the United States.

A Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school congress is proposed at Chicago, next spring or summer, in connection with the anniversary of the Methodist Episcopal Sabbath school Union. Among the topics proposed for discussion are the following: 1. The Methodist Episcopal theory of the Sunday-school. 2. Methodist Episcopal legislation on the Sunday-school question. 3. The Sunday-school constitution recommended by the General Conference '76. 4. Organizing new Methodist Episcopal Sunday-schools. 5. Quarterly conference Sunday-school committee. 6. Our Sunday-school Union. 7. A Methodist minister's duties to the Sunday-school Union. 8. Our own Sunday-school Union—benevolent department. 9. Our own Sunday-school Union—publication department. 10. Our own Sunday-school Union—normal department. 11. Our own Sunday-school Union—statistical department. 12. Our Sunday-schools and various benevolent societies of the Church. 13. Sunday-schools and our true relation to them. 14. Union Sunday-school conventions, institutes, etc., and our relations to them. 15. Denominational conventions, institutes, normal classes, etc. 16. Our Sunday-school assemblies and camp-meetings. 17. Our Sunday-school statistics—how to secure them. 18. The Presiding Elder and the Sunday-school work. 19. The circuit preacher and his Sunday-schools. 20. The Sunday-school at the preaching service. 21. The Sunday-school at the Methodist class-meeting. 22. The catechism in the Sunday-school. 23. The school system in the Sunday-school. 24. How to raise up an intelligent, loyal, efficient Methodism through the Sunday-schools of our Church. 25. The Sunday-schools and the spiritual instruction of children.

Six Creek Indians are at a college in Georgia preparing for a Theological course in order to become Baptist ministers. They are refined in their manners.

The Catholic Directory for 1877 reports that the number of Catholic churches in this country is 5,292, and of priests 5,297; the estimated Catholic population is 6,200,000.

Mr. Philip Philips completed early this month his engagement at the London Sunday-school Union of one hundred consecutive "Evenings of Song," without a single disappointment.

A daughter of the Rev. G. D. Bernheim, of North Carolina, has recently preached some sermons which are well spoken of. This is a new departure in the Lutheran Church.

Sixteen out of twenty Annual Conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church have voted in favor of calling a general convention to meet next May, to ratify the basis of union with the Methodist Church.

The government of the Dominion of Canada has given orders that no railway trains shall be run on the Sabbath, except under circumstances of the greatest emergency, and then only under direct order of the government.

The foreign fields lately have received a large accession of Christian workers. The Baptist Missionary Union has sent out eleven for Burmah and South Africa, the Presbyterian Board six for India, China and Japan, and the Methodist Society five for India.

The Presbyterians are likely to have enough on hand to occupy the General Assembly at its next meeting. The McCune-Skinner controversy; the question of immersion, which goes up on appeal from the Philadelphia Synod; and now the New Jersey Woman question of Craven versus See.

North Carolina Conference Session.

Bishop Harris presided at the session of the North Carolina Conference, held at Wilmington January 10-15. W. G. Matton was re-elected Secretary. Rev. Robert Alexander was received by transfer from Savannah. Rev. William H. Smith was received from the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. On the question of changing the second Restrictive Rule, (relating to the ratio of representation in the General Conference,) the vote stood none for, and seventeen against. On changing the Third Restrictive Rule there were three for, and fourteen against. The statistics show a net increase of 288 members for the year; also an increase of six Churches, one parsonage, and twenty-one Sunday schools. There is a decrease of nine local preachers. There is also a decrease in several benevolent collections.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

The great event of Elijah's life was at hand. By a grand master stroke, he meant entirely to wipe out idolatry and restore the land to Jehovah. His was the audacity of faith and the consciousness that "one with God is a majority." No other conception would have led this solitary man to array himself against the numerous prophets of Baal and of Ashtoreth, backed as they were by the power of the king and intrenched as they were in the homage of the people.

Gather—unto Mount Carmel. By all accounts this was most an admirable place for the gathering. The range which is called by that name is about twelve miles in length. It juts into the sea at the south of the Bay of Acre in the form of a bold and bleak promontory, runs inland in a south-easterly direction, reaching in one place an altitude of over 17,000 feet.

All Israel. The ordeal was not to take place in a corner. There was to be no possibility of misrepresentation about it. Elijah was not going to win a victory in private and then have it denied in public. All Israel were to be witnesses, that they might each see for himself, and not depend for his faith upon the testimony of a few.

Gathered the Prophets. Not all of them. From the fact that only the prophets of Baal were spoken of by Elijah (22, 40), and from the further fact that just the number of the prophets of the groves are, later, referred to (26: 6), it is plain that the latter, from dread or some other reason, failed to respond to the summons that was sent them. And Elijah came. After all the others had assembled. Very likely he waited long enough to set them all to doubting whether he would come at all. Ahab was there with a splendid retinue, the priests of Baal in gorgeous priestly attire were present, and each tribe had sent its quota of representative and influential men. There was no doubt some wonder and a great deal of incredulity as to whether this recluse of the mountains would dare alone confront an array so formidable. But their doubts were soon set at rest. From some hidden retreat, where, doubtless he had been spending the time in prayer, comes Elijah upon the scene. His hairy garment and uncouth appearance are in sharp and unfavorable contrast to the elegant attire of the courtiers of Ahab, and the resplendent robes of the priests of Baal. Past the group which surrounds the king, past the long array of priests, unheeding either, comes the prophet to speak to the people. The people only are of importance to him. They are the prize for which he contends, and he proposes to break down the barrier of priests which stand between him and them.

How long halt ye between two opinions? Inclination drew them toward Baal—conscience drove them back to God, pleasure and lust plead for Baal—righteousness and his wonderful interpositions for Israel in times past plead for Jehovah.

If the Lord be God follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him. It was a ringing command. Elijah believed in no compromises with the world, the flesh or the devil. He did not modify his creed to suit the times, even though he stood entirely alone. In his eyes it was worse to be half a follower of God and half a follower of Baal, than no follower at all. Those that are neither hot nor cold are the ones whom God, also, detests, and whom he spits out of his mouth. In God's service there are no compromises. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

Elijah did not have any idea of winning the people by this single, unenforced appeal. By it he had so arrested their attention, and turned their thoughts upon themselves in self-examination as to duty, that he had prepared the way for the miracle to have its full effect. When it came, it appealed not to a thoughtless, but to a deeply exercised and interested people. I, even I only, remain. It was a sad thought! In the land that was given by and dedicated to Jehovah, only one prophet remained to uphold his name. The priesthood was gone, the sanctuaries were no more, the altars were torn down and the prophets were slain.

The God that answereth by fire let him be God. It was an arrow that was aimed at the very centre of the Baal religion. Baal was the deity which was supposed to have supreme power over nature, and as he was the Sun-god, riding the heavens during the day in a blazing orb of fire, he was credited with having special control of that element. At noon Elijah began to mock them. Cry aloud! All the suggestions which Elijah made, as to the reason of Baal's failure to answer, were sarcasms the most stinging and biting. They were meant to open the eyes of the people to the sham character of the Baal-worship.

Cloud Banners of the Alps.

Among the most exquisite scenes which delight the ear of the European traveler are those wonderful rose-colored cloud-banners, floating from the Alpine cliffs. But it is only in the sunlight that Nature hangs out these beautiful tokens. So it is only in the glow of health—the sunlight of our inner being—that nature reveals those physical cloud-banners, the "rosy cheek" and "cherry lip," to praise which every poet of the earth has invoked the Muse to aid him. But they are as rare as the cynical Hood conceived Christian charity to be. Woman, eager to retain this charm, resorts to French art and rouge. The effect is similar to that which would be produced by substituting auctioneers' flags for the delicate glowing cloud-banners of the Alps. If women would aid Nature instead of adopting art, would seek health instead of vainly trying to mask disease, she would not only win the greatest charm of womanhood — health—but she would avert much misery both from herself and others. Dr. Pierce's favorite Prescription has received the highest praise from thousands of pale, delicate, suffering women. One bottle often affords more relief than months of treatment by caustics and other medicines. It is harmless in any condition of the system, and its use often renders the modest invalid exempt from that most trying of ordeals—a personal consultation with a physician. It is the duty of every woman to become familiar with the cause and symptoms of the many diseases to which her peculiar organization renders her liable, and also to learn the proper means of preventing these maladies. The People's Medical Adviser contains an extensive treatise upon "Woman and her Diseases." The Author also advises courses of domestic treatment, which will often render the services of a physician unnecessary. Every woman should read it. A copy of the Adviser can be obtained by addressing the Author, Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y. Price $1 50 (postage prepaid) Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists.

Disease Grows Apace.

Like an ill wind, and cannot be mastered too early. What is a trifling attack of sickness to-day may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivalled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous, and in their latest developments are themselves often fatal.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

O. S. BISLEY,
De Kalb Street, Lawrence, N. Y.
January 8, 1877.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2 50 per Bottle, or Three Bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address, CRADDOCK & Co.,
1032 Race Street, Philadelphia.

A Very Sick Woman.

While calling at the office of a friend the other day, we were handed a letter from which we read the following: Friend Craddock—My best friend, for thus I must address you, as you have done me more good than any one on earth under God, and I believe I owe my life to you, and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you have done. It would take several sheets of paper to ennmerate all my sufferings, so will only speak of the most important. For four years I had hemorrhages, beginning in Februury and lasting until fall; palpitation of the heart, soreness of the breast bone and short ribs, pain in the back and lower part of the abdomen, cold hands and feet even in August, constipation and headache. I had tried doctors, far and near, but all in vain. Some said I had consumption, others liver disease. I quit all doctors and wrote to you for help, and obtained it from your great "East India Hemp." I depend upon you alone for a perfect restoration to health, and feel that I shall not be disappointed. Please send two more bottles, with Pills and Ointment, which I think will do the work. Yours truly,

A. E. RICHARD.

FAMILY CIRCLE.

A Kiss at the Door.

Who cares for wealth, or land or gold,
Or fame, or matchless power?
It does not give the happiness
Or just one little hour,
With one who loves me as her life—
She says she "loves me more"—
And I thought she did this morning,
When she kissed me at the door.

At times it seems that all the world,
With all its wealth and gold,
Is very small and poor indeed
Compared with what I hold!
And when the clouds hang grim and dark,
I only wait the more
For "one" who waits my coming step
To kiss me at the door.

If she lives till age shall scatter
The frost upon her head,
I know she'll love me just the same
As the morning we were wed;
But if the angels call her
And she goes to Heaven before,
I shall know her when I meet her,
For she'll kiss me at the door.

Rum's Doings.

A woman went to a wood-yard on a very cold day and asked to see the head man. He came forward. "Sir," said she "can you let me have a quarter of a cord of wood for that?" handing him a piece of money; "my children are freezing."

The man looked closely at her.

"Why, are you not Seth Blake's wife?" he asked.

"Yes, sir, I am," said the woman.

"How does it happen that you are in such low circumstances?" asked the man.

"Sir," answered Mrs. Blake, "rum did it."

"That's bad said the man.

"Yes, sir, it is bad. My children are starving, and rum did that. My children are ragged, and rum did that. My children are growing up outside of the Church, outside of the Sabbath school, outside of the day schools and rum does that. My husband, once kind and industrious, is now a vagabond, and rum is the cause. My heart is broken, and rum did that." And the poor woman sank down on a log of wood, the picture of want and woe.

Nor did the rough woodman keep his sympathy, for he remembered the time when Seth Blake was a promising young printer. He married a nice woman, and the young couple started in life with as fair a prospect of comfort and happiness as a young couple could have. They had seats in the Methodist Church too, and used to be seen listening to the word of God.

But Seth had a weak point: He would sometimes "drink." He did not quite believe in total abstinence. "Touch not, taste not, handle not," was not his motto.

The habit gained on him. It mastered him: it ruined him: and what is worse, a drunkard's family has to share a drunkard's shame and degradation: and worst of all, drunkenness ruins the soul.

Touch not, taste not, handle not, boys. This is the only safe ground. Any other may sink you.

The Baby.

One of the sweetest of Emerson's writings is the following:

"Who knows not the beautiful group of babe and mother, sacred in nature, and sacred also in the religious associations of half the globe? Welcome to the parents is the puny [illegible] strong in his weakness, [illegible] more irresistible [illegible] his lips touch[illegible] which Chatham and [illegible] in manhood had not. The [illegible] asks so little that all [illegible] and season is on his side. His [illegible] is more charming than all knowledge, and his little [illegible] than all virtue. All [illegible] between his three or four [illegible] like a pigeon-house, [illegible] crows, and puts on [illegible], and when he [illegible] fails not to [illegible] before him. Out [illegible] thread spools, cards and [illegible] will build his pyramid [illegible] of a Palladio. [illegible] of whis[illegible] the laws [illegible] like his gen[illegible] the young Ameri[illegible] modes [illegible] Illustrating the [illegible] legs, he wishes [illegible] and shoulders of [illegible] enchanter [illegible] no seniority [illegible] character— [illegible] grandsires, [illegible] prey. [illegible] all conform [illegible] make mouths, [illegible] to him. On [illegible] he rides, and [illegible] beads."

[illegible]

something of that sort—she didn't know what. Having enjoyed his mother's inability to solve the problem for some time, said he, "It was some water."

HOUSE AND FARM.

Mixed Farming.

Farmers are now trying mixed husbandry, instead of risking their whole crop in one or two staples. It matters not how small his farm may be, if he works right and has a few cows, plenty of sheep, and shepherd dogs, a few hogs, fowls, bees, a few horses, an orchard, a good garden, with small fields of grain, meadows, and varied vegetables, nothing is surer in the future than that he will not only make a good, comfortable living for his family, but he will soon be surrounded with all needed comforts and luxuries of life; and this too in the face of hundreds who tell him all the while that farming, and especially mixed farming, won't pay. This plan gives something for use and for sale each week in the year, adding comfort and money to the household, and employing the whole available labor every day. Whenever a farmer, in such a home, begins to feel he can find nothing to do, he may be fully satisfied he is on the down grade.

If, instead of this varied plan, he desires to make a specialty of sheep-husbandry, dairying, fruit-growing, stock-raising or marketing, he will fidd it will take more capital, in both cash and brains, for such especial branches than in mixed husbandry, and his failure will be all the more signal and disastrous. In mixed cropping one or several branches may fail, and still he can fall back upon others, and thus have enough to meet all needs.

One important point in mixed farming is to note each year what articles succeed best and are best suited to your soil, and thus enhance your chances of making successful crops. This implies adopting and practicing the best system of cultivation, and the use of all necessary implements of the most improved style, all inspired and pushed forward by reading such agricultural papers as will throw light upon all departments of the farm interest.—Rural Sun.

Facts About Bees.

1. That the life of a worker bee, during the working season, is only from six to eight weeks duration, and that a large majority of them never live to see seven weeks.

2. That a worker bee, is from five to six days old, before it comes out of the hive for the first time, to take an airing, and that it is from fourteen to sixteen days old, before it begins to gather either honey or pollen.

3. That all swarms engaged in building comb, when they have not a fertile queen, build only drone and store comb, and that all the comb in the lower or breeding apartment of the hive should be worker or brood comb, except a very small quantity of drone comb, four inches square being amply sufficient.

4. That the more prolific the queen is, the more young bees you have, and the more surplus honey will be stored up, other things being equal.

5. That you never ought to cut mouldy comb out of the hives, for the reason that you should never allow it to become mouldy.

6. That you ought never double swarms or stocks of bees in the fall, because you ought to attend to that and make them strong during the summer, by taking brood from strong stocks and give it to the weaker.

7. That a drone-laying queen should be taken away and one producing worker put in her place, else the colony will soon come to nought.

8. That as a rule, as soon as an Italian queen shows signs of old age or feebleness, the bees themselves will supercede her.

9. That all should be kept strong in order to be successful.

10. That every hive should contain about two-thousand cubic inches in the breeding apartment.

11. That beginners in bee-keeping should be very cautious about increasing the number of their swarms or stocks rapidly until they thoroughly understand the business.

12. That the hive itself, if well constructed, is all the bee-house you need in the summer season.—D. A. Pike in Bee World.

Hints to Farmers.

A bare pasture enriches not the soil, nor fattens the animals, nor increases the wealth of the owner.

One animal well fed, is of more value than two poorly kept.

The better animals can be fed, and the more comfortable they can be kept, the more profitable they are —and all farmers work for profit.

Ground once well plowed is better than [illegible] poorly.

[illegible] are more profitable [illegible]. Make the soil [illegible] it well and keep it [illegible] will generally be productive.

When you see the fence down, put it up. If it remains until to-morrow, the cattle may get over.

What ought to be done to-day, do it. To-morrow it may rain.

A strong horse will work all day without food, but keep him at it and he will not last long.

Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 13, 1874.
Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

HIGHEST HONORS
AT THE
UNITED STATES
CENTENNIAL
World's Exhibition, 1876.

MASON & HAMLIN'S
Cabinet Organs,
Unanimously Assigned the
"FIRST RANK
IN THE
SEVERAL REQUISITES'
Of such Instruments.

The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the First Rank in the several requisites of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the only instruments of this general class awarded this rank. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as it is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition, so that it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The difference in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the reports of the Judges, from which the following is an extract:

"The MASON & HAMLIN Organ Company's exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums show instruments of the First Rank in the several requisites of Instruments of the Class, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."—Signed by all the Judges. The Mason & Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the only ones assigned this rank. The triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and
FIRST MEDALS
PARIS, 1867; VIENNA, 1873; SANTIAGO, 1875;
PHILADELPHIA, 1876,
and have thus been awarded highest honors at

"WINDING MY WATCH."

I wind my watch in the low lamplight,
As I've wound it up how many a night?
To measure me out the hours to be,
As the future were mine through this little key.

Yet, winding my watch, I well may muse
How this thing of pin, and wheels, and screws,
With my own name cut in its golden curve,
Will outlast the life it was set to serve.

How an hour will come of the low lamplight,
Burning low for my dying sight,
When [illegible] my watch no need will be,
Because Time will for ever be done for me.

Who will wind it after, I cannot know,
Who wear it for love's sake, what shall show
In the whirl of fate? But beyond these [illegible]
Shall I see why it beat me out such rounds?

Days all whose moments were counted on,
As if drops of agony, one by one,
Bled slow at each stroke from my heart [illegible];
Ah! shall I see why these days have been?

Through little hands, through your circling [illegible]
Make up my measure of mortal days,
Fill the strange seasons ye have told,
Not here is your riddle dark unrolled.

But, [illegible] in the high heavens set,
May [illegible] great dial, marking yet
[illegible] by the constant sun of love,

Church under whose roof they were born and nursed, the right hand of fellowship, and shall rejoice when it is accepted in the same brotherly spirit in which it is extended. It is not necessary to go to Cape May to shake hands together. We want to see piety at home before men shout at camp-meetings.

You can not legislate men in Churches into fraternity any more than you can into religion. It is a spirit, and must be inborn. It is a home feeling, and hence the mother Church says to all her children, "come home, my hearthstone is as broad, and my fires are as bright and warm, my rooms are as spacious as when you left, not for permanent organization, but to enjoy a grand thanksgiving dinner and Christian salutations." We believe in a living, practical fraternity on our soil of equal brotherhood among all men; therefore,

1. Resolved, That we will cling to the old word catholic as applied to the Church of God.

2. That we believe in fraternity based on the Christian law of like with a difference.

3. That we hold ourselves in readiness to exchange pulpits with all evangelical ministers.

T. J. ABBOTT, Chm'n.

THE SPIRIT OF THE CONFERENCE.

Of the spirit and success of the Conference the Methodist Advocate says:

As to the Methodist Episcopal Church in that State it stands firmly against the shock of battle which has been hurled upon it. Its ministers were never more strongly attached to its principles or the people more devoted to its interests. We had expected to meet broken columns, but, instead, found a solid phalanx unshaken and aggressive.

That this conference is improving in spite of the condition of the country and the fierce opposition it has to meet is apparent to the most casual observer. As an ocean steamer moves through the storms against wind and tide so the old John Wesley Church continues to make headway in the South. It is disseminating right views upon the subjects of education, temperance, moral purity, Christian life and labor, and if the ten years to come compare with the past ten in the efforts of this Church, the colored people under its ministry will, as a whole, have arisen to a higher standard of moral excellence than that maintained by other Churches in the South. We believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church is incomparably more pure than any other in these States, and that all our colored members, as a whole, are much more rapidly approximating the true Christian standard than those of any other communion.

TRANSFERS.

F. Whittier who has been a successful Presiding Elder in the Conference was transfered to Maine.

The Pastoral Office.---No.1.

BY REV. J. H. M'C.

The perfect pastor. The word perfect is of course used in a limited sense. Here I only mean one who is eminently faithful, one who is eminently efficient. If it be objected that there are no perfect pastors, it cannot be denied that there are some very imperfect ones. Excellence in the pastoral office is desirable in itself, and is a great want of the church. Let me inquire here into some of the qualities of such a pastor.

1. He is intelligent. It is not true that any man can do the pastoral work of a church any more than any man can be a jurist or president. The pastor comes in direct contact with men. He meets them to influence them for good. Now he must be a judge of human nature in order to meet men successfully and move them. Men are differently constituted, and in every church and congregation these different varieties are found to exist. All these the pastor must meet in his daily walks. He must not practice deception or change his sentiments. Yet he must adapt himself to all in some way. He must have a resource within himself on which to draw at any time. Withal his perception must be quick, for if he is too slow he will make blunders. He must read men at a glance, and then present that side of his nature or that phase of truth that will best accomplish his ends. In his approaches to human kind he must be quick to see the "fitness of things" and take advantage of circumstances. It would be of little use to go into a bank or store or office and interfere with men's business even as a pastor—or stop an editor when he is writing the last paragraph of an important editorial just before going to press—or to call and insist on praying with a couple of ladies who have their cloaks and bonnets on ready to take a ride, carriage waiting at the door, or to commence interrogating a timid, bashful young lady in the presence of half a dozen of her young friends; the intelligent pastor will avoid coming in contact with people as a pastor save at those times when his words will be felt and his motives appreciated and respected. But he must be intelligent in the sense of being acquainted with books, events, great questions in which the public are deeply interested; he needs to be a "well read man." When the preacher stands in the pulpit and addresses his congregation he speaks on what he has thought over, carefully prepared, and may there appear much more learned than he is. "Distance lends enchantment to the view" and sometimes lends depth of learning; but when the preacher becomes the pastor, he finds himself in closer quarters with his fellows—and he is called upon to solve problems in social life, and give opinions on great topics, and unveil mysteries to others. And if he proves himself here inadequate to meet these tests his preaching will have lost in those cases at least much of its power. Then, again, all these things may be turned to good account. A minister's reading becomes a text from which he can preach Christ. In his personal contact with men he can use science, art, literature, history to as good advantage as he can in the pulpit.

Again the pastor is often called in as a kind of arbiter or counselor, in cases which require acuteness of intellect, a just knowledge of great principles—principles that lie at the very basis of society—his words now become rules of action on which the welfare of many depends. Hence let no man for a moment suppose that to succeed in the ministry only requires a general attention to the pastoral work, and that means simply the quality of being "social with everybody." Nowhere is intelligence, general knowledge, activity, quickness of perception more needed than here.

2. The pastor should be a man of sensitive feelings. No childishness, not effeminacy, but that quality which will make him adhere to all men. He must mourn with them that mourn—weep with them that weep. He must sit down and listen to the prattling of a child in such a way as to win its confidence. He must open his heart and let the sighs and groans of our poor, burdened humanity echo there. He is called to the sick room, and his very manner there is all important—it is impressive. I have seen a minister go into a sick room very much after the style that people rush to the dinner table in second-rate hotels, whereas the step should be soft and slow. Then I have heard a minister catechise a sick and dying man very much like a lawyer would question an obstinate witness on the stand. How unlikely is such a course to do any good. The pastor must here be the very embodiment of tenderness and love. So in all his varied relations—he must feel for others, and be must assure them of that fact, not by words but by that sympathy which they feel, and which cannot be defined—call it tact. And yet the very opposite quality is often needed. The pastor must have manhood. There are times when he must be proof against tears and pleadings. He must sympathize with humanity in its woes and yet when men do wrong he must reprove them with the voice of authority. Jesus wept over the very men whom he styled hypocrites and vipers. The pastor must have nerve enough to execute the law on offending members even though they work upon his sympathies. That very quality which may seem to be severity is after all a kindness. Besides what might be leniency to one, would be cruelty to many.

And this quality of which we now speak can be cultivated by constant contact with the unfortunate—the suffering ones of earth. If a minister shuts himself up in his study, and thinks only of writing elegant sermons he may succeed in that work—he may succeed in writing "elegant" sermons, for a man even of ordinary intelligence doing nothing else certainly ought to be able to interest an audience for thirty or forty minutes; and if with all the helps which are now at command almost any one fails he proves to the world that he is of small stature. But these mere elegant sermons do not do the work. They may do once in a while and all men enjoy them at least occasionally. But they lack heart. They do not arouse men. Edward Everett was beautiful, but cold. John B. Gough touches the heart—the one excited your admiration the other makes you laugh and cry—moves you.

The preaching which accomplishes most good is that which touches the heart of the people—that appeals to the consciences of men—that stirs the soul and that sparkles with illustrations drawn from the life and experience of the common people.

The pastor then helps to make the preacher; unless a man knows humanity by contact with it he cannot touch it. Here is a source of power to the preacher.

3. The pastor must have an interest in his flock. Why is it that some men always succeed so well? They are always beloved by the people. They may have enemies among a few, but the great popular heart beats for them. One main cause is found in the fact that they are interested in the people as a whole. They do not court a few rich families, and wink at vice because it is arrayed in "purple and fine linen." They live for the people. Rich and poor are alike before God, and the pastor so regards it. They are always planning for the general good. They care more to save men than to please them. They do not allow themselves to be hindered in their work by a few croakers. They look upon their church as their particular field of labor. All their time is given to it—all their interest centers there—all their labor is expended there. They bear their church on their heart day and night. They sympathize with the widow—they visit the orphans—they minister to the sick—they seek out the stranger—they have a word of encouragement for the fallen—a word of hope for the struggling. They notice everybody from the little child to the aged man or woman; such a pastor will succeed. These qualities with some others go to make up the perfect pastor.

From Orizaba to Mexico.

J. B. WILLIS.

It was in the first blush of a beautiful spring-like morning that we found ourselves hastening towards the depot to meet the early train for the capital.

The humble streets or Orizaba, were quiet and deserted while everything spoke of the universal enjoyment of a morning nap.

The rich tints of the East were reflected downward by the mountain crests, filling the little valley with a mellow twilight that veiled everything with that enchanting softness that is only seen in the tropics. While waiting a moment for the start, we notice the huge machine that proposes to scale the coming heights with our heavy train at its heels. It is a dual-headed monster whose strength and greatness suggest the propriety of keeping its reserve energy well under control.

But while examining its intricacies, it speaks and we are off, rapidly treading a beautiful valley full of abrupt turns and projections that are very suggestive to our fevered imagination of thieves and bandits. Twelve miles are thus passed, a part of the way through a most romantic gorge, with immense heights towering above, and dreadful depths opening below, ere we reach the beginning of the main ascent at the village of Maltrata. The air is perfectly clear, and winding about the summits above, we distinctly see the road we are soon to travel at an elevation of 3,000 ft. above our present footing.

While our engine is being fed, we enjoy a delicious fruit, the chisnaoyal, which is quite new to us. With the rich pulp of the peach it combines the flavor of strawberries and cream, making a compound by no means unpalatable. We learn, however, that if any kind of liquor be used for some time after eating it is changed by the alcohol to a poison that endangers life.

We would recommend its introduction into the States as a "Temperance Measure." It would have the advantage perhaps of killing every drunkard who valued his cups more than his life—"a consumation devoutly to be wished."

Nothing strikes one more forcibly as he moves up this great inclined plane cut in the mountain's side, than the immensity of the task that lay before the daring engineers who planned and consturcted this stupenduous monument of human skill and industry. We learned that the road was built very largely by English capital and cost about thirty million dollars. Aside from the road proper it compares very unfavorably with our modern railroads, having very inferior coaches and depots, with an entire absence of the modern convemences of travel. The variation in temperatue experienced as one rises to the level of the plateau is very marked and especially so when the mountain tops are hidden in cloud. It is like the change in going from New Orleans to Chicago in November, and that in less than an hours' time. One can but hint at the grandure of the scenery from the higher elevations. The valley below, with the little village we left so recently forms the bottom of a mighty crater like depression around whose rim we are slowly winding. It is too grandly imposing and beautiful to warrant an effort at description. The hardier cactus, and like types of vegetation here begin to put in an appearance, while the trees are covered with the most varied and brilliant orchids—a family of plants that widely flourish in the higher latitudes of this country. One is disappointed with the barronness of the upper country. During the winter or dry season, the entire absence of rain for a period of some months, renders the country exceedingly desert-like; the magney, or pulque plant being the only relief to the parched valley plains through which we passed, while the heat and dust were will nigh insupportable. The country is devoted largely to barley raising, and gangs of plowmen were here and there passed scratching the surface of the ground with an apology for a plow in the shape of a crooked stick drawn by two oxen, recalling in their crude manner of doing things, the scenes we have always asociated with the days of Abraham.

The Indians are here, as in all countries where they have come into contact with the white race, "hewers of wood and drawers of water." Entirely dependent on the owners of the "hacirudas," they live and labor under a system of peonage that reduces them to a condition which seems utterly hopeless and despicable. Nothing can be more sad and striking than the crushed, woe-begone look with which they almost universally greet you. The Republican idea of the equality of men respecting law and right is altogether foreign to Mexico, and its absence signifies nothing but drudgery and debasement to the Indian.

Pulque, the national beverage, is made and drank in vast quantities all over the plateau. It is the semi-fermented sap of the American agave or century plant, and, beside having a sour and, to us, exceedingly disagreeable taste, it is transported in hog or goat skins, whose appearance suggests everything that is filthy and abominable, and yet the German attachment for beer would be no measure of the love which the people here of all classes manifest for this drink.

When the crusaders of the States have finished their work there they will find such a field for labor as, perhaps, the world cannot elsewhere present, by crossing the Rhine into Mexico.

It was the mid-time of a dark, rainy night when we passed along the historically noted street of San Cosme, by the Salto de Alvarado and the Alameda to our hotel, trying to realize as we went that we were in that long dreamed of city—the home of the Montezumas—Mexico.

Mexico, Dec. 1876.

Talking by Telegraph.

The newly discovered science of telephony or talking by telegraph, which has created so much interest among scientists and practical electricians of late, has made rapid strides within the last few weeks in the hands of the inventor, Professor A. Graham Bell, and his assistant, Mr. T. A. Watson. The latest improvements enable them to dispense with batteries altogether, and use permanent magnets, the electric wave used in transmitting the sounds being generated by the voice itself. The importance of this advance is evident to anyone with even a slight knowledge of telegraphy, as the trouble and expense of keeping batteries in order has been the drawback to the employment of wire for private purpose. By this latest discovery only the first cost of constructing the line and putting in the instruments is necessary, and, once established, the apparatus is virtually a permanency. In a recent series of experiments with this invention an artificial resistance, much greater than an equivalent of the length of the transatlantic cable, was introduced, and the articulation of every word was perfectly transmitted, so that the inventors hope to soon be able to actually talk through the cable. At the experiment rooms, in this city, not long ago, two of the Japanese students in this country, Messrs. Isawa and Mori, talked with each other over the wire in their native tounge, to the great enjoyment of the experimenters and themselves. A series of experiments were conducted yesterday over the wire between this city and Salem, the party at this end of the line consisting of Prof. Bell, Mr Nutting, Mr. G. H. Foster, Mr. William Auld, and Mr. J. B. Parker, treasurer of the Eastern Railroad. At the Salem end Mr. Watson was assisted by Miss Webb, the operator, and the experiment was perfectly satisfactory, not only every word of the conversation, but the very tones and inflections of the several voices being accurately transmitted and readily recognized by those at the other end of the wire. With such advances as the system has made of late, there would seem to be no limit to the uses to which it may be put, and the practical advantages likely to result from it.—Boston Globe.

The late survey of the Black Hills confirms the first seemingly exaggerated reports as to richness in mineral wealth, quality of soil and extent of valuable timber in that much-talked of region.

A young lady, who claims to be the daughter of the late Cardinal Antonelli, proposes to sue the executors for her share of the inheritance. The matter excites great interest in Roman Catholic circles in Italy.

Mr. William Howitt, of Rome, called attention to the fact that in the will of Cardinal Antonelli, he commits his soul "to God, the most Holy Immaculate Mary, and to the Saints," never mentioning the Lord Jesus Christ.

Whitelaw Reid, of the New York Tribune, received, the other day, a check for $500 from some unknown hand, accompanied simply by the request that he would send it where in his judgment it might do the most good. It was sent to five leading clergymen to distribute among the poor.

The combined capital of the Rothschilds is stated by Emile Burnout, the well-known publicist, to have attained in the past year to the almost incalculable sum of seventeen billions of francs, or $3,400,000,000. The significance of these stupendous figures may be rudely conceived by comparison, but there is nothing in the history of private wealth with which they can be compared.

A new postage stamp of the denomination of three cents is to be brought out at an early day. The change has become necessary by the extensive practice of washing off the city cancellation without injury to the stamp and their re-use. A series of experiments just completed convinces the Postal Department that green is the poorest color to be found. With the change of color there will be a change of design. The medallion head of Washington will be retained, but it will be relieved by an open scroll of white, and the scroll-work will have a different pattern.

Do you know how a church fair works? The principle is a very ingenious one. Some ladies borrow money from their husbands, buy materials, and make up fancy articles, which they give to the bazaar. Then they changes places, borrow more money from their husbands, and buy the articles back again.

Now is the Time.

Brethren, now is the time to work for the SOUTHWESTERN. At this season of the year our people have money and are better able to pay. The new year has now begun and the people are more willing to subscribe than they will be after awhile.

Let all the ministers do their best now, to secure subscribers.

That Mistake Corrected

Last week we noticed a mistake made by Rev. J. W. Dunn of Greenwood, Miss., who had given some one at the Mississippi Conference a $50 bill instead of $5. Bro. Dunn now says that he has heard from the money and will get it.

Don't Let Your Name be Stricken Off.

We are cutting off the names of all who have not renewed for 1877. We dislike to lose one subscriber. Speak to your pastor at once, and don't let your name be stricken off.

Rev. L. Allinger writes from Cincinnati that "the Lord has been pleased to bless my Church with a revival. Have had meetings for three weeks now, and the good work goes on."

A good brother in Ohio says: "The SOUTHWESTERN looks splendidly, and its contents could hardly be improved." Thank you brother. Please follow up your compliment by sending us four new subscribers.

Fraternity in the Southwest.

Within a few weeks the five Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas have been held, and a fair chance has been given to test the matter of fraternity with our Southern Methodist brethern in these States.

Nearly all the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in these States have within a few months passed resolutions approving the Cape May settlement. Two things however have noticed been as effecting the force of these actions. One thing is that in no preamble or resolution has any Conference of the Church South, approved of or given assent to, the presence of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South. The other thing, is still more important, and is this: while the Conferences have been non-committal as to our presence in the South, leading men in these Conferences, and official Southern Methodist papers, if they have spoken at all, have said hat the Cape May plan of fraternity, means the ultimate going back of the geographical lines, named in 1844, and which were in force until the close of the war. This means the withdrawal of the Methodist Episcopal Church from the South. Not abruptly but gradually and certainly. This constant talk in Southern Methodist papers about the colored people going to themselves, as being the best thing for them and all, indicates what the leaders of the Southern Church hope will be the first step—viz. the organization of a great Episcopal Methodist Colored Church in the South. This done a second step is easy and accomplishes the work, viz: let our white people in the South join the Southern Church. That these two points embrace the purpose and sentiment of the present controlling minds of the Southern Church, we are fully persuaded. As Dr. Summers puts it: "The Plan of Fraternity it not intended to do away with the Plan of Separation."

On the other hand, the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, have all likewise heartily approved the report of the Cape May Commissioners, but have added in unmistakable terms that true fraternity means the undisputed right and privilege of each church to extend its work in every part of the nation. The Louisiana Conference expressed the sentiment of all when it said;

"The establishment of fraternity between the great Methodisms of America, removes all occasion of criticism from both churches on account of the presence of the other, in any part of this nation. Each church is now free, without let or hindrance, to push her work as in her judgment may be deemed best among people of all nationalities and language; and any other interpretation of the work of the Cape May Commission we regard as dangerous to the interests of both churches and the cause of Christ."

But while certain leading Southern men and papers take a wholly untenable position in the meaning of the Cape May report, we record with pleasure the fact that the spirit of brotherly kindness between our own and Southern Methodist ministers is growing. At Huntsville, San Antonio and Austin in Texas, at Macon in Mississippi, and in this city our Conferences have been the recipients of Christian courtesies from Southern pastors. Southern Methodist pulpits have been placed at our disposal at every Conference, and in several ordination services, Southern brethren have been present and taken part. In all this we heartily rejoice. These first fruits, are a prophecy of the time, not far distant let us hope, when fraternity in this Southland, between all Methodists shall be cordial and universal.

Christ Knocking.

Christ's efforts to save men did not cease with his crucifixion. He is still as extensively and actively interested in human salvation as during the years of his early ministry. His efforts to save men are as constant as his love for them, which is as eternal and unchanging as his own nature. "He ever liveth to make intercession for us." He does not only to intercede for men, but also to plead with and woo them by all possible entreaties and influences to be reconciled to God. He calls upon us to accept Him as our personal Savior and follow Him. He says, "Come unto me, * * * and I will give you rest;" and "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." He is represented as standing all night until his locks are wet with dew, asking admittance to our hearts. He has followed us all our lives with this gracious importunity, earnestly pleading with us to accept him, and be saved. He has sent forth his Spirit to strive with us. Many times have the divine Spirit spoken to us through the ministry, through the Word and the Providence of God. Many times in the monitions of our own consciences. As often as we have felt it our duty to be religious, the Holy Spirit has striven with us; and as often as we have refused, we have grieved the Spirit. But still the Savior is following us, and is knocking at the door of our hearts, asking us to receive him. We have heard his voice many times. Have we opened the door? Have we bid him come in? Have we received Christ in our hearts, or have we kept him waiting without? We would not treat an earthly friend so. We "treat no other friend so ill" as we treat Christ. What response do we make to this divine entreaty, to this waiting, knocking, pleading Savior? Do we presume to say, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee?" Consider what an indignity is offered to the Savior in saying that. Consider what a grossly rude and insulting thing it is to say to the Infinite God, who condescends to seek us with such affecting entreaty—"Await my time; yield your will to mine; consult my preferences!" Yet this every one is doing who refuses Christ.

In olden time a certain ruler asked, "What shall I do with Jesus?" and the wicked mob, instigated by the more wicked priests, cried, "Crucify him!" But what are we doing with Jesus, with his invitations, with his forbearance, his love—his dying love? How do we treat the appeal that comes from the cross? Are we neglecting the atonement, that crowning sacrifice of infinite love for our salvation? Are we slighting the only name given under heaven and among men whereby we must be saved, if saved at all? Surely we can only do this at the peril of our souls; and if we are capable of the sentiment of gratitude and of the sense of obligation, we will hear the voice of Christ, and receive him as our Savior now.—Methodist.

The Situation.

The political situation remains unchanged so far as the Presidential contest is concerned. We give elsewhere an abstract of the proceedings of the Electoral Commission. The fight is now on Florida.

If Florida goes for Tilden; he is elected; and if for Hays, then the contest will center on Louisiana. Leading Republicans are very confident that Hayes will be declared President.

The reference of this dispute to this Commission, has had a very good effect in quieting the country. All danger of armed conflict is past, and already business circles are feeling its impulse of increased activity. It is very probable that before we go to press again the question will be definitely settled.

In South Carolina Judge Carpenter of the Fifth Judicial Circuit has rendered another decision involving the validity of the State government. This judge declared a few days ago that Chamberlain was governor, holding over. He decides that the Mackey House was "illegal and revolutionary." In the meantime the Hampton voluntary tax association has received $75,000.

In Louisiana matters remain quiet. The two governors and legislatures are holding their adherents together awaiting the result at Washington. It is understood that President Grant will take positive action as soon as the Electoral Commission decides how the vote of Louisiana shall be counted. If for Hayes, then the Nicholls government must disband.

All eyes are now centered on the work of the Electoral Commission at Washington. Thus far nothing has been done; the contest being to decide whether the commission can go back of the returns and take testimony in each case, or whether it must make up its decision on the returns, and such argumentary evidence as is given to it by Congress. The last report indicates that the former plan will prevail. If the Commission decides to examine every case for itself and take new testimony, months will elaps before the end. In the meantime the President of the Senate will become President on the fourth of March. But this is not anticipated. Everything seems to indicate a speedy settlement.

Turkey's new Attitude.

Turkey has taken a bold and decided stand to maintain her independence. The representatives of the great powers of Europe that called to tell her what she must do, have been politely told that Turkey proposes to maintain her national independence, and that she intends herself to carry out fully the reforms proposed in her new and liberal constitution. The "sick man of the East" is evidently convalescing, and by this bold and manly policy has given an entirely new attitude to the Eastern Question.

Three things indicate that Turkey has yet national vitality beyond what was supposed. In the first place she opened negotiations with her rebellious provinces and has concluded peace with them. This maintains the integrity of the Turkish empire and leave Russia without any excuse for intervention. In the next place the Sultan urgently recommends his government to speedily and completely develop all the principles established by the constitution, and to carry out all laws and administrations of institutions applicable to the provinces. In the third place, traitors at home are promptly and effectually disposed of by Midhat Pasha the Grand Vizier of the empire, and who conducted the negotions before the conference of European powers was detected in a conspiracy to have the Sultan deposed and himself made the dictator. He was summoned to the palace and given his choice to leave the country or to be tried for treason. He chose to leave. A new ministry has been formed.

Turkey may yet regain her lost prestige among the nations of the world. At any rate these last days have developed an unexpected Turkish strength.

ONE of the attractions of our city is the elegant furniture establishment of Mr. J. B. Hubbard, situated on the corner of Rampart and Perdido streets. We recently took a stroll through his extensive rooms and found them packed through every department from the first to the fourth floor. The building is so constructed as to give ample light in every room. Everything may be found here from a child's toy chair to the most elaborately finished bed-room and parlor sets. Prices of the latter range from fifty to one thousand dollars. Mr. Hubbard deals in everything needed in the house furnishing line, mattrasses of all kinds, feathers, etc., etc. All of which he sells on the most reasonable terms. His goods are made mostly under his own supervision, so that the customer knows just what he is getting. Mr. Hubbard has arrangements by which anything in his line can be ordered by mail. The goods will be shipped at once, with no extra charge for packing and draying. The character of this house is ample guarantee that any orders sent will be honorably and promptly filled.

Mr. Hubbard has been in the business here in the city nearly forty years, doing business under one name. During all these years of financial and other vicissitudes the house of J. H. Hubbard has never been shaken, but holds on its way in a manner which compels confidence.

The California Advocate says:

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, published in New Orleans, has entered upon the new year as a General Conference paper. Hitherto it was published by a company. It was adopted by the General Conference and provision was made for its publication by Nelson & Phillips. The name of the editor does not appear, but we presume that Rev. J. C. Hartzell fills the chair editorial—than whom a more competent man could not be chosen by the Agents. The paper is a folio of fair size, neat and well-filled. It is doing a grand work for the cause of humanity and God in the great southwest.

The Interior of January 4th says The editor of a paper with which we are not famaliar sends us the proof-slip of a sensational article which charges that the American Bible Society has lost the sum of three millions of dollars. The $3,000,000 is printed in very black letters, and has two very black exclamation points at the end of the ciphers. The sombre article, written under the gloomy arithemetic, explains that the Bible Society has sold its books below cost, and in that way has lost $50,000 per annum for sixty years—and 60 times 50 equals the dark deficit! This grieves us. We are sorry the Bible Society did not not have 30,000,000 to lose in the same way during that time. We know of no better way to save money than to lose it in the publication of cheap Bibles. A bat can cast a shadow in the moon-beams."

We are pained, says the New York Advocate, to see in the Sunday-School Times for Dec. 23, 1876, from so valuable a man as Mr. Newman Hall, the following words: "An event may be decreed by God, and yet the agents in bringing it about may be culpable." We ask, If it be culpable to do an act decreed, what can be said of the one decreeing it? If the actor be damned, what of the decreer? Which is worse: to dishonor the Son, by denying his divinity, or to dishonor the Father, and the Son and the Spirit, by denying his justice? Which is worse: to reject religion, or to make it fit to be rejected? We do not want for our Sunday schools. We much of this sort of doctrine. can do better for our children.

ON the 28th of January, Col. W. R. Messick, sheriff of Avoyelles Parish, La., was shot under very suspicious circumstances, on Basin street, by Cornelius McMahon, an attache of the Nicholls police. The matter is to be investigated. Col. Messick was a Colonel in the Confederate army, settled in Avoyelles Parish after the war; has been a thorough conservative Democrat since, having been elected twice to the office of sheriff. He leaves a wife and child and aged parents who were dependent on him. Truly a most sad event.

Just as the Minutes of the Michigan Conference come to hand with a word of kindly greeting. from the Secretary, Dr. Geo. B. Jocelyn, we learn through Dr. McCarty, the terrible news that Dr. Jocelyn is dead and buried. Truly we know not the hour nor the day.

Revivals are now very general throughout the Northwest. The influence and power of the Moody meetings held for several weeks in Chicago and vicinity have been greatly blest and are receiving large accessions.

AT the late session of the Florida Conference, of the M. E. Church South, a Cuban was received on trial and sent to a Cuban Mission at Key West. Bishop Paine ordained him deacon.

Secretary Carhart of the West Texas Conference has his Minutes out in good time and shape. He will accept our thanks for a copy.

Rev. T. J. Abbott, of Charleston, S. C., will accept our thanks for notes of his late Conference session.

Fraternity in North Carolina.

At the late session of the North Carolina Conference of the M. E. Church, held at Wilmington, there were no indications of practical fraternity. The Conference adopted the following sensible and temperate report:

We believe that the Great Head of the Church is drawing the hearts of the people nearer together, and we rejoice in every evidence of this much to be desired result.

We heartily approve the action of last and previous General Conference on this subject, and we fully endorse the action of the Joint Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church South and our own, and pledge ourselves to faithfully carry out the plan agreed upon by them. But as there is some difference of interpretation of that plan, we desire to be emphaticaly understood as endorsing no fraternity with any body that ignores any part of our ministry or membership, or questions our perfect right to the occupancy of these Southern States; but we honestly desire to cultivate the broadest and most catholic fraternity with all our sister Churches who manifest a like spirit, believing at the same time that the only fraternity worthy of the name requires a full and complete recognition of each by the other, and an honest cooperation wherever practicable.

We have had some fraternal courtesies from other Churches, and especially from the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and recommend all the brethren to cultivate them and do all in their power (consistent with loyalty to our loved Zion) to help all who love our Lord Jesus—push his conquests to the utmost, speed the promised time when all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God.

Value of a Comma.

The claim of the United States for the return of the $1,500,000 lent to help out the Centennial Exposition has been rejected by the United States Circuit Court at Philadelphia, although there are abundant funds remaining in the hands of the managers with which to satisfy it.

The clause in the bill making the appropriation which was relied upon to protect the interests of the nation, and which was used to secure votes for the grant, runs thus:

"The appropriation hereinbefore made shall be paid in full into the Treasury of the United States, before any dividend or percentage of the profits shall be paid to the holders of said stock."

There should have been a comma after the word "dividend," so that the clause would have read "before any dividend, or percentage of the profits," etc., etc. The absence of the one little comma will cost the Treasury of the United States one and a half million dollars, unless the decision of the Court be reversed on appeal. This case should impress our young readers with the importance of learning the art of punctuation.

New Orleans Preachers' Meeting.

The Pastors of the M. E. Church, in this city and vicinity meet in the Chapel of Ames Church regularly on Thursday at 10 a. m. The meeting on last Thursday 1st inst., was quite full and the interest was good. Several items of business were transacted after which the Scripture lesson was taken up, namely, Acts 10th chapter. The discussion on the religious character of Cornelius and visions spoken of was quite animated. Many good suggestions were thrown out and the information imparted was valuable to all.

Dr. Godman having returned from the east was present, and will be regularly with us on these occasions.

All the preachers who possibly can are earnestly requested to be present. The meeting elected Bro. Priestly its secretary. M.

Cutting Down Missionary Appropriations.

We herewith present a tabulated statement of the "estimates" forwarded by the different foreign missions, and the appropriations made for their support, for the year 1877:

	Amt. estimated.	Amt. appropriated
Liberia	$8,500	(rec'd last year) $7,000
South America	10,450	7,500
CHINA.
Foochow	13,915	13,000
Kiu Kiang	7,752	7,000
Peking	13,322	8,250
Germany and Switzerland	23,000	(rec'd last year) 20,000
Denmark	8,316	7,500
Norway	12,000	10,500
Sweden	24,500	(rec'd last year) 20,000
North India	62,220	55,000
Bulgaria	8,797	8,000
Italy	17,880	16,000
Mexico	31,162	20,000
Japan	29,483	15,000
	$281,000.	$214,750

Amounts appropriated less than amounts estimated, $67,150.

Let it be noted: (1) That the corresponding secretaries warned the superintendents of missions in advance of the condition of the treasury, and urged them to reduce their estimates to the lowest possible figures; (2) That with a full knowledge of the pecuniary condition, the superintendents, aided by their colleagues, prepared and forwarded the above estimates—estimates prepared not with reference to the enlargement of the missions, but to their preservation; and yet (3) the general committee had no alternative but to resolutely shut their ears to these appeals, and reduce even these estimates by a total of $67,150.

Will not the friends of Missions strive with all the means in their power to replenish the treasury, that these appeals may be responded to, and the work of God so auspiciously begun in different parts of the world, continue to grow and increase. Reader, will you do your part?

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Alexander Campbell, Calvert, Texas, writes; "Our first quarterly meeting of this year has just closed, and it was a season of great blessing to us. Our people very generally endeavored to prepare themselves for the solemn services by setting apart the previous Friday as a day of fasting and prayer. I think as Methodists we all neglect too much this observance. We should remember that it is our duty to fast as well as pray. The love feast on Saturday night was an occasion worthy of the name. On the Sabbath ninety-nine persons were at the communion table, and at night, after the sermon, forty-five persons bowed at the altar, asking christians to pray for them. I shall soon send another list of subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN."

Rev. I. Hayward, Baton Rouge, La., says: "We have a protracted meeting in progress—prospects very encouraging. A number of backsliders have been reclaimed. Our Sabbath School is well organized and doing a good work."

Rev. Mark Hensan, Victoria, Texas, writes; "My people enjoy a good degree of spiritual prosperity. They care, too, for the temporal affairs of the Church. They expect to complete and furnish their new house of worship during this year. I pledged for thirty subcribers and I do not expect to fall below that number."

Rev. Samuel C. Locket writes from Oatmeal, Texas, as follows; "Owing to sickness in my family I have as yet been unable to go to my work in Gillespie country, but still remain on the Burnett circuit.

I buried my infant daughter on the 4th inst. To us it is a mysterious providence, but we are resigned to the will of God.

Will leave next week for my circuit in the western part of the State, where I expect a great harvest for God and for the M. E. Church.

I am pleased to see an interest now taken in the development of our white work in Texas, and believe the steps taken by the West Texas Conference, at its late session, in that direction is but a signal for our success among the white people.

Send me several sample copies of the SOUTHWESTERN and I will canvass the circuit for our paper."

Rev. A. Moore, LaHarpe Church, of this city, reports twenty-five recent accessions to his Church, and that a good degree of spiritual interest is manifested.

Rev. James Hayward writes that he has entered upon his new year's work at Donaldsonville, with good indications of success. His people greet him cordially, and his audiences are large. One of the first things Bro. Hayward did was to talk to the people about taking the SOUTHWESTERN. As a result a large list is promised.

The First Quarterly Conference of First street Church, New Orleans, was held last Friday night. The new pastor, Rev. H. Green, has been well received. His salary was estimated at $50 a month. The brethren intend to repair their church and school house this year. When such men as Bros. Campbell, Little, Robinson, etc., lead, a church will live and grow.

To the following brethren, from whom we have received lists of subscribers, together with the cash, during the past week, we return very grateful thanks; Rev. John Walker, Augusta, Miss; Rev. Prince Wilson, Marlin, Texas; Rev. Nelson McNair, China Grove, Miss; and Revs. J. D. Cozier, J. S. Whitaker, and S. M. Kingston, Houston, Texas. Remember that we do not send papers until the money is paid.

General Religious Items.

The Protestants are gaining ground in the Holy Land. They have now 520 congregations, and 7,600 children attend their schools.

Three Unitarian Churches in Boston, Massachusetts, are now occupied by Roman Catholics, one by Presbyterians, one by Baptists; and one Universalist Church by Baptists, and another by Jews.

Rev. J. W. David, an American missionary, writing from Lagos, Central Africa, says that he has found a little group of converts who have remained faithful during thirteen years, in which they have had no pastor or teacher among them. They sent messengers a ten days' journey to plead for the help of a missionary.

The Baptist Year-Book, just issued by the Publication Society, gives the statistics of the denomination this year as compared with last as follows: Increase of associations, 80; of churches, 1,669; of ordained ministers, 662; of baptisms, 21,810; of membership, 117,085. The whole number of associations at the present time, 1,005; churches, 22,924; ministers, 13,779; baptisms during the year, 109,684; total church-membership, 1,932,385.

Several years since, there were nearly 5,000 Congoes rescued from slave ships by American men-of-war, who were landed at Liberia. They have been civilized, and very many have made a profession of religion. In some cases well conducted churches have been formed exclusively of Congoes. It has been suggested that some of the most promising of them should be sent as missionaries to the Congoe country, whence they were taken by the slavers. When it is considered that these heathen Congoes numbered one-third as many as all the Liberians, it speaks well for the missionary spirit of the Liberian churches that such good results should have so speedily followed.

[illegible] work of grace is [illegible] the Church Union as having been in progress for some time among the Santhals in India—the most degraded and wretched of heathens. A mission was established among them a few years since, by Mr. Boenesen, a German, which has been attended with remarkable success. Mr. Boenesen is connected with no church organization, but is a most devoted, earnest, Christian missionary, and has been instrumental in the conversion of thousands of the degraded Santhals. The good work is still progressing among them. The mission is supported by donations from such Christian people as feel an interest in the work. It is one of the most successful Christian missions ever established among the heathen.

much that the Lord's work requires. Some are too nice, some too formal, some too disinclined. They stand or sit stiff and stately in their dignity, and sinners go unsaved and believers uncomforted, unhelped, for all the effort they will make to lift a hand to serve them. They need melting down and to be sent about doing good. Statuary Christians, however burnished and elegant they may be, are of little real service in the kingdom of Jesus.—Bible Teacher.

For the Southwestern.

A Little Child Shall Lead Them.

Mr. Roland was a man of fine intellectual culture. As a boy, he was the idol of fond parents and devoted sisters. In school he was the pride of his masters. At sixteen years of age his heart was moved to serve God, and at the age of twenty-one he had completed a collegiate and theological course, intending to be a minister in the Methodist Church, but the facinations of the law were so great, that, instead of preaching Christ, he entered a law school, was admitted to the bar, and in order to drown the voice of conscience, he tried to be an infidel.

He married a young Scotch woman of strong religious character. As children were born, the young mother would press them to her breast and pray over them, and when old enough to speak they were all taught to clasp their tiny hands—kneeling at her side—and pray before going to bed and on rising in the morning.

Mr. Roland never objected to this, but had no word or look of sympathy for the mother. She toiled alone. In fact, if at any time she ventured to broach the subject of religion, or urge him to go to church he would laugh her to scorn and leave the house.

When her eldest daughter, Amy, was thirteen years of age she was converted in a Methodist revival, and shortly afterward the two eldest sons were also converted.

Amy and her mother talked much together and mourned that there was no family worship in the house. The idea of proposing such a thing to Mr. Roland was out of the question, so these two would meet privately together in Amy's room and pray. Once Amy said, "O, mother, I feel it is our duty to make an effort at least to have family worship, but I'm so afraid of father that I can't, I can't do anything."

When the summer came Amy was sent away on the lakes for a trip, as she was a pale, delicate child, and the hot weather told on her frail form. On coming home she found that her mother and father had gone away for a few days. The evening of her arrival her brother Joseph gathered all the children together and told Amy that they were going to have family prayers. Amy's heart was filled with joy and her eyes with tears, for this was the first time the subject had ever been mentioned between them. Joseph told Amy that, after she left home, he and their mother had met together to pray and both mourned the apparent impossibility of having family worship; that when their father and mother both went away for a few days, God gave him courage to gather the rest of the family together, and they had been having family worship ever since.

The next morning, just as the family were taking their seats at the breakfast table, who should walk in but Mr. Roland. Business matters had suddenly called him home, while Mrs. Roland remained behind to finish her visit and take the rest so much needed.

After the greetings were over and breakfast finished, the little ones went as usual to the back parlor for prayers. Amy and Joseph looked at each other in trembling and fear. Mr. Roland started to his library. Amy said, "Joseph, what shall we do?" There was a little pause. Joseph's lips closed firmly while slowly a look of determination came into his face. "Amy," he said, "we must not stop now, we must have family prayers, and you must go to father and ask him to come and worship with us." Amy turned pale, and a look of terror came into her face, but in a moment she said "I will." Then Joseph said, "I will read from the bible and you must pray." This was too much for poor Amy, and she said, "O! Joseph, I cannot pray before father, I am so afraid he will make fun of us. I can not think of a single word to say. No, no; I will read but you must pray." "Amy, I can't, and you must. If you will only pray this time, I'll pray before him to-morrow, but I can't do it the first time, and it is our duty to have prayers now that we have began."

The terrible responsibility was felt by Amy, and at last, with blanched cheeks and pale lips she said, "God will help, and I'll do the best I can." Just as she turned to seek her father he opened the library door and came towards her. She met him, and, grasping his hand, said, in a trembling tone, "Father, we are going to have family worship, won't you come with us?" The man started, but gave his child a searching look and then, without a word, followed her into the back parlor where Joseph was seated, bible in hand, and the little ones around him. Amy gave her father a chair, then sank into one herself. From the stillness, and from those [illegible] a looker-on might have supposed [illegible] in the house. [illegible] voice Joseph read the latter part of the twenty-third chapter of Luke—the crucifixion of Christ; his prayer for his enemies; his forgiveness of of the sins of one of the malefactors crucified with him; his death and burial. Then Amy said, "Let us pray." All knelt, including Mr. Roland. In a faint, trembling voice Amy began, but as she proceeded she forgot everything but that she was in the presence of a loving God, one who was not only able, but willing, yea, more than willing to give all things to them who ask. And oh, there was so much needed. Here was a father whom she loved, yes, almost idolized, whose soul would be lost if he did not give his heart to God. Here were all the little brothers and sisters, too—all were upon her heart, and she prayed and plead, and wept as she plead. God was there. That father's heart was thrilled and torn as never before, and when the prayer ended he was the last to rise from his knees. He stood a moment, too much agitated to speak a word, while the tears rolled down his cheeks and fell upon the floor. Slowly he moved from the room to his library and closed the door, while Amy and Joseph put their arms about each others necks and, with the little ones clinging to them, all wept and praised God for the evidences of His presence and power. Mr. Roland had quite a struggle before yielding all to the Master, but when he did it was complete. Never was there a happier wife than Mrs. Roland on coming home to find her husband reading and expounding the Scriptures to his family, and then kneeling and pouring out his heart in prayer to Almighty God; and never were parents more loved by their children. All fear of their father having passed away, love reigned supreme. B.

HOUSE.—Bill abolishing police board passed over President's veto. Bill for payment of $500,000 to Mr. Eads, passed.

Messrs. Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield and Hoar were elected members on the part of the House of the Electoral Commission.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31.

SENATE.—Hereford from West Virginia was seated. More debate on sinking fund for Pacific Railroad.

THURSDAY, Feb. 1.

SENATE.—Electoral Commission proceedings are to be published in the Record. Senator Ingalls and Allison were appointed tellers for joint session. Frost, Democratic Elector from Missouri, reported ineligible by majority from Committee on Elections. Senate went to House to participate in electoral count. Saulsbury, Democrat, presented a petition signed by citizens of Louisiana, charging Kellogg government with incompetency, and saying that there was no Democratic intimidation in Louisiana during late election.

JOINT SESSION.

Assembled in House of Representatives to begin count of Electoral vote. Vice-President Ferry presided.

No objection made to Alabama, it was counted 10 votes for Tilden and Hendricks. Arkansas was counted 6 votes for Tilden and Hendricks. California was counted 6 votes for Hayes and Wheeler. Colorado, three votes for Hayes and Wheeler, Connecticut, 6 votes for Tilden and Hendricks, and Delaware 3 votes for same. When Florida was called, three sets of certificates were opened by the President, one giving the State to Hayes signed by Ex-Governor Stearns; the others giving it to Tilden, the third by a Board of canvassers appointed by the present Democratic Legislature of Florida. Mr. Field objected to Hayes electors on the alleged ground that they had never been elected. Senator Sargeant objected to the Tilden electors because they had not been legally appointed. Mr. Kasson objected to the third set of electors, because they were appointed by officers not in power when they are said to have exercised their functions.

The objections all made, the certificates with accompanying papers, were transmitted to the Electoral Commission and the Senate withdrew.

FRIDAY, Feb. 2.

Mrs. Sumner was confirmed as postmistress at Sherman, Texas.

HOUSE.—The vote to increase the President's salary to $50,000 stood, yeas 47; nays 126. The salaries of senators and representatives remain the same.

The President sent to Congress a special message recommending that some legislation should be had to hasten the resumption of specie payments. He says it may not be wise to fix an earlier date than that already fixed (January 1879) when the government should be compelled to pay its obligations in coin, but he thinks that everything should be done to hasten the day when coin and legal tender notes should be of equal value. He thinks a simple act of legislation could do this now. There has been an increase of several millions of gold in this country during the past few months, and this should be utilized by doing something to put it in circulation. The President suggests a law by which the Secretary of the Treasury may issue 4 per cent., forty year bonds in exchange for legal tender notes, to amount to not over $150,000,000. But by the decrease of legal tender notes in circulation and the near approach to equal values between gold and legal tenders, the President argues, money will be made easier and specie resumption hastened.

FEBRUARY 5TH,

SENATE.—Bill passed appropriating $300,000 for deficiency on public printing during the current year.—Bill abolishing Metropolitan police in the District of Columbia reported back with President's veto. Spencer of Alabama presented a resolution from the Alabama legislature in favor of granting lands in that State to aid public schools, asking for money to improve the Alabama river and for the repeal of the law taxing spirits distilled from fruits; all of which were referred to committees.—Mr. Cooper submitted minority report on the Florida election.—Confirmation: Daniel B. Booth, collector second Alabama District.—Nominations: J. Shepherd, collector at St. Mary, Ga., M. M. Camp, collector at Navasto, Texas.

HOUSE.—Political disabilities of J. S. Johnston, of Georgia, were removed.

The Electoral Commission.

The Eletoral Commission appointed to consider and decide all matters of dispute in the counting of the electoral votes met in the Supreme Court room in Washington. February 1st.

The Commission is composed as follows: Judges from Supreme Court—Clifford, Strong, Miller, Fields and Bradley.

From the Senate.—Edmunds, Morton, Frelinghuysen, Thurman and Bayard.

From the House.—Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield, Hoar.

Judge Clifford presides.

RULES OF ACTION,

Rule 1. The commission shall appoint a secretary, two assistant secretaries, a marshal and two deputy marshals, a stenographer and such messengers as shall be needful, to hold during the pleasure of the commission.

Rule 2. On a subject submitted to the commission, a hearing shall be had, and such counsel shall be allowed to conduct the case on each side.

Rule 3. Counsel not exceeding two in number on each side will be heard by the commission on the merits of any case presented to it, not longer than two hours being allowed to each case, unless a longer time and additional counsel be specially authorized by the commission.

In the hearing of interlocutury questions but one counsel shall be heard on each side, and he not longer than fifteen minutes, unless the commission allow further time, and additional counsel, and printed arguments will be received.

Rule 4. The objectors to any certificate, or vote, may select two of their number to support their objections in an oral argument, and to advocate the validity of which they maintain, and in like manner the objectors to any certificate may select two of their number for a like purpose, but under this rule not more than four persons shall speak, and neither side shall occupy more than two hours.

Rule 5. Applications for process to compel the attendance of witnesses, or the production of written or documentary testimony may be made by counsel on either side and all processes shall be served and executed by the marshal of the commission or his deputies.

Depositions hereafter taken for use before the commission, shall be sufficiently authenticated if taken before any commissioner of the circuit courts of the United States, or any clerk or deputy clerk of any court of the United States.

Rule 6. Admission to the public sitting of the public commission shall be regulated in such manner as the president of the commission shall direct.

Rule 7. The commission will sit, unless otherwise ordered, in the room of the Supreme Court of the United States, and with open doors, excepting when in consulation, unless otherwise directed.

Feb. 2d. The Commission spent the day on Florida, the first State referred to by joint session of Congress. No decision.

Feb. 3d. Mr. O'Connor, Democratic counsel argued against counting the Hayes and Wheeler electoral vote from Florida. He claimed that the writ of quo warranto against them by the Supreme Court of Florida was final. The canvasser he claimed had without law thrown out all the returns from Manatee couunty, and part from Hamilton, Jackson and Monroe. He claimed that Humphreys, one of the electors was inelligible.

The question arose whether or not any other testimony should be admitted before the Commission than that presented by the President of the Senate. On motion of Justice Miller each side was allowed three hours to present arguments, the Republicns claiming that the testimony should be limited.

Mr. Merrick, of Washington, opened the dlsscussion for the Democratic side. He considered it clearly the duty of the commission to go to the root of the difficulty by regarding as it must, he thought, the testimony of the House committee in Florida, as evidence in the case. He read from the act creating the commission that its powers were ample for the purpose, and argued that every consideration of law and equity required them to inquire into the action of the returning board, tainted as it palpably was, with fraud. He was followed by Mr. Stanley Matthews, for the Republicans, who maintained substatially that the act of any board constituted by law, or having apparently legal title, could not be set aside after ouster, and this upon the ground of public policy. Mr. E. W. Stoughton followed, also for the Republicans: he spoke to the question of legality of the acts of the Governor of Florida, and denied the right of the commissioner to go behind the returns of the State board of canvassers.

Feb. 5th—W. M. Evarts, from the Republicans, argued at length that the Commission could not go back of the certified returns.

Mr. Charles O'Conor argued for the Democrats that the Commission had that power.

The Commission went into secret session during the day, and up to going to press no decisions are announced.

A Washington dispatch says:

The commission remained in session until 8 o'clock. The conference will be continuee at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. No votes taken, nor any concluson reached on any point at issue. It is confidently stated that no evidence will be taken in the Florida case except such as relates to the action of the Florida State Government since the election. This evidence is documentary. If the proceedings are thus restricted the commission may have the case ready for joint session before the close of the week. Speculation regarding the result is neither ventured or entertained by any one.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

It was now Elijah's turn. Baal had been shown to be impotent—he had not even a voice. Now Elijah was going to prove that the God whom he worshipped was omnipotent. He had waited for the better part of the day—had given the prophets of the false diety all the time they could ask for, and even more. Now while they were still leaping up and down at their alter, gashing themselves with knives, and shouting with the strength left them, "O Baal, hear us," he made the people, who, doubtless, by this time were tired of the other spectacle and its useless mummerr, come near to himself. All day they had been treated to an extravagant, vain show, but now things move. There is a subtle sense of power indicated in every movement of Elijah.

He gives to the people two object lessons. He repairs the altar of the Lord which has been broken down. That is lesson Number One. By it he shows that that is what they must do, and that this is what this ordeal is for—To restore the altars of the Lord which had been demolished by the command of Omri and of Jezebel. He repairs it with twelve stones. That is lesson Number Twot For the twelve stones represent the twelve tribes of Israel—not the ten, or the nine, rather, which were then gathered on Mount Carmel. The altar was significant of an undivided kingdom, and of a united worship.

By the time of the evening sacrifice (3 p. m.) Elijah was ready for the great ordeal. It was the very time when a sacrifice should be burning on that altar, lit not by miraculous fire, bnt on account of the devotion of the people. His prayer is remarkable for its directness and simplicity. It does not consist of numberless vain repetitions, as did that of the Prophets of Baal. They prayed from morning until the time of the evening sacrifice. His prayer was a mere momentary ejaculation—could easily have been uttered in fifteen seconds. But though the prayer is short, it has in it several noteworthy things. 1st. Its addresses. It is made to the "Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel." Except that "Israel" was substituted for "Jacob," this was the familiar way, though so long unused, in which they had been wont to hear Jehovah invoked. Like the altar, irresistibly it reminded them of those happier days when Israel was an united nation whose God was the Lord. 2d. He petitions for three things. First: "Let it be kuown this day that thou art in Israel." The only repetition in the prayer is for this one object. That is his greatest desire. He does not pray that he may be the God of Israel, but that the people may know that he is and always has been. God is none the less God that atheists reject him; Jesus is none the less his Son that scoffers deny him. Second: he prays that he may be known that he is God's servant. Does not ask to be recognized as anything higher. But a "servant that represents a king, in dealing with a people need ask for no higher office. Third: "That I have done all things according to thy word." He did not want the people to think that he had the power to pledge God to such wonderful exhibitions—that Jehovah did it to extricate Elijah out of difficulty, and to save his own honor, which Elijah had without authority put in pawn. Neither did he want any of the homage which, necessarily, would be rendered after it. Distinctly it was all the Lord's doings and not his.

The one thing that would answer every one of these petitions was—fire from heaven. By that the Lord would prove that he was God, that Elijah was his servant, that the prophet had spoken according to his word, and that it was He that was turning back the hearts of the people. And the fire fell. It was no flash of lightning, for it fell out of a clear sky. The "little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand," had not yet lifted itself from the blue waters of the Mediterranean. It was miraculous, not only in its coming down from heaven, but in its intensity. It was no common fire that would reduce the stones to quick-lime, and cause all the water in the trench to evaporate. Only one conclusion could follow such a manifestation as that, and that was expressed in the cry of the awe-stricken people: "The Lord, he is God! the Lord, he is God!" there prostration indicated both their worship of the God who had so signally declared himself, and their dread of his power. Now the people saw their error. To them Baal was God no longer. The prayer of Elijah was realized, for their hearts had turned from him back again to the Lord God of Israel.

Gardening was the first occupation of the human race.

Died.

At Houma, La., on Sunday, January 14, 1877, REV. H. P. TAYLOR, a member of Louisiana Conference.

The remains were brought to this city and interred, on the 17th inst., in Carrollt on cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Stephen Priestley and Rev. A. Moore. Bro. Taylor had been a member of Louisiaua Conference during the past five years. He was a good preacher, a man of considerable scholarship—a wise, judicious officer in the Church. It is tribute enough to say of any minister when the earth closes over him that he had the love and confidence of the people whom he served. May the mantle of this good man fall on the younger men whom he leaves to carry on the work.

At Austin, Texas, on January 1, 1877, GRANVILLD GRADY, on the 17th, MRS. JULIA CONNOR, and on the 22d, MRS. ELIZABETH MOORE.

The above were all faithful members of the M. E. Church. Sister Connor was always at her place in the church, at the class-meeting, and at every other post of duty.

Sister Moore passed over the river singing and shouting, and the triumphant smile of faith remained fixed upon her countenance when we consigned her to the tomb. All of them leave families, which have the sympathy and prayers of our Church in their bereavements.

"Old Reliable."

There are many reputed remedies fo that very prevalent disease, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, but none which have given general satisfaction and become acknowledged standard preparations, except Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It continues to enjoy an unprecedented popularity. This reputation has been earned through the permanent cures which it has wrought, having proved itself a specific in the worst forms of the disease. Pierce's Pocket Memorandum Books are given away at drug-stores.

Disease Grows Apace.

Like an ill wind, and cannot be mastered too early. What is a trifling attack of sickness to-day may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivalled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous, and in their latest developments are themselves often fatal.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

FAMILY CIRCLE.

THE ETERNAL HOME.

ALONE! To land upon that shore!
With no one sight that we have seen before,
Things of a different hue
And sounds all strange and new,
No forms of earth our fancies to arrange,
But to begin alone that mighty change!

Alone! To land alone upon that shore,
Knowing so well we can return no more;
No voice or face of friend,
None with us to attend
Our disembarking on that awful strand,
But to arrive alone in such a land!

Alone? No; God hath been there long before,
Eternally hath waited on that shore
For us who were to come
To our eternal home,
Oh! is he not the life-long Friend we know
More privately than any friend below?

Alone? That God we trust is on that shore,
The Faithful One, whom we have trusted more,
In trial and in woes,
Than we have trusted those
On whom we leaned most in our earthly strife.
Oh! we shall trust him more in that new life.

So not alone we land upon that shore,
'Twill be as though we had been there before.
We shall meet more we know
Than we can meet below
And find our rest like some returning dove—
Our home at once with the Eternal Love!

—Frederick William Faber.

To Be Well.

Here is a remedy for the ills of the flesh and the spirit, composed of leaves, plants and roots, which, taken without a wry face, will make any man respectable and happy:

Leave off drinking.
Leave off smoking.
Leave off chewing tobacco.
Leave off snuffing.
Leave off swearing.
Plant your pleasure in the home circle.
Plant your business in some honorable employment.
Plant your faith in truth.
Root your habits in industry.
Root your feelings in benevolence.
Root your affections in God.
For directions see the Holy Scriptures.

Luck and Labor.

Don't charge your failure to "bad luck," my boy. I'll tell you what your trouble is, you are lazy. Learn Mr. Cobden's proverbs about "Luck and Labor:"

Luck is waiting for something to turn up;—

Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something.

Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy;—

Labor turns out at six o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competence.

Luck whines;—
Labor whistles.
Luck relies on chances;—
Labor on character.
Luck slips down to indigence;—
Labor strides upward to independence.

What a Plant Did.

A little plant was given to a sick girl. In trying to take care of it, the family made changes in their way of living. First, they cleaned the window that more light might come to its leaves; then, when not too cold, they would open the window that fresh air might help the plant to grow. Next, the clean window made the rest of the room look so untidy that they used to wash the floor and walls and arrange the furniture more neatly. This led the father of the family to mend a broken chair or two, which kept him at home several evenings. After the work was done, he stayed at home instead of spending his leisure at a tavern, and the money [illegible] to buy comforts for them all. And then, as the home grew attractive, the whole family [illegible] better than ever before, and grew healthier and happier with their flowers. Thus the little plant brought a moral as well as a physical blessing.

HOUSE AND FARM.

Gardening in the South.

CARROTS—Should be sown in drills twelve inches apart and thinned to one every two inches in the drill. They require rich and well prepared soil. Make trenches half an inch deep and cover lightly with fine dirt. Early blunt rooted and early scarlet horn carrots are best adapted to early culture.

CABBAGE.—Drill in trenches six inches apart. The soil cannot be too rich and no pains should be spared to make it so. Where plants are at hand for transplanting, they should be planted out in rows two and a half feet apart and two feet in the rows. In pulling the plants be careful to wet the soil well beforehand so that they will pull easy without breaking too many of the fine roots and that as much dirt as possible may adhere to the roots. Have a bucket full of hen manure, dissolved to the consistency of thin mush and dip the plants singly in this as they are planted. Use a plant stick twelve inches long, insert it in the ground, deposit the plant in the hole, stick the planter in the ground about two inches from the plant and press the top towards the plant, thus fastening it. The hole left by the planter serves the purpose of taking up the water when the plants are watered after planting. After watering draw some dry dirt around the plant, otherwise the soil will bake or harden and prevent the penetration of air. Cotton seed deposited in a little trench around the plant, about two or three inches from the stem, covered with some dirt will be found to have a wonderful effect, also phosphates deposited in the same manner. As to varieties we can recommend Drumhead, Flat Dutch, Landreth's Early York and Savoy. The first two varieties will form a desirable succession to the last.

MUSTARD—For early greens drill in trenches eight inches apart. Curled leaved mustard is preferable.

BEANS—May be planted at the close of this month. Open drills eighteen inches apart and three inches deep, planting two beans in a hill, six inches apart. The varieties of Snap and Bush beans are preferable for our climate and latitude; we can recommend the Red Speckled Valentine, Brown Speckled Valentine and the Dwarf Wax.

LETTUCE.—Drill in trenches one and a half inches deep and eight inches apart, sow thin and cover with fine dirt. When a stand has been obtained, thin out to one plant every six inches. The early Cabbage and curled India varieties have proved very desirable.

PARSNIPS.—Drill in trenches two inches deep and twelve inches apart and when up, thin plants to two inches apart in drill. The most popular variety is the sugar parsnip.

PARSLEY.—Sow in drills one and a half inches apart and cover with fine soil. Curled parsley is preferable.

RADISH.—Should be sown every ten days. Make drills two inches deep and six inches apart. They require rich soil or otherwise they will be hard. Red turnip rooted, deep scarlet turnip rooted and white turnip rooted are excellent varieties also early long scarlet, short top, and new French-breakfast.

SPINAGE.—Sow in drills two inches deep and twelve inches apart.

TURNIPS.—May be sown in drills one and a half inches deep and twelve inches apart and thinned when up, to one plant every six inches. Early flat Dutch and Early White Dutch, strap leaved are the best varieties to be sown at this season.

SHALLOTS.—Plant in drills twelve inches apart, and three inches distance in the drills. They require heavy manuring or very rich land. Hen manure is specially well adapted, if composted with some fine and very dry soil. Whenever you are done sowing seed, beat the ground down with a shovel or place a board on top of the row and walk over it. If there are Asparagus beds in the garden they must during this month be dressed with a heavy coat of salt and fresh horse manure. Plenty of salt, they can hardly have too much. Their original home is on the shores of the ocean, which indicates that they live on salt to a great extent.

HORSERADISH.—Should now be planted from cuttings. Prepare an elevated bed, two feet wide and one foot high, and insert the cuttings sideways, two feet apart, the cuttings being laid parallel with the ground and six inches from each other. The bed should be very rich and contain lime, ashes and compost. This plant is one of the best paying vegetables that can be raised.

CAULIFLOWER.—Plants planted out in the fall must be protected against cold.

CELERY—If any in the garden, will require earthing up.

SAGE, THYME, MARJORAM, SAVORY, and other herbs ought to be divided during this month and planted out.—Son of the Soil.

The farmer should work with his brain before he labors with his hands. His muscular powers will not then be impeded by unnecessary and exhaustive toil.

Keep your tools in a dry place—Keep them bright, clean and sharp.

For us to style these books the model series, would be to reiterate the sentiments of many of our educators who rank among the highest in their profession.

The Readers for gradation and general instruction are second to none.

The Arithmetics are compiled from actual business transactions, finely printed, and elaborately illustrated.

The Grammars are all that the exacting can desire in this particular branch of study heretofore so dry and uninteresting to the young.

The Spellers full and complete, arranged according to the principles of orthœpy, grammar, and a new system of definitions.

Our Geographies, the Advanced now ready, and the Primary in press, have cost months of hard labor by the most experienced professors in this particular branch of education. The Child's Book of Nature, on Plants, Animals, Air, Water, Heat, Light, etc., is so arranged that it is instructive and attractive to all.

Copies for examination with a view to introduction sent to teachers and school officers on receipt of half the retail prices.

Catalogue of School and College Text-Books mailed free to any teacher or school officer on application.

All correspondence regarding books for examination, terms of introduction, etc., will receive prompt attention.

GOD'S SCHOOL.

One by one, as the days go by,
To learn our lessons we bravely try;
For every hour some task is set,—
Difficult, easy, short or long,—
And whether we come to it weak or strong,
Somehow or other it must be met.

Graded well is this school of ours,
Each one's duties within his powers,
And his task the thing that he needs to know.
And many a time does the page grow dim,
And before tired eyes the hard words swim,
And the hours go by so slow, so slow.

Various ages are gathered there;
Flaxen ringlets and thin, gray hair
Alike fall over the lesson-books,
And often the little ones laugh in glee
At the beautiful words their bright eyes see,
While the old sit silent, with grave, sad looks.

Skillful teachers assembled here,
Patiently labor year by year;
Never mistake in their work was known:
Only the scholars, weary or vexed,
Idle, impatient, tired, perplexed,
Suffer from errors all their own.

The Spirit teaches the highest class;
Time takes all as they onward pass;
Joy is claimed by the happy few,
While Care, Experience, Labor, Pain,
Treasures of knowledge help us gain,
And Conscience conducts the grand review.

But, patiently learning day by day,
We are longing to hear the Master say
That our school-days here are done;
And after the last long term shall pass,
To be transferred to that upper class
In which the advanced work is begun.
—New England Journal of Education.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting.

The New Orleans Preachers Meeting met as usual last Thursday morning, in Chapel of Ames Church.

The Scripture lesson discussed included the latter part of the 10th chapter of Acts.

By special invitation Dr. Godman, President of N. O. University gave an account of his recent work in Philadelphia and Vicinity. It will be remembered that the Doctor went North under the direction of the Freedmen's Aid Society, to collect funds for the Orphans' Home at La Teche and our own University in this city. Mrs. Godman was with and assisted in the work.

DR. GODMAN'S REPORT.

He said: We were in Philadelphia ready to commence our labors before the close of September. Our first collection was taken in Grace Church, a Society of the best type of Methodist people, presided over by our genial friend the Rev. James Morrow, not long since the popular pastor of Ames Church and a member of this body. Brother Morrow was always cordial and faithful in his co-operation, and in every way contributed to the success of our labors and to the comfort and pleasure of our stay in the city. We shall never cease to remember his truly brotherly kindness. Bishop Simpson gave us the full weight of his influence and his hearty sympathy. All the [illegible] exhibited that friendliness [illegible] cause, which its divine ex[illegible] and by their fraternal co-operation have em[illegible] in our memory. [illegible] excellent men have [illegible] behalf it were invid[illegible] their names. [illegible] our gratitude [illegible] our recognition [illegible] they have [illegible] Philadelphia Con[illegible] among all [illegible] the connection for [illegible] as long as it [illegible] and large [illegible] the [illegible] it will con[illegible] enviable position. [illegible] the great Durbin [illegible] final resting [illegible] in the city. [illegible] remain; the [illegible] Hodgson, a [illegible] faith[illegible] Atwood, [illegible] of a [illegible] com[illegible] plete that failed to make note of the gifted, and generous laymen who furnish much of the brains and the energy of our ecclesiastical activities. Such men as James Long, Thomas W. Price, the Rev. Thomas Tasker Sr., the Rev. C. F. Steinman, William Armstrong, Joseph B. Wiswell, Charles Hill, James Hunter, James M. Longacre, Charles Scott, Arthur M. Burton, H. C. Elliott, David H. Bowen, and others that might be named of perhaps equal merit, but less known to us personly, would make a splendid record for any Christian Church, and are by faithfulness to Christ laying up for themselves rich treasures in Heaven.

We are able to report about $3500,00 as the sum of collections and donations to the general fund. Beside this, there are first-class subscriptions amounting to $2500,00 for the Orphans' Home.

I may be allowed to say, in passing that the faithful and efficient labors of my wife have contributed largely to this result. I am happy to say that since my return to New Orleans, though just rising from a prolonged sickness, she has secured pledges for several hundred dollars additional to the above amount, for the Orphans' Home, on a proposition to raise an additional thousand dollars in sums of one hundred dollars each, from godly women interested in our cause.

We must say that the Orphans' Home appeals more successfully, so far, to our believing and consecrated sisters. Mrs. Hannah Lauderbach, Mrs. J. W. Bain, Mrs. D. H. Bowen, Mrs. Charles Hill and others we could name, will be remembered in Heaven, and deserve a grateful mention from us. May their Christian liberality stimulate many others to like deeds of love.

We were happy, early in November, in greeting our always pleasant co-laborer, Rev. J. C. Hartzell B. D. who gave our cause efficient aid in one Sabbath's labor. Many incidents of our work would interest you as they have ourselves. But space will not allow the mention of many. One good brother's mind had been disaffected by some unhappy developments of the past, and he came to church resolved to contribute 50 cts., being sure that it would make him square with God on this account. But his heart was touched by the good Spirit, and when the cards were passed he put down $10. A few days afterwards he pledged us $20 more, which he in due time paid. A good sister, who has filled up her life with good deeds, often at cost to herself, had laid aside $50.00 toward the purchase of a seal-skin saque. This she put into the Lord's treasury for Louisiana, and gave up the saque. Another sister sent us on Monday $20, the price of a fur boa which she could do without. A noble Christian woman who had promised a hundred dollars, went to her private room to bring the money, we waited in the parlor, when she returned she handed us $500,00. A young man, about 20 years of age, came forward and pledged $2, saying "I haven't it now; but I can earn it, and will pay it." A poor woman sent the following note to Brother Bowen:

"Accept of a few slate-pencils to forward to Dr. Godman for the colored children of the South, with the prayers of a Christian mother, wishing that this mite was a thousand fold more. May the blessing of the triune God be upon the efforts put forth for that people."

In one of the collections was found a card reading thus:—$10, from a United Presbyterian of Hutton, Pa." In another was this card: I promise $1, to be paid as soon as I possibly can, I would to God I could give a million of dollars."

One good woman, who earns with her machine about $3 00 per week, and supports her parents, put one dollar into the collection, and afterward brought us another.

We have abundant evidence that our dear cause is near to the hearts of the people. They will gladly respond to our appeals according to their ability. If other claims are not systematically thrust in our way, the Lord will give the treasury of the Freedmen's Aid Society all the money needed to carry on its work. We believe that our God hears prayer; that He is ever mindful of His poor; that if we commit our cause to Him, He will continually open the way to the hearts and the means of His people. To His name be praise forever.

The following resolution was adopted;

Resolved, That we have listened to Dr. Godman's report with great pleasure; that we rejoice in his success and trust that if consistent with his wishes the way may open for him to return North at the close of the University year and carry on the work of raising money for our needy institutions in this state.

The chairman referred to the death and burial of Dr. Daily, a member of the meeting and on motion the following were appointed a committee to arrange for a memorial service and report at next meeting: J. C. Hartzell, E. Williams, J. H. McCarty, J. Evans, H. Green, Scott Chin and J. H. Vance.

Adjourned.

Call to the Ministry, No. 1.

BY REV. J. BRADEN, D.D.

Why am I in the ministry? and how came I into it? are questions which no minister should be afraid to ask or tremble to answer.

God has always chosen his own instruments to accomplish his purposes. Abraham was selected to be the father of God's peculiar people. Joseph to preserve that people alive, Moses to lead them out of bondage, the Levites for the service of the Tabernacle, Aaron and his sons for the priesthood, the prophets to declare his purposes, the Apostles to be witnesses of his Son's life, works, suffering, death, resurrection and ascension, and then themselves and others to declare the Gospel to every creature. All through the old dispensation this choice of men for special work is quite manifest. God giving the clearest evidence to his messengers, and through them, to those unto whom he sent them, of their divine commission. Under the Christian dispensation the Savior said to those whom he would have for his Apostles: "Follow me." "Then they forsook all and followed Him." These apostles organized churches and ordained Elders, whom Paul says were appointed by the Holy Ghost. Jesus tells his disciples to pray the lord of the harvest that "He would send forth more laborers into his harvest." Thus intimating quite clearly that God is to send out men under the new as well as under the old dispensation. This is fully accepted as the doctrine of the M. E. Church, as is plainly implied by the question in the Discipline, "How shall we try them who profess to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach?" Every Minister in the Church, is in this office, because he has at some time answered in the affirmative the question, "Do you think you are moved by the Holy Ghost to preach?" And it is this affirmative answer, accompanied with other evidences of the call, that opens the door to the candidate for the ministry in the M. E. Church.

What are the recognized evidences of this call to the candidate himself. Undoubtedly these may differ in different persons. No two may be influenced exactly alike. One may have an impression on his mind from childhood that he is called to preach; which may continue through youth and till the time that the Church may send him forth into the ministry. Others may have no such thought till later in life, or till they are converted. This impression may vary in intensity. In some cases it may be of such a nature as to wring out the expression of the Apostle "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel." While others will be led by milder impressions, to acquiesce in what they are persuaded is the will of the Master.

Whatever may be these impression, there will be, in every one truly called to the work of the ministry, an earnest desire to be instrumental in saving men. This desire will be present and often as an impelling force, hurrying the candidate, without preparation, into the sacred work. In this as in every other duty which may fall to our lot, God undoubtedly expects us to use our reason, and we are not at liberty to reject these impressions as coming from unworthy sources or motives, unless we have the clearest evidences of the fact. Nor are we to infer that because God has called us to the Ministry, that we must take leave of our common sense, and rush into this work, as if the call, necessarily, brought with it the fullest qualification for the great work of preaching. On the one hand we are to carefully scrutinize our emotions, on this subject, giving them the calm, honest prayerful consideration which the importance of the subject demands, and when fully convinced that it is our duty to accept the sacred trust of becoming a messenger of God to dying men, to accept it as the most important trust committed to man. To resist the clear conviction of duty is neither manly nor Christlike. As there is nothing noble in the resistance of the sinner to the convictions that he ought to be a Christian, so there is nothing commendable in refusing to obey any call of God. On the other hand he is rash, who crowds himself into the sacred calling, unbidden. It is possible to be deceived when guided by our own impulses. On so important a matter as this, we should have these mere emotions or thoughts that we are called of God, strengthened or corroborated by other evidences. These other witnesses, may be the life we lead. Is it holy, Is it one of Christian activity? Do we feel an interest in Sunday-school work, and do we delight in it, and also in other Christian activities. Do we find it pleasant for us to work in the obscure class-meeting, or the humble cottage where but few, poor, ignorant, unfashionable people meet to worship? Are we willing to do the hard, rough toil of the Christian worker? Is our eye steadily fixed on the glory of the cross? Is the soul all on fire to tell the story of salvation to dying men? Does it pant to tell this story to the neglected outcast?—to point the wretched sons and daughters of sin, to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world? As we bring ourselves to the crucial test, of readiness to endure the hardship of the poorest, roughest fields of labor for Christ; and with the disciples of old, rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer shame for His name, our personal evidence that we have a call to the ministry, ought to be satisfactory.

The Pastoral Office.—No. 2.

BY REV. J. H. MACK.

The pastor must be a gentleman. He must always and everywhere be such. To be a gentleman does not mean that you must be stiff, distant, formal in your contact with people, but the very reverse. The perfect gentleman is graceful, kind, approachable; makes all in his presence feel easy, puts on no airs, assumes no dignity or self-importance, moves through society with soomthness. And this is a quality which in the minister is essential to success. He meets all classes of men. Now he is in the poor man's hovel and now in the rich man's palace. In both he has a mission of goodness. He must study to adapt himself to both. This the true gentlemen will do. No where should he be clownish, no where stiff. But you will say the minister must be "social." Well, what is that? Mixing treely with people. Sometimes ministers mistake boorishness for sociability. Instead of being examples of propriety they become examples of rudeness, and in their intercourse with people lower instead of raise the standard of good breeding. All this is done on the score of "sociability." For example. A minister makes a friendly call in a family with whom he is well acquainted—on the most intimate terms. Instead of ringing the bell or knocking at the front door he goes with the ragman and beggar for cold victuals, and common straggler, to the back or side door, and rushes in without ceremony. Talks loud and is boisterous in his style. A sister once said to the writer, "I do think so much of Bro. D——. He makes himself so much at home here. He just comes in any time of the day, and if he is hungry he goes to the pantry and helps himself like one of the family." Now, some people call that sociability. We know a certain little woman into whose house if anybody should come and take such liberties, he would be given to understand something about that text of Scripture which has in it this clause "without are dogs." No cultivated gentleman will do such things. No woman of refinement desires to make a reception room of her kitchen. No such woman cares about converting her pantry into a common feeding stall. Go to the front door, ring or knock. Go in like a gentleman, leave your hat and umbrella in the hall where they belong, instead of piling them on the piano or side board. Yes, but you will say there are many poor families that have no piano or side board, and live in small places. But those same poor people may be able to criticise your manners. If you disregard those rules of common decency, which many of the poorest understand, you lower your influence and often wound their feelings. Many persons have "seen better days," and while they have lost their property they have not lost their sense of propriety. Again, if people sometimes do live in positions of obscurity, and have not learned the forms of genteel society it is your calling to teach them by your example, and thus elevate them to a higher plane. Then, always and everywhere, be a gentleman. There is a power in good manners—they win. We have often known men whose moral integrity we suspected, whose life in all moral respects was not above reproach. But meeting them in society we have felt the charm of their manners. We have felt drawn to them. They were so graceful, so obedient to those rules which common sense dictates, that in spite of moral blemishes on their character even they were admired. Now add gentility to unquestioned virtue, go through the world a Christian gentleman and minister and you wield a two-fold power. Remember the eyes of men are on you—whether in the cars or on the steamboat, or in the hotel, or drawing room or corn field avoid low saying or acting. The minister of Jesus has no right to turn clown even among his brethren. Your very office requires of you to be studious of the feelings of others. And this the true gentleman, whether he be a minister or not, will always do. Shall the merchant or lawyer, or mechanic be pronounced a better pattern of politeness than the minister? Let every young minister who reads this look the matter over and see whether he has always been careful to be the gentleman as well as the preacher. "Evil communications corrupt even good manners." So by the violation of these laws of good breeding you may corrupt others—lower their standard—thus do harm rather than good. Carry your manners into the pulpit. Delicate tastes are before you. I have seen ministers rush into the pulpit in the presence of a respectable audience as if the dogs were after them. Many a minister alienates the sympathies of his audience by his pulpit un-manners so as not to recover them during the entire service. Good manners in the pulpit where you are the "observed of all observers" will add to your power over an audience fully as much as good manners out of it will make your presence felt in society. Study pulpit decorum so that in every utterance, and in every movement you may impress the people before you. Nowhere is character indicated more clearly than in the motions of the body. If before your congregation or in society the minister gives the people to understand that he lacks character though they may not analyze their thoughts and feelings very carefully, and be able to give it a name, yet they will feel the want of something in you, and in just so far as this feeling exists in their minds your power over them is weakened. Then be a perfect gentleman.

Lawrence, Texas.

It may be interesting to some of your readers to know something of Lawrence. It is on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, 28 miles east of Dallas. It was named for Col. J. W. Lawrence, now of Austin, Texas. The town is built on a beautiful site, in one of the many picturesque prairies of this empire State. It was settled by a colony, chiefly from the North. New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Oregon, Canada and several of the Southern States are represented among its people. There is now a population of 700. The country about it is well-settled with thrifty farmers. Early in the seuttlement, a Union Sunday-school was organized, which is now sheltered in the Methodist Tabernacle. A week ago the attendence at the School was 112. It is full of life. The first denomnational movement was in November, 1874, when L. H. Carhart, of Dallas, organized a society for the Methodist Episcopal Church consisting of ten members. In the summer of 1875, the Board of Church. Extension loaned the society $500 to aid them in building. A frame Church, 40x60 was at once erected. It was occupied, however, but a few weeks, when the building was destroyed during a storm, on account of an unobserved defect in the framework, for which the mechanic was responsible. Out of the ruins a Tabernacle with two rooms and a Parsonage of five rooms, were put up. The Church Extension Board came to the relief, not by relinquishing any of the loan, but by a donation of $300 towards the new work. Early in September of last year, the Pastor invited Rev. Hardin Wallace and Rev. C. H. Botkin, both of Illinois, who were laboring in Texas, to hold a series of meetings in Lawrence. God blessed their labor. There were twenty-five conversions, 14 professed the blessing of perfect love and 16 joined the M. E. Church. Hitherto the society was attached to Dallas, with a junior preacher. At the last session of the West Texas Conference, Lawrence was made a station, and the writer, just tranferred from the Southern Illinois Conference was assigned to this post by Bishop Peck. Within a week after Conference, we were fixed in the pasonage. Everything has since moved pleasantly and hopefully. Last Sabbath 13 joined the Church by letter, others are at the door. The whole number of accessions since Conference, 16. We now have a society of 60, with a good harvest before us. We have all the elements of first class society and an interesting future for the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Colored Baptists in Alabama.

At the State Convention of the Colored Alabama Baptists, fifteen out of their twenty-three associations were represented, the State missionary made a report, from which we take the following:

"There is, with a few exceptions, a confused, and bewildered state of things among our churches and ministers. There is very little spiritual, moral, and educational advancement. The outlook upon the young of our race presents a very dark appearance. Intemperance, immortality, and ignorance seem to be binding the race in their slavish chains. There is much false doctrine held forth from the pulpit, and the people are drifting into many hurtful habits, though there are some ministers and some members in all of our churches striving against this tendency. Many deacons are incompetent and the ministers cannot instruct them. If the Master has called all the young men who want to preach, we have a great many laborers in the field. But many of them need a great deal of instruction. Many of the young men seem to think that the first thing in the way of qualifications for a minister is to get a wife. Many of the older ministers can read the Bible in some sort and manifest a great desire to acquire a more perfect knowledge of the way of life. They have to do the church-work and support themselves. Very few of our ministers have clear ideas of Baptist doctrine or church usage. Very few have standard works. They depend on getting books anywhere and everywhere. Many have no chance to mingle with misters of intelligence, and many fail to make use of what they have.

"The Sunday-school is very much neglected. While there are schools in nearly all the churches, very little interest is manifested in them by leading brethren. There is great need of suitable books, and many do not even know where to get them."

It is a hopeful sign when any see and acknowledge their imperfections. What an argument is afforded by the above statement for the hearty support of our Colored Theological Institute at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

A 22 Foot Channel to the Sea.

The New Orleans Times says:

The following promulgation of the throwing open to navigation of the South Pass and Jetties has no returning board flavor about it, but is sufficiently official to afford the most profound gratification to the citizens of this city and to the great business interests of the West. Doubt has at last succumed to reality.

The South Pass jetty company have through their work secured a channel of twenty-two feet to the sea, by several feet the greatest depth that ever existed between the city and the Gulf. Twenty-two feet is but the precusor of a still increased depth.

The work is still going on. Under the able and experienced management of Capt. Andrews, and more favorable conditions, it is now believed that it will be easier and require less time to obtain an additional six feet in depth, than it has to have obtained the present channel.

From the notification of Capt. Andrews it will be seen that an ample channel has been made through the vexations shoal in the river at the head of the passes over 100 feet wide and from 22 to 30 feet deep—and which now, owing to the increased current, and volume of the river, is rapidly deepening. The dredge-boats are still at work there and will be continued, but they will not interfere with the navigation of the channel.

PORT EADS, Feb. 3.—All interested parties are informed that there is now a good straight channel through the shoal at the head of South Pass, with a minimum depth of 22 feet and a maximum depth of 30 feet, and rapidly deepening.

The least width of a twenty foot channel though this shoal to-day, by accurate measurement, is 110 feet.

Through the jetties there is a depth of 20 feet by 200 feet in width.

Plumage of Birds.

The plumage of birds affords a striking instance of design, and therefore proves that there must have been a designer.

Take the fact that their feathers themselves are composed of small parts having barbs, or hooks to fasten them together where tightness is necessary, and the other fact that the inner coating is often of loose fine down, as in the Eider duck to secure warmth. It is interesting, too, to observe that the feathers all lie smoothly in one direction, so that in passing through either the air or water, there is no obstruction.

But a wonderful provision for the water-fowl in particular, strikes us very forcibly as a proof of a superintending Providence in the creation of all animals. A goose, or duck, for instance, being so much in the water, would soon be soaked through all its feathery garments, and be loaded down and unable to swim; and so those water-fowl that make long journeys on the wing through rain storms and mists would, for the same reason, be unable to fly. But here Providence meets this difficulty by giving to these birds small oil-sacs, and the apparatus also for making the oil and always keeping them full, and then placing them within reach of the bill of the bird, so that it can draw out the oil and spread it through and over the whole of its garment of feathers, and thus is the bird clad in a first-class water proof suit, which no India-rubber manufacturer can improve, and which adds nothing whatever to its weight! This waterproof suit can be worn every day, without inconvenience, and is always on hand ready for use.

By watching the fowl, the oiling operation can often be seen, and how very dexterously it is performed. This explains why water runs so readily from a duck's back.

Tobacco and the Gospel.

Rev. N. L. Brakeman well-known to many of our readers gives the following on Tobacco and the Gospel in the Northwestern, and we transfer it to our editorial columns. It is well worth reading and remembering.

There is something both curious and instructive in the alacrity with which men meet the demands of appetite and passion, and the reluctance with which they respond to the claims of religion and humanity. Christian men, who complain at paying one cent per week for missions, will pay 35 or 70 cents and some 100 per week for tobacco, and think it no burden, but a pleasure. I have some "bottom facts" on this subject, and give them to the reader. They may awaken reflection in minds not accustomed to think on the theme of this article.

In preparing, recently, a lecture for the young men of Frankfort, Ind., on "The commercial advantages of Christianity," I went to every house in the city dealing in the article (except the saloons) and got the amount of their sales of tobacco, snuff, and cigars for the last year, and it footed up over $41,000! This, for a town of 3,000 inhabitants —over $13 60 to each man, woman, and child in the place. This, in the hard times of 1876. Of course this tobacco was not all consumed in the city; much of it went to the country, but Frankfort took its full share. Inquiry was also made into the personal expense for the weed, and it ranged from 5 cents to $1 25 per day, for each man, or boy—that is, from $18 22 to $456 per year each consumer! This is more than Michigantown circuit, in our Conference paid its pastor, and his family, last year, for a whole year's faithful service.

Think of one man paying more for tobacco, in one year, than a whole circuit pays for the Gospel! There were 22 traveling preachers in the Northwest Indiana Conference last year who, each, received less money for a whole year's toil than one man pays annually for tobacco! That is something of which to think. Many of our missionaries, in foreign fields, do not get half that sum per year. There are in my congregation 85 men, who either belong to church or are members of families where one or more of the household belong to church, who pay, on an average, 10 cents per day for tobacco and cigars. This is $8 50 per day—$3,102 50 per year. And that is more than double the amonnt the church pays annually to the bishops, presiding elder, pastor, organist and sexton. In other words, less than 100 men pay annually, more for tobacco than 300 church-members pay direct for the Gospel! The church is being aroused on the subject of missions. Is it not time she were awakened on the tobacco-question? Have ministers and church members ever carefully and seriously considered the enormous sums of money annually squandered in this useless, inconvenient, filthy, injurious, unjustifiable tobacco-habit? The commissioner of internal revenue at Washington gives the total product of that manufactured in the United States in 1874, as follows: Of all kinds paying 25 cents per pound revenue, 104,502,548 pounds; snuff, and all kinds paying 32 cents per pound revenue, 3,245,143 pounds; total—107,747,691 pounds. If we put the average price at 57½ cents per pound (and this is low), it gives us, in round numbers, $61,955,000. The number of cigars (for 1874) on which duty was paid, 1,886,697,498. At 3 cents each they cost over $56,6000,000—a total cost of over $118,550,000 a year for tobacco, snuff, and cigars!

Rev. T. F. Parker, in the New York Advocate, estimates the cost of the tobacco annually consumed by the more than 5,000,000 members of American churches at over $19,300,000; and of this sum he says Methodism pays over $3,800,000!—nearly $4,000,000. These figures are doubtless inside of the actual facts. But say, if you will, they are three times too large, and make the tobacco money of Methodism only $1,000,000, and then what a useless, not to say wicked waste of the Lord's money is here!

And many of the Lord's ministers are guilty. I can name Methodist preachers who smoke from 3 to 12 cigars daily. How can they do it and not feel condemned?

How small a part of our tobacco money would wipe out our missionary debt, and double our forces in the foreign field! Who will begin a reformation by quitting the hateful habit, and putting into the missionary treasury, annually, a sum equal to that heretofore wasted upon the filthy weed? Who? "Let judgment begin at the house of God," and let the smoking pulpit lead the way!

Thank God and Take Courage.

It would cheer the hearts of our dear brethren in the South, to know how truly interested in your welfare are the Methodists of the North.

In presenting the necessities of the freedmen, I have journeyed from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, and everywhere have found an eager willingness, on the part of ministers and people, to hear of your work and its condition.

I thank God and take courage first: because there is so much of the spirit of inquiry in the North concerning the actual condition of the South. It is always a good sign when people take an interest in the welfare of others far away.

This country is one, and the people want to know each other. In the days of slavery, the South was too little known by Northern people. We were largely shut out from it on account of the slaveholders' fear, that we should intefere with slavery. Now, communication is easy and cheap, and comparatively unrestricted. To those who inquire of the South and its people, I often say; "Go thither and see for yourself," assured that all who take my advice will see the need of putting forth much more urgent, and comprehensive efforts for the salvation of the people.

The uncertainty in the matter of the Presidential election was one of the most wonderful of God's providences to this nation and to your work. By that uncertainty, the attention of the people of all all classes, has been drawn to the South more than it could be by any other circumstance. The cry of the freedmen has been carried, on every true report, to the ears of the whole people. The very fact of the uncertainty, arising from proscription, riot and blood, has awakened people to ask, why society is in such a state and what can be done for its improvement.

Secondly: I "thank God and take courage" for our Southern work, because our people as they learn the facts show an increasing spirit of generosity to the Freedmen and Missionary cause. You know that the Churches in the North were never so burdened. Many of our generous givers have been greatly reduced in circumstances. Owners of real estate find it difficult to pay taxes, because mortgages are so heavy and rents so unfavorable, while busines men are failing every day for very lack of trade. Under these circumstances it takes more true piety to inspire a man to give to benevolent causes than was needed a few years ago. Many who gave then of their abundance, give now of their poverty. Yet in almost every place where I have presented tee Freedmen's cause, the collections have been increased two or three fold over last year. When God sends us plenty again, these people will give still more liberally.

Preachers who have not received their own allowance, for support, nevertheless in many cases urge the people to give to each of the benevolent collections.

My third reason for thanksgiving and courage, is in what I see in the disposition of Christians to true Fraternity—the Fraternity for which we should work, and the spirit of which is gaining ground in the Church, is that brotherly love which regards the colored man, as well as the white. Courtesy between churches is an excellent thing, which we all feel disposed to encourage. But attention to God's poor children who have been cast out is a better thing, even, than the other. The true Fraternity does not leave the wounded man in the road to die, while it rides on after the Priest and Levite. It is rather the good Samaritan, who is not so shocked at wounds and bruises, but that with his own hands he pours on oil and wine, sets the wounded man on his own beast, carries him to an inn, takes care of him through that day and night, and in every respect show a brother's carefulness to the stranger.

To let go of the prostrate colored people whom we had taken hold of and are lifting up, so as to have our hands free for embraces with the brethren of the M. E. Church South, is not the best way to do our work, or get their sympathy. We should do better and feel better by lifting steadily at our burden and kindly asking them to bear a hand at helping us. Otherwise our rising brother falls back discouraged and dying, and we exchange empty courtisies which cannot profit. God bless that Fraternity which never turns its back on His poor.

"Be of good courage and He shall strengthen your hearts all ye that hope in the Lord." While you labor close by the great weight which is to be lifted, I will get as many as possible to climb up on this end of the lever, and we will help you all we can. So may the kingdom of Christ come.

ISAAC J. LANSING.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 8, 1877.

The Funeral of Dr. Daily.

As announced last week the funeral of Dr. Daily—the sad event of whose death we have recorded, occurred in this city on the 7th inst. As seen elsewhere, a memorial service has been arranged for, by the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting. We have not at hand the materials for a satisfactory sketch of his life. In due time a proper sketch will appear.

A large number of friends gathered at the late residence of the Dr. on Toledano street. Before proceeding to the church, a short service was held, during which Rev. M. C. Cole led in a fervent prayer for God's blessing on the stricken family and that the sad dispensation of Providence might be blessed to the good of the church.

Among the pall-bearers, were Hon. E. Heath, Rev. M. C. Cole, Rev. C. Hunt, Rev. A. Moore.

Ames Church was filled with a large audience at half-past one o'clock, and as the casket containing the remains was borne up the center aisle, the whole audience stood in reverent silence. Rev. J. C. Hartzell read the scriptural portion of the ritual. After the singing of a hymn, Rev. H. Green led in prayer.

The pastor of the church, Rev. J. H. McCarty, D. D., delivered a short but eloquent sermon from the text 1. Cor. 5: 1. After the sermon the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. Braun, pastor of our First German Church, New Orleans.

The casket was then opened and the large audience, composed of representative Ministers and citizens from several denominations, and ministers and members, colored and white of our own church, passed by and took a last look at the remains. Many could not suppress their emotion and wept aloud.

The remains were deposited in Washington cemetry. At the grave Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D. of the M. E. Church South, participated in the services.

Of the life and labors of this man who for many years was one of the most eloquent ministers of our church we will speak again.

True Fraternity.

Rev. R. C. Oliver of Spartansburg, S. C., gives in the Southern Christian Advocate of Feb, 6, an interesting account of the dedication of the Methodist Episcopal Church in his town. Our pastor's name is Rev. F. D. Smith and his church is colored. The new church takes the place of a cheap wooden structure built just after the war, and is a good substantial, two story stone building, a credit to the place. Bro. Oliver is a pastor of the Southern Methodist Church, and with Dr. Whitefoord Smith of Wofford College, took part in the dedication services, one preaching in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Dr. Whitefoord expressed the great satisfaction felt on the occasion and made a happy allusion to the Cape May report. This is true fraternity. Mr. Oliver closes his account in these words of excellent spirit.

It is a historical fact that the Southern Church did more to Christianize the colored people in the South before the war than all other branches of the Church put together. Now after having spent millions of money and sacrificed so many ministerial workers—who not counting their lives dear to themselves, went forth at the command of the Church, from the mountains to the malarial regions of the coast, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God to the colored slaves, and to catechise their children from cabin to cabin on the plantations—let us, notwithstanding all the disadvantages we labor under, possess our souls in patience, and help the freedmen to the Savior whenever we have opportunity.

The Southern Christian Advocate referring editorially to this communication, and also to one in the same paper giving a complimentary account of an African M. E. Conference says:

Let us show the colored people that the white Christians of the South desire to be serviceable to them, and will rejoice in all the real progress they make in morals and religion.

This is true fraternity, both in word and deed.

A Bad Habit in Prayer Cured.

A good brother in the Methodist Church at one of the leading appointments in the Louisiana Conference had some set phrases which he always used in prayer. There were three which always came in while praying for his pastor. "O Lord, cut loose my brother's stammering tongue." "O, Lord, nail my brother's head to the wisdom-post." "O, Lord, nail my brother's hand to the Gospel plow." No matter when the good brother prayed in the church, these three petitions were sure to go to heaven for the Minister.

The pastor who is now a prominent minister in this State, determined to break the brother of what he considered, a foolish use of words. He did it in this way. Calling on the brother to pray, he stepped down from the pulpit and kneeled near by him. Sure enough, after getting fairly started, he cried out, "O Lord, cut loose my brother's stammering tongue." "Don't you answer that prayer, Lord," shouted the pastor. The brother was somewhat embarrassed, but by force of habit he prayed on and said, "O Lord, nail his head to the wisdom-post." "Don't answer that prayer, Lord," shouted the pastor. By this time the brother was brought to a stand-still. The pastor then proceeded to explain, that he considered the set phrases a vain repitition of words, and wanted to break the brother of what he felt to be a foolish habit. The pastor succeeded.

DR. BRADEN of Nashville, Tenn., begins in this issue of the SOUTHWESTERN a series of articles on the work of the ministry. Our ministers especially, will find them instructive.

Rev. J. Hazard Hartzell D. D., pastor of the Church of the Messiah of this city will deliver a lecture on "Manners," Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, 1877, in his church corner St. Charles and Julia Streets. Dr. Hartzell is pronounced an eloquent and instructive speaker by all who have heard him. Admission 50 cents.

We had the pleasure during the past week of receiving a call from Hon. H. Musgrove, of Jackson, Miss. He and his lady visited our city not only on account of Mardi Gras, but with a view possibly, of making New Orleans their home in the near future. They were accompanied by Miss Ford of Baltimore.

THE Central gives an account of a very interesting union meeting of Methodist preachers which occurred Monday the 5th inst. The object was to bring together the Methodist ministry of the city so as to increase personal acquaintance and to consult over matters pertaining to Methodisim in St. Louis and vicinity. The meeting was largely attended, and is to be repeated on the first Monday of each month.

WE have heard much complaint about our subscribers in Tennessee not receiving their papers. A card just at hand says a gentleman at Castalian Springs does not get the SOUTHWESTERN. On examination we find that his address, as sent to us, was Gallatin, and there we have been sending the paper. So of other cases. In sending names always set opposite to them the Post-office address, and the amount of money sent. We use the utmost care in mailing our papers, and think we are not often at fault when they fail to reach our subscribers.

From Washington.

Congress is doing but little. All interest centers in the work of the Electoral Commission.

The Electoral Commission decided by a vote of eight to seven to count the vote of Florida for Hays and Wheeler. The decision was reported to Congress and the Senate accepted the decision and the house rejected it. Under the law the decision stands unless both houses of Congress rejected it. The vote was therefore counted for Hayes and Wheeler.

The count then proceeded until Louisiana was reached. Three certificates of electors were opened, one from Governor Kellogg declaring that Louisiana had been carried for Hayes and Wheeler; another declaring that it had been carried for Tilden and Hendricks, and a third declaring that Louisiana had gone for Cooper and Carey. The last was a burlesque.

No decision has been reached as we go to press, but is hourly expected.

The Northwestern says "Amen."

The Northwestern quotes this resolution on fraternity passed by our Louisiana Conference:

That the establishment of fraternity between the great Methodism of America removes all occasion of criticism from both churches on account of the presence of the other in any part of the nation. Each church is now free, without let or hindrance, to push her work as in her judgment may be deemed best among people of all nationalities and language; and any other interpretation of the work of the Cape May Commission we regard as dangerous to the interests of both churches and the cause of Christ.

And makes this comment.

Amen!! with a Hallet's Point dynamite emphasis. As well may our Southern fellow-citizens ask all Northerners to leave the South because of the tripartite commission. All concerned may as well conclude that this is, and will remain, a republic, and that all citizens for church or other purposes own the eminent domain in common. If is fatuitous to calmly ask us to vacate the South where we have three or four hundred thousand members, and are tolerably (to ourselves, and intolerably to others it seems) sure to stay until our great-great grandchildren go to join their four times great-grandparents.

Our Southern Methodism.

A member of the Sabbath-school at Mansfield, La., Melissa Jones, writes to know if we want letters from the Sabbath-school children. We shall be dleighted to receive them. If there is any class of people we love more than preachers it is the Sabbath-school children. Make your letters short. Do not say you "take your pen in hand" or you "write these few lines," but just give at once what you wish to say about your school, what you learn there, how you learn it, your own love for the Savior and his for you, or your own ideas about religion etc. Do not say that your school is either prosperous" or "flourishing." These are what the preachers say about them, and it is about all, that many of them do say.

Rev. A. J. Turner, Victoria, Texas writes: "I found on coming to this work that although it has been two years since it was made a circuit no church had been organized. I have made my first round, preaching at each appointment. I have organized two churches, and we have a promising Sabbath school of forty members. On last Sabbath I had a very large congregation, and after the sermon three persons united with the church, and ten others bowed at the altar asking us to pray for them. Thank the Lord for the indications of good to us."

Rev. L. Bradford, Presiding Elder writes from Jackson, Miss.: "Our first Quarterly meeting at Hazelhurst, was held on the 11th and 12th inst. A protracted meeting has been in progress for the past two weeks. The members have been quickened into new life, and several are enquiring the way to Zion. May the good work continue. Rev. Jas. Ellis, the pastor returns for the third year to his work, and enters upon his duties with new zeal, determined not only to build up and extend the Redeemer's kingdom, but, also, to build a new church.

Rev. James Henderson, Columbus, Texas, says: "A protracted meeting is in progress at this time. There have been some conversions and fifteen accessions to the church, and our congregations constantly increasing. The Lord speed the good work. I am striving to give the SOUTHWESTERN a general circulation among my people."

Rev. Jeremiah Smith, Harrisburg, Texas sends a list of subscribers and adds, "I have received so far this year, four persons on probation and twenty-one in full church connection, my people are poor and uneducated; pray for us, that the Lord may direct and bless us.

Rev. B. H. Johnson, Gallatin, Tenn., writes: "The Lord is pouring out his Spirit at this place. We have had forty conversions and sixty-eight accessions to the Church since Jan. 7th. Rev. E. Provine, our preacher in charge, is doing a good work. He is the right man in the right place."

Sunday School Congress.

A Sunday-school congress of the Methodist Episcopal Church was recently held in Chicago. J. H. Vincent, D. D., presided.

The question was asked: "Why is it desirable to hold throughout the country a series of Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school congresses?" To which the following answers were given: "To concentrate our forces." "To educate our people in the work of our Churches." "To bring forward the best ideas of our people." "To secure our young people to the Church when converted." "To secure practical reports of our Sunday-school work." "Greater unity between the congregation and Sunday-school." "To promote the study of the Church discipline on the part of pastors, Sunday-school superintendents, and presiding elders."

The number of Sunday-schools in the Methodist Episcopal Church, 19,379; increase during the year, 273; officers and teachers, 20,923; increase, 3,010; scholars, 1,441,950; increase 43 028; conversions, 98,559; increase, 23,392; circulation of Sunday-school Journal, 115,000; Sunday-school Advocate, 305,000; Normal Class, 2,000; Picture Lesson Paper, 125,000; Berean Quarterly, 7,000; Brean Leaf, 1,200,000, The Church Leader, 40,000; "The Five Years," 36,500; number of bound volumes of text books, 90,933; number of bound volumes in libraries, 133,926; whole number of pages published, 157,615,200.

Death of Rev. G. W. Williams.

Dr. Braden under date of Feby. 3d, writes from Nashville, Tenn:

A note from Rev. A. Rudisill, of the 1st inst., says, Rev. G. W. Williams of the Tennessee Conference and Principal of the Conference Seminary at Hollow Rock, Tenn., died to-day. Bro. Williams has been an earnest worker in the church, and has organized and successfully conducted the school over which he presided, at his death. He will be missed in our Conference and specially so in the school to which he gave his earnest and continuous labors.

Carnival Week.

Carnival week has come and gone again. The city was thronged with strangers, and there has been the usual scenes of fun and frolic on the street, especially on Mardi Gras day, and the usual announcements of "Grand Balls," "Masquerades," &c., &c.

The week was ushered in on Thursday night last by a night pageant given by the Knights of Momus. Momus is the god of burlesque, and the subject chosen was leaders of the national and state republican party. President Grant was represented as Beelzebub, ruler of Hell, who by a rebellion against Satan had come to rule the infernal regions. Messrs. Morton, Carpenter, (who by the way is now pleading the democratic cause before the Electoral Commission) Fish, and many others of the national government, and Messrs. Packard, Antoine and others of this state, were all assigned some office of importance in the government of Hades. There were nineteen cars in which the scenes were arranged and drawn through the streets. On the last was the Ship of State, wrecked and ruined, going down to destruction. It is understood the costumes made in Paris cost $15,000. The only redeeming feature of this display was that it was so poorly illuminated and many of the scenes so mixed up with Mythological characters, (often improperly so) that the populace scarcely understood what was meant until the next morning papers told them. The subject was manifestly out of place, and insulting to the intelligence and patriotism of the American people. The officers and soldiers of the United States Army stationed here felt the insult keenly, and at once gave notice that they would not take part in the reception of Rex, on Mardi Gras day, as has been the custom. But several leading citizens called and made due apologies, and a portion of the army here turned out. General Nicholls says:

"The sentiment of the whole community is opposed to what occurred at the celebration Thursday. It was the act of a few private individuals, entirely unauthorized and unknown, and universally condemned and regretted."

This dispatch of General Nicholls is a severe cut on the Hon. Louis Bush, Hon. E. O. White and sixteen other prominent democratc gentlemen who formed the reception committed at the Opera House. It is also questionable whether this condemnation would have been given had Mr. Tilden's election been assured, as was probably anticipated when the insulting burlesque was planned.

On Tuesday, Mardi Gras day, a pageant of unusual power and merit passed through the streets.

The progress of civilization as indicated by modes of warfare was illustrated by twenty scenes on as many cars. We can only refer our readers to the secular papers for a description. The expense we learn from one who participated was nearly $20,000.

Tuesday night, another pageant passed through the streets, under the direction of King Comus. The different phases of fashionable life were illustrated in truly artistic style. There were twenty cars. The expense was probably $15,000. Any of our readers, who want the fullest and best description of these pageants published, should send and get the Weekly Budget of this city containing accounts, with good pictures of all.

At the Mariners' church, of New York city, on a recent Sabbath, seventy persons made a confession of faith. Since October, 1875, a period of a little over two years, five hundred and sixty members have been added to this church—probably the most rapid increase enjoyed by any church in this country.

The "Moravian Year Book," for 1877, reports 13 bishops in different parts of the world and 97,262 members. Of this total, 67,413 are to be found in the missions The territory occupied by the "Brethren" is divided into three provinces—German, British and American. The German province contains 7.749 members; the British, 5,673; and the American, 13,753.

The work of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, from its organization, is thus summed up: In all, 350 churches have been organized, into which have been received over 80,000 communicants; while the missionaries have scattered abroad, through upward of 2,300 different publications, in 46 languages, more than 1,300,000,000 pages of educational and religious literature. They have reduced 26 languages to writing, and prepared grammars and dictionaries of great value both, to missionaries and to students of comparative philology.

The Missionary, an organ of the colored Methodists of South Carolina, tells us that there is a strong movement in the South toward a large emigration to Africa. It says: "We are in receipt of letters from various sections of the country—Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, and Mississippi—all desiring to leave this country, because the Democratic governments are curtailing their privileges in those States, and the system of vassalage is so complete that many of them cannot make a living if this state of things continue." It declares "that there will be a mighty hegira to Africa in a few years."

The adventists are all agog over the Eastern war. After intricate complications of "days" and "times" had been mastered they found themselves beating out to the sea, on the XI. chapter of Daniel. The king of the North is necessarily Russia and the king of the South is Turkey. Close personal acquaintance with Adventists is said to develop the fact that they are counting the "thousand three hundred and four and thirty days" on their fingers, and are going to have a new guess at their latitude and longtitude.

Tell Me That Once More.

The first Moravian missionaries in Greenland labored for several years without any apparent success. They seem to have thought, with many in the present day, that they should first instruct the natives in the existence of God, the creation of the world, the nature of their souls, etc.; and all this they did without exciting any degree of attention. On one occasion, however, while one of these good men was occupied in translating the Gospels, he was visited by a number of the savages, who were desirous of knowing the contents of the book. He began an address by giving them some general Scriptural information, adding an account of the sufferings of Jesus; reading them the account of His agony, and speaking much of the anguish which made Him sweat great drops of blood. Now began the Spirit of God to work. One of these men, named Kayernack, stepped forward to the table, and said, in an earnest and affecting tone, "How was that? Tell me that once more, for I would fain be saved too." Never had such language been heard from a Greenlander before. A full statement of the Gospel was given; this man became indeed converted to God, and eminently useful. A change took place in the general character of the preaching of the brethren, and their consequent success is well known. The good fruit is to be met with at the present day.—[London Sunday School Teacher.

Like the Swift Ships.

How swiftly the mariner flies from a threatening storm, or seeks the port where he will find his home. You have sometimes seen the ship cut through the billows, leaving a white furrow behind her, and causing the sea to boil around her. So is life like the swift ships when the sails are filled by the wind, and the vessel dashes on, dividing a passage through the crowded water. Swift are the ships, but swifter far is life. The wind of time bears me along. I cannot stop its motion. I may direct it with the rudder of God's Holy Spirit. Like a swift ship, my life speeds on its way till it reaches its haven. Where is the haven to be? Shall it be found in that land of bitterness and dreariness, the region of the lost? Or shall it be the sweet haven of eternal peace, where not a troubling wave can rustle the quiescent glory of my spirit?—Spurgeon.

Jefferson's Opinion.

In 1822 when there was a prospect of war between Russia and Turkey, Thomas Jefferson wrote to John Adams as follows: "It seems that the canibals of Europe are going to eat one another again. I hope we shall prove how much happier for man the Quaker policy is, and that the life of the feeder is better than that of the fighter. Let the latter be our office, and let us milk the cow while Russia holds her by the horns and Turkey by the tail."

Welcome stranger to your church and pews. If you should chance to come in and find your seat occupied, never mind, but try to be thankful that you have given some one else the privilege of hearing the Gospel preached. You may sit somewhere else for one day. And when service is over, go to the stranger and welcome him among you, inviting him back again. That is the Christian part for you to perform, and any other conduct belies your profession.

Wiley University.

Wiley University has just had the pleasure of receiving a visit from Bishop Wiley and Dr. Rust and wife. We only regret that their stay was of necessity so short. They found the University, as we suppose they found the work everywhere, in much need. They left us with good assurances that this place is to receive more attention than in the past. This school session will continue until the 24th of May. We urge upon our preachers and people to give us a larger patronage. Success in our work is only to be had at the cost of untiring effort. Trusting to Divine Providence, we ask for the co-operation of our people and an increase of patronage.

Constitutional Amendment

MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS

The National Temperance Society have just reprinted the very able and comprehensive speech of Hon. H. W. Blair, delivered in the American Congress, in support of his Amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the manufacture and sale of distilled liquors. The speech is full of facts and arguments which, should be read by every temperance man and woman, and by every liquor drinker, manufacturer and seller, in the country. The business is to be stopped by a Constitutional Amendment adopted by the States. The necessity of the step is evident and the argument is conclusive. Let this important speech be scattered everywhere. We have fixed the price so that it can be circulated in every community. Every temperance organization in the land should send for a number of copies for general distribution. 12 mo, 48 pages. Price on thick paper, with covers, single copies, 10 cents, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred; thin paper, without covers, 6 cents single copies, 50 cents per dozen, $4 per hundred. Address

Disease Grows Apace.

Like an ill wind, and cannot be mastered too early. What is a trifling attack of sickness to-day may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivalled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous, and in their latest developments are themselves often fatal.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

It is hard to realize that the unfearing Elijah of Carmel is the same one who slinks away, afraid of a woman's threat, and ingloriously prays to die under a juniper tree in the desert. But such alterations of feeling are not wholly unknown to almost every one. We rarely climb any height without descending correspondingly low afterward. No one abides always on a mount of transfiguration.

In his flight he tarried not till he reached Beersheba, ninety-five miles away, in the kingdom of Judah, and on the borders of the wilderness. There he lay down under a shrub, called here "a juniper tree," a species of broom having white blossoms, and by its dense foliage affording a most grateful protection from the sun, the wind, and the rain. Here the man who had been fleeing for his life most inconsistently prayed that he might die! It was a singular choice of deaths to make. To have died by the hands of Jezebel, manfully upholding the true faith to the last, denouncing her and her abominable worship, exhorting the people to remain true to the God whom they had once more acknowledged—that would have been a death to be coveted beside the obscure and inglorious one he was so anxious for. He urges as a reason for granting his request that he is no "better than his fathers." His discouragement is our encouragement, for it shows us that this mighty man of faith was "indeed a man subject to like passions as we are." The heavens were shut up at his prayer, fire fell, and rain was sent, not because he was stronger and better than we are, but because of his faith in God.

God pitied his weakness, but did not then rebuke it. He attended to the wants of the famishing body before he ministered to those of the spirit No man is fitted to receive spiritual truth who is exhausted by overwork and by starvation. It is absurd to leave a tract where one should leave a loaf of bread. Leave the loaf first, and, afterward, the other will be gratefully accepted. He who feeds the body with material bread will, in most instances, find the way opened to feed the soul with the bread of life. The answer to Elijah's prayer was a summons to life—"arise and eat!" Happily for us, all our petitions are not answered. Those self-destructive ones, born of weakness and despair, are always denied. God still had work for Elijah to do. When he has nothing further for us to do here, he will call us home without prayer of ours. Beside him was a cruse of water and a cake of unleavened bread, such as is still the highly prized food of that region. Twice was he commanded to eat, and in the strength of that food he went "forty days and forty nights."

He came to Horeb and lodged—that is, passed the night—in a cave. Here the "word of the Lord came to him" for the first time in tone of rebuke. His extreme physical depression must have passed away, and he was strong in the strength of the food which he had eaten days before under the juniper tree. No reason now why he should not be probed. And the question was a very searching one. What doest thou hear, Elijah? Every word in that is empathic. What doest. Nothing—absolutely nothing, save aimlessly wandering up and down. Thou. Of all men. The one at whose word the heavens were shut up, who was miraculously sustained at Cherith and Sareptan and who was the victor on Mount Carmel. Here. When you should be at the front, where there are blows to be taken as well as given, and where there is good to be done and evil to be endured. Elijah? The man whose God is Jehovah"—who believed that his God was able to do all things, and yet doubted that he was able to overcome a woman.

And now his reply. I have been very jealous. Passionately, impetuously, ungovernably jealous. Zealous, but not sustained, firey, but not persistent, courageous, but fickle. The children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant. He had forsaken his cause just at the most inopportune moment. Thrown down thine alters. No new thing. Knew that before he went to Carmel. Slain thy prophets. Not all of them, Obadiah had saved a hundred. I, even I only, am left. The more reason why he should not prove recreant to duty. If all depended upon him, then, certainly, he had no excuse for being in the desert. They seek my life. There is something worse than the loss of life—the loss of honor. Better nobly die than ignobly live.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

SOUTHWESTERN
Christian Advocate,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.,

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.
1877.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The Southwestern is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want to be posted on our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There, is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. To be posted in our Southern work is to be able to give the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2 The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms,

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the Southwestern one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year,

Family Circle.

BOTH SIDES.

A man in his carriage was riding along,
A gaily dressed wife by his side;
In satin and laces she looked like the queen,
And he like a king in his pride.

A wood sawyer stood on the street as they passed;
The carriage and couple he eyed;
And said, as he worked with his saw on a log,
"I wish I was rich and could ride."

The man in the carriage remarked to his wife,
"One thing I would give if I could—
I'd give my wealth for the strength and the health
Of the man who was sawing the wood."

A pretty young maid, with a bundle of work,
Whose face, as the morning, was fair,
Went tripping along with a smile of delight,
While humming a love-breathing air.

She looked on the carriage: the lady she saw,
Arrayed in apparel so fine,
And said in a whisper, "I wish from my heart
Those satins and laces were mine."

The lady looked out on the maid with her work,
So fair in her calico dress,
And said, "I'd relinquish position and wealth,
Her beauty and youth to possess."

Thus it is in the world, whatever our lot,
Our minds and our time we employ
In longing and sighing for what we have not,
Ungrateful for what we enjoy.

Little Foxes.

One little fox is "By-and-by." If you track him you come to his hole—never.

Another little fox is "I Can't." You had better set on him an active, plucky little thing, "I Can" by name. It does wonders.

A third little fox is "No Use in Trying." He has spoiled more vines, and hindered the growth of more fruit than many a worse-looking enemy.

A fourth little fox is "I Forgot." He is a great cheat. He slips through your fingers like time. He is seldom caught up with.

Fifth little fox is "Don't care." Oh, the mischief he has done!

Sixth little fox is "No Matter." It is matter whether your life is spoiled by small faults.

Play with the Children.

"When we were all children at home," said a friend, "Nothing delighted us so much as a romp with my father; the hour of his home-coming was the happiest in all the twenty-four. I often think if all parents would play with their children, home discipline might entirely lose its severe aspect, and become a law of love." Children are not made good by the rod of power. How many parents are willing to devote an hour or so to play with the children? As a little kitten will stop lapping her milk to play with the string you draw across the floor, so will the child leave almost everything for a romp with its father or mother. In these romps, and during these moments of recreation, the great lesson of love is learned by the child. This close companionship makes the bond between parent and child which results in the future acceptance of advice and guidance.

The Father's Face.

A certain Sunday-school was preparing for an entertainment, in which some of the scholars were to speak short pieces. In practicing for this occasion, a little girl named Bessie, only five years old, was placed on the platform to speak her piece. She began very nicely, but pretty soon she stopped, looked all around the building and seemed greatly troubled. Then her lips began to quiver, and her little frame shook with sobs. Her father stepped out from behind a pillar, where he had been watching her, and taking her in his arms, said:

"[illegible] darling, what is the matter? [illegible] my little girl knew [illegible]"

"[illegible], but I couldn't see [illegible] stand where I can [illegible] your face, and then [illegible]"

[illegible] this was! And [illegible] what Jesus does for us, [illegible] to serve Him. He [illegible] we can look right [illegible] at times. And in [illegible] is nothing but good- [illegible] love, and tenderness to- [illegible] What a comfort this is.

[illegible] Door.

[illegible] Gerard de Kampis [illegible] and very proud [illegible] the completion of [illegible] all his great [illegible] to a grand [illegible] of the [illegible] the guests made [illegible] in which the [illegible] and [illegible] fortunate [illegible] how proud [illegible] however, [illegible] When [illegible] of the guests began to laugh, and Gerard himself looked as much as to say, "This man has gone mad!" Wishing, however, to have the clue to the enigma, he continued:

"But which door do you mean?"

"I mean that through which you will one day be carried to your grave," replied the other.

These words struck both guests and host, and made the latter reflect most seriously. The proud man remembered the vanity of all things earthly, and from henceforth, he no longer thought only of the perishable treasures he had once so gloried in. He was completely altered, and only makes use of his riches for good works.

How to Judge Books.

Would you know whether the tendency of a book is good or evil, examine in what state of mind you lay it down. Has it induced you to suspect that what you have been accustomed to think unlawful may, after all, be innocent, and that that may be harmless which you have hitherto been taught to think dangerous? Has it tended to make you dissatisfied and impatient under the control of others; and disposed you to relax in that self-government, without which both the laws of God and man, tell us there can be no virtue, and consequently no happiness?

Has it attempted to abate your admiration and reverence for what is great and good, and to diminish in you the love of your country and your fellow creatures? Has it addressed itself to your pride, your vanity, your selfishness, or any other of your evil propensities? Has it defiled the imagination with what is loathsome? Has it disturbed the sense of right and wrong which the Creator has implanted in the human soul?

If so—if you are conscious of all or any of those effects—or if, having escaped from all, you have felt that such were the effects it was intended to produce, throw the book in the fire, whatever name it may bear in the title page! Throw it in the fire, young man, though it should have been the gift of a friend; young lady, away with the whole set, though it should be the prominent furniture of a rosewood book-case.—Southey.

To Young Brides.

The pastor of a church in one of our large cities said not long ago; "I have officiated at forty weddings since I came here, and in every case, save one, I felt that the bride was running an awful risk. Young men of bad habits and fast tendencies never marry girls of their own sort, but demand a wife above suspicion. So, pure, sweet women, kept from the touch of evil through the years of girlhood, give themselves, with all their costly dower of womanhood, into the keeping of men who, in base associations, have learned to undervalue all that belongs to them, and then find no time for repentance in the sad after years. There is but one way out of this that I can see, and that is for you—the young women of the country—to require in association and marriage, purity for purity, sobriety for sobriety, and honor for honor. There is no reason why the young men of this Christian land should not be just as virtuous as its young women, and if the loss of your society and love be the price they are forced to pay for vice they will not pay it. I admit with sadness that not all of our young women are capable of this high standand for themselves or others, but I believe there are enough earnest, thoughtful girls in the society of our country to work wonders if faithfully aroused. Dear girls, will you help us, in the name of Christ? Will you, first of all, be true to yourselves and God; so pure in your inner and outer life that you shall have a right to ask that the young men with whom you associate, and especially those you marry, shall be the same? The awful gulf of dishonor is close beside your feet, and in it fathers, brothers, lovers and sons are going [illegible]. Will you not help us in ou[illegible] work?"

You cannot build a house on the tops of trees, and you cannot build up a Church that symbolizes the real Church idea that rests on the upper level of fashionable society. If the Church intends to represent God, then must it fill its bosom with affection for the lowly and with anxiety for those that are morally lost.

House and Farm.

WHAT WILL PAY?—We have often urged our farmers to diversify their crops so as to avoid total loss from the failure of any single product. The true secret of success is the absolute certainty of raising your own supplies. Everybody can raise a few hogs and make his own bacon. The trouble and expense is a mere nothing, but the amount saved is an important item. The poorest land will afford pasture to a few sheep and the wool and lambs are cash articles, in constant demand at living prices. The poultry yard, rightly conducted, yields a daily cash income besides affording a rich, nourishing and palatable food for the home table. A few good milch cows, one or more, should always be found on every farm. The milk, butter and cheese produced can be converted almost every day, into money, or used to great advantage in the family. All the foregoing stock should be found upon every farm, and they may be regarded as the foundation of the farmers' support. The poorest farmer can procure these—if he attempts to live without them he will always remain poor.

The garden should next receive careful attention. From it, at small expense, a large portion of the family support can be procured. Give thorough and constant cultivation, manure highly, plant a succession of small crops and you can afford to hold your principal crop, be it cotton, tobacco, wheat or rice for higher prices. Observe these suggestions and the end of the year will find you with a plethoric pocket and a smiling face.—Son of the Soil.

Business Law.

The following brief complilation of business law is worth a careful preservation, as it contains the essence of a large amount of legal verbiage:

It is not necessary to say on a note "for value received."

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

A note by a minor is void.

A contract made with a minor is also void.

A contract made with a lunatic is void.

A note obtained by fraud, or from a person in a state of intoxication, cannot be collected.

If a note is lost or stolen, that does not release the maker; he must pay, if the consideration for which it was given, and the amount can be proven.

An indorser of a note is exempt from liability, if not served with notice of dishonor within twenty-four hours of its non-payment.

Notes bear interest only when it is so stated.

Principals are responsible for the acts of their agents.

Each individual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amount of debts of the firm.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

The law compels no one to do impossibilities.

An agreement without a consideration is void.

Signatures made with a lead pencil are good in law.

A receipt for money is not always conclusive.

The acts of one partner bind all the rest.

Pruning Fruit Trees.

After pruning it is best to cover the wounds with a hot mixture of tar and pulverized brick dust, or fine sand. A solution of shellac in alcohol as thick as can be applied with a brush, is considered by many as the best preparation that can be applied. During the mild days of winter, orchards may be pruned—while little else can be done; but good judgment should be exercised in regard to selecting the branches to be cut away. It is ruinous to cut and slash away one-third to one-half the limbs. All that should be done is to give the trees a good shape, and only cut away such limbs as are plenty in excess of the natural requirements of the tree, to conform to the extent of its roots. If we take away too much of the top of a tree, it is like taking blood from a man—the more that is taken, the less vitality remains in him, therefore in pruning, only the few unsightly branches, and those improperly situated, should be cut away.—Farmers Friend.

The Gospel of Merit.

Where there is so much rivalry as in the manufacture of family medicines, he who would succeed must give positive and convincing proof of merit. This is an age of inquiry. People take nothing for granted. They must know the "whys" and "wherefores" before acknowledging the superiority of one article over another. Among the few preparations that have stood the test, those manufactured by R. V. Pierce, M. D., of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., have for many years been foremost. The truth of any statement made concerning them can be easily ascertained, for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are now prescribed by many physicians in curing obstinate cases of Catarrh and incipient Consumption The Discovery has no equal in curring Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and Nervous Affections. It allays all Irritation of the mucous membrane, aids digestion, and when used with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets readily overcomes torpid liver and Constipation, while the Favorite Prescription has no rival in the field of prepared medicine in curing diseases peculiar to females. If you wish to "know thyself" procure a copy of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," an illustrated book of nearly 1000 pages, adapted to the wants of everybody. Price $1,50, postage prepaid. DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 18, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

JNO. P. BENTLY,
Chief of Public Debt Division, 1st Auditor's office, Treasury Dep't Washington, D. C.

National Hotel, Washington, Dec. 2, '74.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

GENTS.—I very cheerfully state that I have used Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, prepared by you, with decided benefit, and although yet somewhat troubled with rheumatism, I am in much better condition than I was some months ago, which improvement I alone attribute to this remedy.

Yours, truly, ALEX. H. STEPHENS,
Member of Congress of Georgia.

ONLY.

Only a seed—but it chanced to fall
In a little cleft of a city wall,
And taking root grew bravely up,
Till a tiny blossom crowned its top.

Only a flower—it chanced that day
That a burdened heart passed by that way;
And the message that through the flower was sent,
Brought the weary soul a sweet content.

For it spoke of the lilies so wonderfully clad;
And the tired heart grew strangely glad,
At the thought of a tender care over all,
That noted even a sparrow's fall.

Only a thought—but the work it wrought
Could never by tongue or pen be taught:
For it ran through a life, like a thread of gold,
And the life bore fruit—a hundred fold.

Only a word, but 'twas spoken in love,
With a whispered prayer to the Lord above,
And the angels in heaven rejoiced once more,
For a new-born soul entered in by the door.

Washington Letter.

The great Electoral Tribune has rendered its first decision and that in favor of the Republicans, at which the framers of the law upon the Democratic side feel very indignant, and on Saturday there seemed to be a disposition to fillibuster in the House, but to-day a better judgment prevails and the counting of the electoral vote is proceeding slowly and will probably reach the State of Louisiana. We shall have some delay over that and a short cohtest over Oregon, and the count will be ended, one way or the other, but at present it seems almost certain that Hayes will be declared elected. There is great interest in the matter felt at Washington, and the galleries of the House were filled early this morning by those holding tickets of admission, and hundreds tried by some way to coax a kind-hearted Senator or member to attempt the impossible and secure one of the coveted red pieces of pasteboard.

One of the most worthy projects now before Congress is a proposition for the erection of two large public buildings in this city. One is for a new Congressional library, for the present increase of books is so rapid that there is no longer room to place them in that portion of the capitol assigned for that purpose. It is proposed to have a large structure, in some central part of the city, perhaps upon Judiciary Square, and then make this library what such a collection should be, a true national institution that might vie with the libraries of the old world. The Gothic style of architecture is suggested in the plan, for the reason, I presume, that we have no public buildings of that order in the capital. It ought to be large enough to contain all the volumes that may be procured for a century to come.

The other building asked for, and [illegible] on the Smithsonian [illegible] National Museum, to [illegible] government collections of [illegible] at the Centennial, [illegible] presented to our government [illegible] of the great exhibition [illegible] is little doubt but [illegible] can be made [illegible] the world. It is to [illegible] that this subject [illegible] attention of Congress [illegible] of the whole [illegible] generations can be [illegible] at an early date. [illegible] interest not to the [illegible] but to the [illegible] year more [illegible] becoming a [illegible] years this [illegible] center [illegible] be now it [illegible] have [illegible] toward [illegible] is [illegible] each year [illegible] close [illegible] to see [illegible] collection [illegible] had said [illegible] will cease [illegible] to study where he can know most of the whole country, by the assembly of people from all our borders at its capital.

Our churches are at work this winter, but at present there is not so much outward interest as during one part of last winter, but good results followed the meeting of the Christian Convention when Henry Moorhouse of England taught us how easy it was to use the Word in its simple plain teachings.

The Sabbath-school work is progressing better than ever before, and in aid of this the Chautauqua Normal Class, held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms every Saturday evening, is making its power felt in the various Sabbath-schools. D. O. F. Prisbrey, secretary of the Chautauqua Alumni, is receiving letters from all over the country in regard to organizing Normal classes, and if these letters continue, Dr. Vincent will be obliged to have a separate branch of his extensive field of Sunday-school work, to attend to these Normal class organizations. We shall soon have a grand system of Sabbath-school teaching all over this great country. Dr. Prisbrey in connection with Prof. J. W. Bischoff of this city have issued the first of a series of quarterly Review Services, with new music. This is to fill up a vacant place that has seemed to need some such effort, and right well has it been done. This Beview for the first quarter of 1877, has a requiem in memory of the lamented P. P. Bliss, the words by Rev. Dr. J. E Rankin, D. D., and music by Pro. Bischoff.

Rev. Dr. Newman of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, has just finished a course of fine evening discourses upon the "buried cities of the world," taking as topics, Rome, Herculaneum and Pompeii, Ninevah, Babylon and Jerusalem. These discourses were all exceedingly well received, the attendance being so large that there was not even standing room in the church. It is to be hoped the Dr. will have the series printed in a volume for the general public.

GOLDEMAR.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12th, 1877.

Arkansas Conference.

The Arkansas Conference met at Ft. Smith, Jan. 31st, 1877, Bishop I. W. Wiley in the chair. Of the preachers 29 were present and 4 absent. R. W. Hammet was elected Secretary.

Aaron Hyde, L. W. Elkins and C. D. Fry were ordained deacons. M. W. Whittenberg and R. H. Johnson, local preachers, were ordained elders.

L. J. Bruner was expelled from the ministry and church by a Judicial Committee presided over by R. W. Hammett.

The vote on the restrictive rule to change the votes of representation to General Conference was 2 for, and 23 against. The vote on re strictive rule changing limitations of Episcopacy as to number of districts in a conference was, none for, and 23 against. Little Rock was selected as seat of next Conference.

Dr. Rust (accompanied by his wife) spent five days at the Conference posting himself as to the condition and necessities of the Freedmen's interest, and its ability to establish and sustain a Freedman's school in the State. The anniversary of this society was very interesting, and material aid was rendered by the addresses and presence of Mrs. Rust.

Bishop Wiley seemed to be in his happiest mood, and his Sabbath sermon was plain, practical and instructive, and full of feeling, producing an effect upon his large audience, especially the preachers, that ought to remain with them all the year.

The report of the Committee on books and periodicals, adopting the "Central Christian Advocate" as their Conference organ, was unanimously adopted.

The Statistics of the Conference are as follows: Probationers, 682; Full Members, 4519; Local Preachers, 90; Deaths, 56; Churches, 51; Parsonages, 4; Sunday Schools, 54; Officers and Teachers, 376; Scholars, 2487.

Collections for Missions, $247 90: Episcopal Fund, $34 50; Church Extension, $10 90; S. S. Union, $8 75; Tracts, $2 60; Freedman's Aid, $2 45.

The Florida Conference.

The fifth session was held at Jacksonville. Bishop Harris, Presiding, and Rev. S. B. Darnell, Secretary.

During the year several of the preachers had been interfered with in their work by political agitation, although none of them had anything to do with politics. In the Jacksonville District three new churches had been built. In the St. John's District several new organizations had been made among new settlements. On the Gainesville District, in spite of political excitement and poverty, the preachers had stood nobly to their work. In all the Districts new church buildings were being erected.

The Conference voted largely against the propositions to change the second and third Restrictive rules.

Bishop Harris gave account of his journey round the world to a large audience in the Congregational Church, on Saturday night.

Rev. J. B. Ford, Sunday-school Agent, was among the visitors. He presented the cause he represents well.

FRATERNITY.

The pastor of the Southern Methodist Church placed his pulpit at the disposal of the Conference, and Rev. J. B. Ford preached for him at night, and Rev. J. T. Leuton preached for him in the morning. The Conference adopted the following on fraternity:

A true spirit of fraternity lies at the very basis of all true Christian character. It is the working out of the great law of love as inculcated by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who taught us, "a new commandment give I unto you that ye love another." This law knows no distinction on account of denominational difference, latitude of operation, or of race, while the rule of its operation is the brotherhood of man, and the command, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." The manifest evidence of the widespread developement of this spirit among the various Christian Churches of the land is one of the most cheering signs of the times, and we see in it indications of the massing of the Christian forces, preparatory to the final conquest of the world to Christ.

We hail therefore the action of the commission appointed by the two great Methodisms of our land as eminently wise and considerative, and calculated, if lived up to in its spirit, to promote the peace, harmoy and fellowship of these two communions in particular, and the cause of the Christian Church in general. And we hereby fully indorse the action of that commission, and pledge ourselves to earnest effort toward carring out the recommendations as set forth in its published reports.

Rev. G. W. Williams.

Last week we announced the death of this minister of our church in Tennessee. The following is a sketch of his life clipped from the Methodist Advocate:

Rev. George W. Williams, principal of the West Tennessee Seminary, died at Hollow Rock, Tenn., February 1, 1877, aged thirty-five years and three months. He was born in Oswego county, N. Y., November, 1841. His conversion took place at the age of seventeen. He first entered the South as captain of a company of volunteers, in defense of the "Flag of our Country." His next visit was as a teacher of the freedmen at Murfreesboro, where he did excellent service for the ex-slave, but now free man. Recommended by the Quarterly Conference of Murfreesboro charge, he entered the ministry of the Church, October 2, 1869, at which time he was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference of the M. E. Church, and for seven years and three months has been a faithful laborer in the Master's vineyard. He was an earnest, faithful preacher of the Gospel and a zealous worker in the Sunday-school cause. His ministry has been one of success. Souls by the score have been converted under his ministry, saints have been edified and the cause of Christ advanced. Brother Williams has filled the following appointments. 1869, Sneedville circuit; 1870, Savannah; 1871—'73, Huntingdon; 1874-'75, Professor in West Tennessee Seminary; 1876, Principal West Tennessee Seminary. During his pastoral charge of Huntingdon circuit he was elected Superintendent of the Board of Education of Carrol county and for three years labored hard for the establishment of public schools. The present advanced condition of the free-school system of that county shows the success of his labors. His connection with the West Tennessee Seminary won for him much honor, and shows the energy of the man, a living monument of his prudence and skill. Death and preparation for it had all been anticipated. He arranged his temporal affairs and gave directions for his burial. There was no fear, but a triumphant victory. He was prepared for the last battle, and ready for the last victory through Christ. As a soldier, fighting in defense of his country and for the freedom of his fellow-man, he was brave, true and heroic. His company, appreciating his kindness and Christian life presented him with a sword, as a token of respect. As a minister, he was true to his calling, sacrificing for the good of others, laboring incessantly and successfully. As an instructor of youth, loving, kind and successful. As a citizen, honest and upright. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss. The funeral was conducted by Rev. O. O. Knight and L. A. Rudisill, and his remains deposited at Mount Pisgah.

Happy they who not only talk of the truth, but walk in the truth. 3 John 3.

Preach the best to the smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and got all Samaria out to hear him next time.

Either trouble are happiness borrowed from the future is apt to prove fallacious.

That Meteor.

PROF. H. C. DEMOTTE.

Many of our readers have a vivid mental picture of the grand meteor which passed over this section of the country (Bloomington, Ill.,) on the evening of December 21. What was it? Where did it come from? Where did it go? and similar questions were common on the street next morning. Indeed, the usual salutations were forgotten by many, and, "Did you see the meteor?" substituted instead. We were not among the favored who actually saw the head-light of this wild train, and heard the rumbling of its wheels along its invisible track; but, from what others have said and written, we gather some items in regard to this strange visitor.

From observations recorded, the course of the meteor may be approximately described as follows: Appearing southwest by west of Lawrence, Kansas, it passed to Miama county, on the eastern border of that State; thence across Missouri, from Cass county to Marion county; across Illinois, from Adams county to Iroquois county; across Indiana, from Newton county to Allen county; across Ohio to the south-eastern point of Lake Erie, and thence over the north-western corner of Pennsylvania into the State of New York. Its path was traced more than one thousand miles. Its estimated height, when first seen, was about seventy-five miles, and while passing over Ohio about forty miles. Its probable size was estimated by various persons to be between twenty and thirty yards in diameter.

Most meteors are known by the familiar name, "shooting stars" They appear very suddenly in the heavens; and passing rapidly, apparently among the stars, they disappear as suddenly. A few, however, pass over portions of the earth and explode. These explosive meteors are called bolides. In 1860, a bolis passed over the country between Pittsburgh and New Orleans. Soon after it vanished an explosion was heard like the noise of many cannons. It traversed a distance of two hundred and forty miles in eight seconds. Such a velocity shows that the moving body can not start from any place near the earth; that rate could not be acquired, even if the body had fallen from the moon. Occasionally, mineral substances have fallen from the sky. These masses, while passing through the earth's atmosphere, become intensely heated, and shine with a briliant light. Such meteors are called "areolites,"—"stones of the air." The explosion of a bolis is sometimes followed by the fall of areolites, that bury themselves deeply in the earth. The falling of areolites is as well authenticated as any fact in history. One was found on the plain of Otumpa, near Buenos Ayres, that was seven and one-half feet long, and weighed thirty-three thousand pounds.

A remarkable shower of stones fell at L'Aigle, in Normandy, April 26, 1803. "At one o'clock in the afternoon, in an almost cloudless sky, a tremendous noise, like that of distant thunder, was heard, and an immense fire-ball was seen movrapidly through the air. This was followed by a violent explosion which lasted several minutes, and was heard a distance of seventy miles. Immediately after this, hundreds of stones fell among the trees and on the roofs and pavements. They were hot enough to burn the hand when touched; the largest of them weighed seventeen and one-half pounds."

"On the 4th of December, 1807, a large meteor exploded over Western Connecticut. It appeared at early dawn, and seemed to be half the diameter of the full moon, and passed like a globe of fire across the northern margin of the sky. It passed behind some clouds, and when it came out it flashed like heat-lightning. It had a train of light, and appeared like a burning fire-brand carried against the wind. It continued in sight about half a minute, and, in about an equal space after it faded, three loud and distinct reports like those of a four-pounder near at hand, were heard. Then followed a quick succession of smaller reports, seeming like what soldiers call a running fire. The appearance of the meteor was as if it took three successive leaps; and, at each explosion, a rush of stones were heard through the air, some of which struck the ground with a heavy fall. The heaviest stone of this fall plungod into the ground to the depth of two feet, and weighed thirty-five pounds.

A more remarkable shower of stones fell in Ohio, May 1st, 1860. "The meteor when first seen was about forty miles high, and its path was nearly parallel to the earth's surface. There was first heard a loud detonation which compared to the report of a cannon fired at a distance of half a mile; after an interval of ten seconds, another similar report was heard; after two or three seconds another, and so on with diminishing intervals. Twenty-three distinct explosions were heard, after which the sounds became blended, and were compared by some to the rattling fire of an awkard squad of soldiers, and by others to the roar of a railway train. The result of this cannonading was the falling of a large number of areolites upon an area of about ten miles long by three wide. They penetrated the earth from two to three feet, and the largest weighed one hundred and three pounds.

These are only a few of the many meteoric showers which have been recorded. The average fall, for the entire surface of the earth, has been estimated at twelve a day, or over 4,000 a year. In addition to those that reach the earth, an immense number are consumed in the passage through the air. Hence we may conclude that meteors are as the sands upon the ocean shore, in number.

They all contain meteoric iron, varying from two per cent. to ninety-six per cent. The iron is malleable. Nickel, phosphorus, silica, lime and other elements, to the number of twenty-two are also found; but no new elements have been discovered in them. The meteoric iron shows a chrystalline structure, unlike common iron, but similar to iron of volcanic origin.

These various kinds of meteors probably result from the difference in the composition of the bodies. Those which are composed of easily volatilized or inflammable material, upon entering the earth's atmosphere, become ignited by friction, and are consumed before reaching the surface of the earth. Evidences of this fact are found in the occasional showers of black or red dust. In a few instances, a substance of an ashy consistency mixed with scoria, not unlike that obtained from smelting iron, has been found after the appearance of a meteor.

If the composition of a meteor should be earthy, the heating occasioned by friction in the earth's atmosphere would produce a series of explosions of the outer crust, and these fragments would pass, like fire balls, from the main body to the earth. Possibly in some of these bodies a sufficient amount of gas is generated and stored in their cavernous interior to cause an explosion that shatters the body to atoms, or at least into small fragments, such as are frequently found after a meteoric shower.

Comets and meteors are supposed to have a common origin. The theory of both comets and meteors is briefly summed up as follows, by Professor Newcomb. "The planetary spaces are crowded with immense numbers of bodies, which are too minute to be seen with the most powerful telescopes.

"If one of these bodies is so large and firm that it passes through the atmosphere and reaches the earth without being dissipated, we have an aerolite.

"If the body is so small or so fusible as to be dissipated in the upper region of the atmosphere, we have a shooting star.

"A crowd of such bodies, sufficiently dense to be seen in the sunlight, constitutes a comet.

"A group less dense will be entirely invisible unless the earth happens to pass through it, when we shall have a meteoric shower.

Unpaid Methodist Preachers.

The Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church South, appointed at its last session a committee to consider the cause and suggest the remedy for the large deficiencies in the estimated salaries of the preachers. The committee says:

By careful estimates it is found that the average salary paid the presiding elders was about $741.26, or 70 per cent. of the assessment; the highest salary being paid by the Jackson district ($1,239.75,) and the lowest by the Seashare district ($341). In the several districts the average salaries paid the preachers in charge were as follows: Vicksburg, $746; Jackson, $639.35; Brookhaven, $490.72; Meridian, $453.27; Woodville, $351.71; Brandon, $317.16; Seashore, $279.25, and Summit, $218.16; making the average salary only $461.95, and the average per centum about 70 of what was promised. Of the 14 stations, 8 paid in full, the salaries averaging $1,033.75; and the 6 in default paid salaries averaging $719.63, over 75 per cent. of the assessments. Of the 82 circuits and missions only 8 made good the word they had pledged their preachers! The remainder were in default from 20 to 80 per centum! How have the preachers lived? Surely the days of miracles have not passed, and the angel of the Lord yet provides for those whom he hath called to preach his word.

The cause, we think, is threefold: 1. Unconverted or irreligious church members; 2. Inefficient stewards; and 3. Inefficient preachers or pastors; for we are not of the opinion that the whole blame rests on the laity, and we are not disposed to find fault arbitrarily.

The American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, Astor Place, on Thursday, January 4th, at half-past three o'clock, P. M., Norman White, Esq., Vice President, in the chair.

The decease of Washington R. Vermilye, Esq., lately a member of the Board, and of Rev. Simeon H. Calhoun, formerly Agent of this Society in the Levant, was announced; after which the Rev. M. S. Hutton, D. D., read the ninetieth Psalm and offered prayer.

The Granville Welsh Bible Society, in Washington County, N. Y., was recognized as an auxiliary.

Specimens of new versions of portions of the Bible in Japanese, Azerbijan, and Pima were presented for the Library.

Correspondence was laid before the Board from its Agents; Dr. Bliss, at Constantinople, Dec. 1st, Dr. Gulick at Kobe, Dec. 5th, on his way to China, and Mr. Milne, who was on his way from Santos to Monte Video, in November. Letters were also reported from the South American Missionary Society, of London; from the Rev. Mr. Wright and Dr. Bliss, communicating criticisms of Osmanli scholars on Dr. Schauffler's version of Isaiah; from Dr. Wm. Tracy of Madura, Dr. E. H. Thompson of Shanghai, Messrs. Thomas L. Gulick, C. P. Cifre, and George Lawrence of Spain; Rev. James B. Will of Florence; from Rev. J. F. Pogue of the Hawaiian Board, with thanks for a grant of Bibles; from Mr. P. R. Hunt of Peking, with details of expenditure for Bible publication at the press of the American Board; from Rev. E. Lane of Campinas, urging the Board to undertake a revision of the Portuguese version; from Rev. H. B. Pratt of Bucaramauga, with specimens of his new version of the Psalms in Spanish; from Rev. D. C. Green of Yokohama, reporting his labors as a translator during the year, and from Dr. S. R. Brown of Yokohama, chairman of the committee of translators in Japan.

Upon application from various auxiliary societies, missionary societies, and individuals, grants for foreign work to the amount of $172 and copies of Scriptures amounting to about 4,500, for distribution and sale, were granted by the Board.

A tribute to the memory of Mr. Vermilye was adopted by the Board and put upon its minutes.

The receipts for December were $41,270 12; number of copies issued, 53,638.

The Place to Make Men.

In glancing over the list of successful business men, the larger portion of them will be found to have received their early training for life-work on the farm. Our leading professional men generally were trained in the common schools of the country, and there learned habits of industry and frugality, which is the groundwork of their success.

Country boys—farmers' sons that labor on the farm during the summer months, go to school five days in the week in the winter and work at home on Saturdays, think their lot a hard one, in comparison with that of their city cousins. But did they know it these lessons of labor give them an appreciation of education that city boys never possess. The country boy delights in going to school, whilst the city chap hates the monotony of the school-room, and this accounts for the fact that a large majority of the successful men in the various walks of life spent their early boyhood on the farm.

Boys just verging into manhood in the city feel that they have more requirements than those in the country and therefore spend more, and acquire habits of improvidence diametrically opposed to success. When once bred in the bone, it requires but a few generations to spoil the stock, and new importations have to be made from the country before business or professional life can regain its strength. Business men in the city forget to what they owe their success, and in their desire to give their sons the best of advantages do that which enervates instead of strengthens. The boy may be stuffed with such advantages, but it takes self-denial and a sprinkling of hardships to make the man.

Let not the sons of farmers, therefore, deplore their lot or look with wistful eyes on the imaginary advantages of their city cousins whilst their own chances of success are many per cent higher than those of city boys. Nor is it necessary to success that farmers' sons should follow the vocation of their fathers. If they have talent for trade or professional life, let them embrace that which suits their inclination, and never feel that because they work hard and exercise self-denial to-day they are never to rise above the level of clodhoppers. Such trials are in truth but advantages of a more brilliant order, and will make sterling men of those who make the most of them.—Baltimore Sun.

Prayer is Answered.

The question of answering prayer is settled definitely by revelation and experience; but neither revelation nor experience lead to any different conclusion than do the teachings of reason. Accepted, man's helplessness, and God's omnipotence; man's power to ask and receive favors, and God's intelligence and love, and prayer is reasonable. "We have not an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities."

The christian prays to God because he knows him to be an all-wise and all-loving divine Parent, who governs His universe by laws made in the interest of all. This supremacy of law troubles the skeptic, who cannot understand how, if laws reign everywhere, prayer can be answered. But to the christian, law is but an instrument in the hands of him who frames it, and therefore, has power to use it for the purposes of his will. Law originates nothing only as it is used by some power back of, and controlling it. Our earth for example is acted upon by different forces, each represented by some natural law; there is one which tends to cast it away from the sun, another to dash it against the sun; one which tends to throw its particles apart, another which holds them together; one which retards its motion, and still another which would increase its flight through space. But above all these forces there is a power that combines them to keep the earth in its orbit. Not a single law is destroyed, but the force of each is intensified or neutralized according to the will of Him, who weighs the world in a balance.

Man's success in every day life, depends upon the fact, that he can use the laws of nature as he wills. The machinist armed with nature's laws, fills the world with mechanisms of his genius. The electrician with a few drops of acid and some zinc, annihilates space. In short, all the achievements of man, are but the results of his power, to manipulate the laws of nature.

Now Man in his sphere is but a type of God in his sphere; and if man can use the laws of nature to carry out his purposes, how much more certainly can God use the laws which He has created, in carrying out His purposes of grace and providence! The full force of this argument is seen when we remember that man's knowledge of nature's laws is limited, and his power to use them feeble, while the knowledge of God is perfect, and his power infinite.

Revivals.

News from every part of the Church indicates that the Lord is pouring out his Spirit upon the people. As usual during the revival seasons the enemies of the Church are criticising revival work. The following from the New York Christian Advocate is timely.

Methodism is a revival. It is new life breathed into the body of Christianity. It has grown by the simple manifestations of its vitality. It inheres in all life to manifest itself. The protruding of the fungus on the decaying log, the uprising of the forest, the unfolding of the violet, the song of the bird, the chirping of the human nestling, and the loud halleluia of saint and seraph, are simple products and manifestations of life. Joy rushes out in the highway, and bestows itself on every passer. To create is a part of our voluntary power. Purposes are its products. Now, Methodism came into the world with new life, new joy, and new power. She must needs grow and sing and conquer. When she stagnates, or whines, or surrenders, she ceases to be Methodism, and becomes a paralytic in the world's hospital for the experiments of the doctors, or a corpse in the way to be dissolved by the sun. What the soul is to your boy the revival spirit is to Methodism. You do not want his clothes, nor yet his body merely. You want the boy—soul, body, and clothes. So we are not to be content with [illegible] forms of government with Church body—[illegible] we must have Methodism, the very revival spirit, [illegible] government. But the [illegible] of these three is the revival [illegible]

[illegible] is our vineyard in fruit. [illegible] We do not want unsactified genius, nor sactified stupidity, but we want ability so mixed with grace that it becomes availability, and can stand the tests of results, fruit. Fruit is not limited to conversions, but it implies this and the treatment and training of souls after conversion. It embraces the success and upbuilding of the Church. But the most distinguishing sign of usefulness and ability in the Church is the conversion of sinners, the work ordinarily summed up in what we understand by a revival.

This work is most earnestly desired by every faithful and godly Methodist preacher. Whenever, in the hard struggle against the powers of darkness, a minister becomes discouraged, and feels that his lot is a hard one, heavy lifting and light feeding, hard work and poor pay, much sacrifice and little appreciation, then, if the showers of grace fall upon his work, and his word is the power of God, he takes courage and is content. He forgets his hardships and sacrifices. He accepts the saved souls and seals to his commission, and patiently waits for the great day when the crowns shall be distributed.

We all feel the logic of the zealous brother known in these parts, who preached on "He was an oyster man," and, explaining the care used in taking up oysters, he showed the divine mercy, and invited sinners forward. They came. During a season of prayer a brother said, "You mistook that text. It is not oyster, but 'austere.'" "Never mind; see there," and he pointed at a dozen seekers kneeling at the altar. This is no excuse for wilful ignorance, but it is a lesson to unsuccessful scholars in our vineyard. A brother came from his circuit once after a year of great success, and on his conference examination was asked. "What is conversion?" He replied, "I do not know as I can exactly tell, but if you will ask any of the six hundred probationers on my circuit, they can tell you." He passed. A chopper is graded not by the polish of his ax, but by the amount of wood he can cut. We do not call a man a fisherman because he has a patent pole, but because he has caught a basketful of fish. Saving sinners is the test of our ministers. Methodism may have schools, and paper, and books, and splendid churches, and eloquent preachers, and high social standing, and much wealth, and great public power, but unless she has conversions and revivals she misses the main chance.

The Men to Save Africa.

MR. EDITOR:—Do you know that it has often been suggested to my own mind that a good deal of the talk about "Africa's redeeming Africa" grows out of the prejudice and timidity of Anglo-Saxons? They think Africa has no permanent mission to this country, and they think they can get the Africo-Americans off on an African hunt, where white men are afraid to go. I cannot see that the colored American Christian has any Divine call to Africa above that of his white brother. Race distinctions are to be broken down; one race must evangelize the other. While it is the order of Providence to have representatives of a people made useful to that people, it is equally His order to send the stranger with the message of salvation. When Melville Cox cried out, "Though a thousand fall, let not Africa be given up," he did not mean a thousand black men. He meant any, body. No one was too good for such an altar, for such a sacrifice. Teach the young colored men of Nashville, Atlanta and New Orleans not merely to go to Africa, but to "go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every people." That is their business as much as mine. A few Anglo-Saxons have got the notion that this nation, its territory and resources are given by God to them, and whoever else settles here comes and stays by their sufferance. One of these, a Californian, who was speaking against the Chinamen being allowed to come to this country, while I urged their right to do so, at length asked me, with great boldness, and evidently thinking of but one possible answer, "Whose country is this, I should like to know?" "God's country, sir," said I. My reply confused him. It seemed an idea at once new and dangerous to him.

Save Africa! say I. Save Asia, too, and all the world! Save the colored men of the South, as men, as brethren, and then encourage them to do what other brethren are encouraged to do, to wage a good warfare for Christ, wherever they see a good field for battle. R.

Attempted Assassination of Gov. Packard.

On last Thursday, at 11:30 a. m., a man entered the office of Gov. Packard and deliberately attempted to shoot him. The Governor sat conversing with Hon. A. Bowman, and the would-be assassin took a seat on his left, and laid his hat on the table. After a moment he spoke to the Governor and asked when he could see him. The Governor turned to answer him and met a pistol pointed directly at his head. With remarkable promptness and precision he struck down the weapon with his left hand, and with his right dealt the would-be assassin a blow in the face which sent him sprawling over his chair. In an instant, before the pistol could again be presented, the Governor had his assailant completely in his power. As the pistol shot passed downward under the stroke of the Governor, it was discharged, inflicting a slight flesh wound on the Governor's knee. There were several gentlemen in the room, and one of them, Col. Loan, shot the would-be assassin, the ball passing through his arm. He would have been instantly killed had not Gov. Packard told his friends to desist.

The would-be assassin gives his name as W. H. Weldon, and says he came from Philadelphia, and that the act was prompted wholly by patriotic feelings, and is only sorry that he did not succeed in killing his man. He says there were four with him, but they were too cowardly to come in. The whole matter is being thoroughly investigated, and we shall soon hear the truth as to who he is and who were his confederates.

THE Church Missionary Intelligencer, of England, gives some very interesting information respecting the missionary expedition to Central Africa. The committee having the expedition in charge are now at work on two preliminaries in the arrangements of this great undertaking—the selection of the route into the interior, and the appointment of men to be the pioneers of the mission: From the best information obtained the East Coast route will be taken, following the comparatively beaten track of Barton, Speke, Grant, Cameron and Stanley, with slight variations. This will also be the route of the party sent to Lake Tanganyika by the London Missionary Society, which, like the Church Missionary Society, has received an anonymous donation of £5,000 for this purpose. The two expeditions will doubtless greatly help each other.

Zion's Herald says: "The Tremont street M. E. Church, Boston, gave a delightful reception to Bishop Foster last week. It was purely social, affording our resident superintendent an opportunity to form a personal acquaintance with some of our Methodist families. The affair was admirably managed. A large company of ministers and laymen from the neighboring Churches were present by invitation, and the whole affair was grateful to all the happy company. The speaking, happily, was very limited, and only introductory and responsive. We trust the Bishop will long be able to enjoy the personal friendships which are now being rapidly formed among us."

THE Foreign Missionary gives the following items respecting the missionary work in Italy: The Waldenses, exclusive of the Churches of the valleys, have fifty stations, forty-four pastors and evangelists, 2,140 members, fifty-nine day schools, with an attendance of 2,000 children. The Free Church of Italy has thirty-seven congregations and twenty-one evangelists, 1,800 members. The English Methodists have, under the care of two missionaries, 1,150 members, at thirty-one stations. The American Methodist Episcopal Church has eleven stations and 450 members. The American Baptists have twelve stations. All of the Missions are prospering.

VERY BEST PIANOS.—Chickering & Son, Boston and New York, are manufacturing three styles of new scale upright pianos, which they are shipping to Mr. Philip Werlein for his Southern trade. These pianos are regarded as absolutely perfect and the model piano of the world. The Chickerings during the past fifty years have made about 50,000 pianos, and it is no unusual thing to see a Chickerings 25 years in use, and in good playing order. What other piano has such a record for durability?

A MAN named M. M. Wishard, from Knightstown, Indiana, committed suicide at the St. James Hotel, this city, on Wednesday of last week. In his pocket was found a written explanation of the cause. For ten years past he had been addicted to the use of opium. His case presents a sad warning to all addicted to the use of the drug. He tells of his vain and futile endeavors to free himself from the terrible habit, until, in despair, he determined on his own destruction.

THE St. Louis Christian Advocate (Southern Methodist) devotes its first page to "news of the week," and on the whole it is a very readible summary. It is interesting to note in how partisan a manner the political points are worked up. The two columns given to the discussion of the decision of the Florida case would make an excellent Democratic campaign tract.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. W. C. Graves, Presiding Elder of the Ashville District, Tennessee, reports 81 conversions and 31 additions to the Church since Conference at four of his appointments.

Rev. W. R. Maddox, Shuqualak, Miss., writes that he has entered upon his work with encouraging prospects; that he finds good congregations and well attended Sabbath-schools. He sends names of some subscribers and promises others.

Rev. M. Dale, Union Chapel of this city reports ten recent accessions. His congregations are large, and the benevolent collections as well as those for church expenses very satisfactory. The conference year has opened with very encouraging prospects.

Rev. Geo. O. Richardson, President Andrews Normal College, Dallas, Texas, writes: "I am glad you count me as a worker for your paper. We expect soon to make a thorough canvass, and expect to send you a good list of suscribers. The matter has been delayed by the illness of Bro. Webster, Pastor of St. Paul's Church.

Bro. Edward H. Hardeman, a member of the Church at Luling, Texas, in renewing his subscription writes the SOUTHWESTERN words of encouragement and adds: "For the past two years our Church at this place has not been very prosperous. We ask christians elsewhere to pray for us that the Holy Spirit may be poured out upon us, and that this may be a year of great prosperity in the Church at Luling."

Wesley Chapel, New Orleans, held a Union meeting on last Sabbath. The following brethren preached during the day; Revs. E. Williams, C. Hunt, M. Dale and Stephen Priestly. The amount of money raised during the day was $64.15. The pastor Rev. J. M. Vance is making an excellent beginning in his pastorate. An effort is being made to raise money enough to thoroughly refit the church, including new floor, seats, ventilators, and painting.

Rev. John Walker, West Point, Miss., says: "I came to my work this year determined to do more than in any year in the past for Christ and His Church. I thank the Lord for the indications of His blessing upon us. Since Conference I have received ten persons into the Church. My list of subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN now numbers twenty-five, and I expect to make it number over fifty in the next two months."

Rev. James Henderson, Columbus, Texas, in making a remittance adds: "Our revival is still in progress. There have been fifteen conversions and twenty accessions, and numbers bow at the altar for prayers at every meeting. I am glad to see the work of grace taking hold of the young men of our church. I am pushing forward the interests of the SOUTHWESTERN as fast as I can. My people like the paper and would all take it if they were able. But they are poor, and it is very hard now to find work for which they can get pay in money. But we will do all we can."

Vermont's new liquor law hit the nail on the head, providing that every place where liquor is sold as a beverage shall be declared a "common nuisance," and the keeper shall be fined $200 or less, besides being forbidden to re-occupy the premises until he gives bond not to offend again. We do not know how common in the Green Mountain State the "nuisance" referred to is, but wherever the grog-shop exists, it is, in the strictest meaning of the term, a "nuisance," and the State has a clear right summarily to abate it.

Methodism in Texas.

BY N. S. THRALL.

The conferences of the M. E. Church, and of the M. E. Church South, in Texas, or over, and the results of the year's labors have been ascertained and reported. The year has not been remarkably successful, and in two or three conferences a small decrease of membership has occurred. Our camp-meetings and most successful protracted meetings are usually held in the fall. Perhaps the excitement incident to a Presidential election militated against these meetings. The six conferences of the Church, South, in Texas, report an aggregate increase of 2,517. In the three conferences of the M. E. Church, including probationers, there is an increase of 188.

The conferences of the M. E. Church were held successively in Huntsville, in San Antonio, and in Austin. In each of these places Bishop Peck was kindly treated by the ministers and members of the Southern Church. He and other members of the conference filled the pulpits of our churches with great acceptability. Hereafter there will be four conferences of the M. E. Church in our State. The Austin Conference will include all the white American members and ministers.

The first Methodist Class organized in Texas was by Henry Stephenson, in 1833. In 1837 three missionaries were sent to the republic, Martin Ruter, D. D., who died in 1838; Littleton Fowler, who died 1846; and Robert Alexander, now presiding elder on the Chappell Hill District. Dr. Alexander assisted Bishop Peck in the ordination of elders at Huntsville.

In 1838 a Mission District was formed, with seven preachers and 450 members. In 1839 two districts were formed; and 800 members reported. The first Annual Conference was formed in 1840, with three districts and 1,800 members, and a second conference was formed in 1844. M. E. Church, South, was formed in 1845-6. The following table gives the ratio of white church members to white population.

Years.	Population.	Members.	Ratio
1847	101,508	6,580	1 in 16
1850	154,086	10,489	1 in 15
1860	481,891	30,661	1 in 15
1870	567,700	34,782	1 in 15
1875	est 900,000	60,025	1 in 15

Missions among colored people, with ratio population.

Years.	Population.	Members.	Ratio.
1847	35,287	1,416	1 in 23
1850	56,161	1,847	1 in 30
1860	182,566	6,000	1 in 30
1875	est 300,000	30,000	1 in 10

The progress of the church among the colored people since emancipation, has been truly encouraging. At the period of emancipation about one in thirty of the freedmen were members of the M. E. Church, South, in all about 6,000. Approximately there are now in the M. E. Church, 18,000; Colored M. E. Church, 8,000; African M. E. Church and Zion M. E. Church, 10,000, making a total of 36,000 members, or about one in eight of the population.

In 1846 the M. E. Church, South, commenced work among the Germans. Our church now has a conference, with fifteen itinerant and ten local preachers, and 750 members. The Southern German Conference M. E. Church reports 1,000 members. The Church, South, has a Sweed's Mission in Austin of 100 members. For the Spanish speaking population, the Church, South, has a presiding elder's district, with ten preachers and about 200 members.

Approximately, the following figures represent the total membership of the different branches of Methodism in Texas; M. E. Church, South, 62,542; M. E. Church, 19,486; Colored Churches, 18,000; Protestant Methodist Church, 2,500; total number of communicants, 102,528. Other Churches in Texas: the Roman Catholics have 90 priests, and a membership estimated at 200,000; the Baptist have 604 ordained ministers, and 54,000 members; Protestant Episcopalians have 24 clergymen, and about 4,000 communicants; the Old School Presbytorians have 68 ministers, and 4,208 members. No statistics are at hand of the Old School Baptists, the Christians (Campbelites), or the Lutheran Church.—Methodist.

Ex-President Lerdo on Mexican Affairs.

Ex-President Lerdo of Mexico has the following to say of Mexico:

Business is dead and the people are being plundered by the respective leaders. Every revolutionist borrows money to conduct operations and plunders to repay. Under his peaceful term the revenues of the country amounted to over $18,000,000, and if economically and honestly governed, Mexico could uphold its credit at home and abroad. He says Diaz has full power now in Mexico, there being no organized army to oppose him. He is of the opinion, however, that Diaz's reign will be short. The Church party, which is daily growing in power, is opposed to him. Cortina is now on the Texas frontier and opposes him, and there is a strong element against him throughout the country that only needs opportunity to develop. In answer to a question whether he intends to remain long in this country, Tejada said he had no definite plan. He declined to say anything in regard to any movements contemplated to obtain recognition of his government again. He does not anticipate any trouble between the United States and his country in regard to the debt of $300,000 owing to the American government. In fact the first act of Diaz was to borrow $200,000 to make the payment. No matter who is in power, the Cabinet will make provision to pay that debt.

News From Africa.

Rev. T. J. Gracey, in the Northern Advocate, writes under date, Monrovia, Africa, Dec. 22, 1876:

Bishop Haven and party arrived here on Saturday evening last. Bishop H. preached Sunday morning to a large audience, and I preached in the afternoon. We are being entertained by ex-President Roberts. Conference opened on Monday morning, and the sessions have been of unusual interest. Each day from twelve to one or two o'clock, anniversary meetings, or what answers to them, have been held. The speaking has been of a very instructive sort, and the community has shown great interest in the discussions and addresses. All Liberia is here, because the Methodist conference is; the senate and legislature are in session; the biggest will-case ever known in the republic is being tried in the courts here; the Presbyterian synod is in session near by, and some native chiefs are here because of an outbreak down at Bassa. Our plans begin to take shape. I have just now boarded a British steamer to settle and confirm the evidence hitherto accumulated, all which tended to prove that we could not make connection from St. Paul or Loanda to Cape Colony, not even by way of St. Helena. We shall thoroughly do the coast of this republic. Then we may go by steamer down the coast to view other regions, but it is not certain. We may take the steamer by Jan. 17, or thereabouts for Maderia. Our party are all well, and, excepting sickness, in which I have never yet indulged, we have had no ailments worth naming. We shall have our Christmas dinner in the Monrovia Methodist Episcopal Seminary building. I shall pick coffee off the trees of those premises, and send some berries home for friends. That seminary is the best preserved building in Monrovia.

Our Brethren in South Carolina.

The South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in its report on the state of the country, says:

The recent political excitements and persecutions in our State have had a very unfortunate influence in checking revival interests, distracting and absorbing the minds of the people, and so unsettling them by conflicting statements and expulsion from their homes, as punishment for the exercise of their honest political sentiments, that many of our societies have been nearly broken up and ruined. In some instances our members have been murdered on the account of their political sentiments and influence.

Others have been constrained by fear to leave their homes, to seek elsewhere a place of safety. A large number have been deprived of property, for which they had made partial payments, by the forclosure of mortgages and liens, on which they had been promised long-extended opportunities for payments, provided they would vote in accordance with the political views of those holding said claims. Multitudes have been refused homes and the use of rented lands unless they would tamely submit to be the tools of political land-holders, and barter away thier dearest rights for a mess of pottage. Since the election, the only condition on which many are allowed to retain their former homes is to confess regret for their honest political preferences and acts, and promise by solemn oaths never again to vote against the political party represented and approved by these owners of the soil.

Such has been the terror excited by threats and persecution that it has been impossible in some sections to gather the people for night services, the time the laboring classes are obliged to select for most of their social meetings, so needful for their spiritual comfort and prosperity.

One of the brethren not present at the conference, because of sickness in his family, in referring to their troubles in consequence of political proscription, says: "Things are getting worse. At one of our appointments nearly all of the members have gone to Beaufort or Georgia. All who do not acknowledge that they are sorry for voting the Republican ticket are given ten days to leave the country. I have been informed that seven hundred of the colored people have left this section. Cannot some arrangements be made for the poor people? They are talking daily about going to Africa." This persecution has extended more or less through every portion of our State.

Burning of Straight University.

Straight University, corner of Esplanades and Derbigney streets, New Orleans, was burned to the ground last Friday afternoon. The building was owned by the American Missionary Association, and, with furniture, was insured for $20,000. We understand that many think it was set on fire.

The book has also a permanent value as collecting in form convenient for reference the history of many well known hymns. It serves also as a memorial of the work accomplished by Bliss, the lamented and gifted song evangelist, and places in shape to be preserved an account of his tragical death. It is illustrated with excellent portraits of both Bliss and Sankey, accompanied by autographs.

Prayer.

Among the forms of insect life there is a little creature known to naturalists which can gather around itself a sufficiency of atmospheric air, and so clothed it descends into the bottom of the pool; and you may see the little diver moving about dry, and at his ease, protected by his crystal vesture, though the water all around be stagnant and bitter. Prayer is such a protector; a transparent vesture—the world sees it not; a real defence, it keeps out the world. By means of it the believer can gather so much of heavenly atmosphere around him, and with it descend into the putrid depths of this contaminating world, that for a season no evil will touch him, and he knows when to ascend for a new supply. (Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

Our lesson opens on an exhibition of childish petulance that in the history of kings is hard to mate. Ahab has prospered beyond the usual fortune of monarchs. He has enlarged his boundaries and brought to his feet his most powerful enemy as a suppliant for his favor. He has built cities, and strengthened himself on every side. He lives in an ivory palace, which must have cost an immense sum of money, and is surrounded by luxury. But in spite of all this profusion he is unhappy. No abundance, however great, of this world's goods can satisfy the soul. Those who give their strength to the accumulation of riches are never ready to say, No I have got all I want. That which made the king's heart so heavy that he would not eat, nor talk, even, was that he could not have a small patch of ground belonging to his neighbor. He made no complaint that he had no ground for a vegetable garden. But this lay so contiguous—was necessary, perhaps, to give his own land just the right shape—and it looked so fair, and so exactly adapted to the purpose! Almost every one, in his own personal experience, has known how the art of coveting will [illegible] all the good qualities of the thing desired, a . . hide all its defects.

How much a wife can do to make or mar a man! Ahab, naturally, was not a very bad man—only a very weak one. Jezebel was the real ruler. Had she, with her strong nature, been a servant of the Lord as she was of the devil, she would have ruled him as potently for good as she did for evil. But all mating with unbelievers is dangerous, whether for man or woman. It is the Christian in the unequal bondage that has to make concessions and that is tempted—not the unbeliever. Hence the injunction: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

Ahab was easily overcome. He had himself no intentions of wronging Naboth until his unscrupulous and strong-willed spouse suggested it to him. Indeed that which made it particularly hard for him to bear Naboth's refusal was the thought that he had made him such fair, and even generous, offers. The sovereign had actually besought, where he might have commanded! He felt injured to think that his forbearance and generosity had met with such a poor return. He was in a poor frame of mind to resist temptation—and the devil seeks men just when they are least able to resist him.

Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? Those were stinging words to a king who had been [illegible] by a subject—who was pining like a sick boy for a thing which he might easily take. Exasperated already with Naboth's firmness, this taunt was peculiarly calculated to arouse his wounded pride and make him the easy prey of the tempter. He actually felt ashamed, in the presence of his wife, of the only laudable feeling that then possessed him—a regard for the rights of Naboth.

Unlimited power is a terrible thing in the hands of an unscrupulous person—and none ever was more unscrupulous than Jezebel. She wrote letters in Ahab's name and sealed them with his seal, thus giving to her acts full royal authority, and making him responsible for them. She knew exactly to whom to write—better, apparently, then Ahab would have done. Had dealt with them before. But more notable are her instructions to the magistrates. Set two men, sons of Belial. "Sons of worthlessness" is the meaning. "Belial" becomes a person only in the New Testament. There, of course, it stands for Satan. Didst blaspheme God. There are two things especially notable about this: 1st, That this priestess of Baal was thoroughly informed in all the penalties and customs of the Mosaic law. She knew that blasphemy against the God of Israel was punishable with death by stoning. Lev. 24: 16. 2d, This accusation indicates that the victory on Mount Carmel had not been without its fruits. It points to the probability that Jehovah had taken the place of Baal, or else the charge would have been one of blasphemy against the latter deity.

They proclaimed a fast, thereby informing the people of Jezebel that their city was charged with a terrible crime, and while the people were wondering who the guilty person could be, their questioning was apparently solved by the charge of two false witnesses against Naboth, that they had heard him blaspheme God and the king. He was dragged from his conspicuous position in which he had been artfully placed, and carried forth and stoned, as had been commanded.

Men find that they have given themselves away for trivial things. They sell themselves for a glass of champaign, for the good opinion of others, for a few nights of pleasure, for a lottery ticket, for an office, for a title—for a thousand things not half so valuable as a plat of ground for early vegetables.

Why Advertise.

People sometimes ask why does Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., spend so much money in advertising his family medicines, which are so well known and surpass all other remedies in popularity and sale. It is well known that A. T. Stewart considered it good policy, and undoubtedly it paid him, to spend many hundred thousand dollars in advertising his goods, yet nobody questioned the excellence of his merchandise. The grand secret of success lies in offering only goods which possess merit to sustain themselves, and then through liberal and persistent advertising, making the people thoroughly acquainted with their good qualities. Men do not succeed in amassing great fortunes, establishing thriving and permanent business, and founding substantial institutions like Dr. Preice's Grand Invalids Hotel at Buffalo, which cost over two hundred thousand dollars, unless their business be legitimate, their goods meritorious, and their services which they render the people genuine and valuable. Dr. Pierce does not attempt to humbug you by telling you that his Golden Medical Discovery will cure all diseases. He says, "if your lungs are half wasted by consumption, my remedy will not cure you, yet, as a remedy for severe coughs, and all curable bronchial, throat and lung affections, I believe it to be unsurpassed as a remedy." The people have confidence in his medicines because he does not over-recommend them, and when tried they give satisfaction. His Medical Adviser, a book of over nine hundred pages, illustrated by over two hundred and eighty-two engravings and bound in cloth and gilt, is offered to the people at so moderate a price ($1 50 post-paid) that it is no wonder that almost one hundred thousand have already been sold. His memorandum books are on overy druggist's counter for free distribution.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

SOUTHWESTERN

Christian Advocate,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.,

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.
1877.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCAT published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There, is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2 The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms,

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the SOUTHWESTERN one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year.

mouth a good supply of the tow, which he had prepared and rolled together beforehand, and with which he contrived to make in the pocket the cosiest night's lodging in the world.

Great results followed from this habit of the squirrel's, as you shall hear. A house breaker, watching his opportunity, selected an especially dark night for getting in through the window of the apothecary's little back room behind the shop, with, as you may imagine, no good end in view. He knew that the apothecary kept no dog; he could easily guess where his coat was likely to be hanging up. He soon found the pocket, and was just about to lighten it of purse, pocket-book and keys, when a misfortune totally unexpected befall him. In rumaging for keys and purse he had struck the sleeping squirrel, of whose strange habits with regard to his bedroom he had not been aware. Not liking to be thus suddenly disturbed, the little animal gave the thief so sharp a bite on his thumb that he could not forebear yelling with pain, and the master of the house, alarmed at the unusual sound, came into the room, armed with the poker, just as the thief was escaping through the window. The watchman happening to be passing, the unwelcame guest was given into custody; and as the geese at Rome had saved the capital by their cackling, so the little squirrel had saved his master's property by lodging in his coat pocket.

No creature is too small sooner or later to be of use.—From the German of Agnes Stein.

A Shying Horse.

If a lady's horse be addicted to shying, I will give her a sure and simple cure for the same; one which I have never known to fail.—Let us, for instance, suppose the [illegible] of stones on the near side of the road. The horse sees an indistinct gray object, and prepares to shy at it. The moment he shows such symptoms, let his fair rider turn both her eyes on exactly the opposite [illegible] the road, and look steadi[illegible] from the offending heap [illegible] gage that the horse [illegible] by. For many [illegible] horses of all tem[illegible], some of them [illegible] ying, and have ne[illegible] this simple remedy [illegible] effect. Let those [illegible] try it. The reason is [illegible] the human eye has, doubtless, a great influence on all animals, and there is a strong and secret sympathy between the horse and his rider. The horse sees an indistinct object, and looks doubtfully at it; his rider becomes alarmed, imagining that the animal is going to commit some eccentricity; the fear is communicated to the animal, and he starts in terror from the object which has frightened him; whereas, if he finds that his rider sits unmoved and unconcerned, he regains his confidence, and goes on "in the even tenor of his way." I believe that one-half of our horses are ruined for life by being "hit over the head" by grooms, to cure them of shying.

Speed the Plow.

In no other country or climate is agricultural more agreeable and remunerative. The South escapes the rigorous winters of the more [illegible] and the work on farms and plantations is but little interrupted throughout the year. The same labor will produce in [illegible] three-fold as much as in Ohio or Connecticut. The heat of our summers is advantageous to our staples, while as a hindrance to labor it is far less than the Northern winter. Thousands of young [illegible] seeking employment in the cities, and thousands more are living in idleness, or waiting for occupation which can be done by soft hands. Land is abundant everywhere, and there is a [illegible] for those who are willing to cultivate it. Mr. Greeley's [illegible] ready advice, "Young man, go West," was good, and it is excellent advice now to those who come [illegible] for clerkships, or [illegible] about the country complaining that there are no opening for [illegible] is plowing." [illegible] will average better [illegible] Clerks live on a [illegible] salary, and die poor. [illegible] partnership and [illegible] There are wor[illegible] in every business, [illegible] who can secure a [illegible] support himself [illegible] industry, has [illegible] Those who [illegible] things [illegible] with [illegible] country [illegible] trade and city employment are successful. In the professions there is always room high up, while the lower rungs of the ladder are overweighted with starving mediocrity. There is room enough for all if people will get at the right thing, and put themselves in the right place. The professions are crowded, the marts of commerce are glutted with men seeking positions. The trades are pretty full; but a good trade is worth something to an industrious and capable man. The open place in the Southwest is the field. The plow is the thing to take hold of. There is a demand for cotton, sugar, corn, potatoes and rice, and always will be. There is no crowding here. There is room, abundant room, in a country whose climate and soil are the best in the world. More producers and fewer middle men are the need just now. There are too many ready to receive and sell the staples, and not enough of those who are willing to gather them from the soil. The qualities that insure moderate success in other pursuits will secure greater success in agriculture, and the greater number of those who fail in trade and commerce might, as tillers of the ground, live in independence and comfort.

The objection to farming with many grows out of the disposition to cling to the old-time status of the wealthy planter. No poor man can start in this way, nor, if successful, can he maintain himself by playing the gentleman. He cannot ride about with his gloves on, keep his hounds and hunt, and devote his days to social pleasures. A few men of great wealth and large estates may do this, but poor men who would live and prosper as farmers must put their own hands to the plow. This shabby sort of gentility and repugnance to manual labor are among the greatest obstacles in the way of our rehabilitation. However we may end, we cannot begin by being gentlemen farmers. In agriculture, as in everything else, we must begin at the bottom, and learn the business by doing it.

Young men are ambitious. Perhaps they have received a fair education, and they are impressed with their capacity to win fame and fortune. To bury such talents, and to forego a brilliant career, by condescending to the menial drudgery of the field, would, in their estimation be a wrong to themselves, and little less than a calamity to the world. Where this self-estimate is not a mistake, the subject of it will be apt to reach his true sphere, even if he begins with the plow. He will be called out. But in most cases there is a mistake. The brilliant career and the colossal fortune are more dreams—castles in the air—rose-hued reveries. Happiness, comfort, usefulness and true success are rather in the pursuit that seems to call for the sacrifice of all these anticipations. As to the severity of the toil, farming is easy compared with the labor which brings success in commerce and the professions. Our great lawyers and doctors are men of hard work. Our rich merchants work more hours in the day and night, and have more anxious care, than any other class. They die prematurely of over-work and worry, as a rule. There is no success in any direction without arduous labor, and those who refuse the plow on this account would carry with them the cause of certain failure into any other calling.

The plow has many famous historical associations. Its handles are adorned with some of the choicest garlands of poetry. The work in paradise was horticultural at least, and the plowshare was ordained to restore the smiles of Heaven to a soil cursed by sin. It is the noblest of all pursuits, and the highest excellence in agriculture is connected with the greatest prosperity and with the best types of civilization. Intelligence and education have raised it to the dignity of a science. Chemistry, mechanical inventions, improved transportation, steam, electricity, the printing press, all contribute to the profitable cultivation of the ground. It is the foundation of all business. It touches vitally the welfare of all. "Moreover, the profit of the earth is for all. The king himself is served by the field." The state of the crops is the subject which most engrosses the thought of the world. The plow brings us more closely to God and his providence. It is the instrumental link between the creature's bread, and the divine hand that breaks and multiplies it.

Disease Grows Apace.

Like an ill wind, and cannot be mastered too early. What is a trifling attack of sickness to-day may, if unattended to, become a serious case in a week. Small ailments should be nipped in the bud before they blossom into full blown maladies. If this advice were attended to, many a heavy bill for medical attendance might be avoided. When the liver is disordered, the stomach foul, the bowels obstructed, or the nerves disturbed, resort should at once be had to that supreme remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a few doses of which will restore healthy action and put the system in perfect order. It is a wise precaution to keep this incomparable preventive in the house, since it checks, with unrivalled promptitude, disorders which breed others far more dangerous, and in their developments are themselves often fatal.

DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 18, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

faction of either political party who that will be, the several committees (some of which are Democratic and some Republican) labor under some disadvantage. It has always been customary to signalize the inauguration of a President by a grand ball given in his honor, and at the last inauguration of President Grant, four years ago, a spacious building was erected for that purpose in Judiciary Square. Sunday-school Festivals in North India.

Sunday-school workers in America, will be interested in the following account of Sunday-school festivals in India, which we condense from a communication to the Lucknow (India) Witness, signed "J. H. [illegible] tation on the part of the scholars, and are remembered for weeks and months.

Our first tamasha was at Nawab Gunge, a well-known grain mart on the Gogra, 24 miles from Gonda. We have had but one school here, attended by 40 boys, chiefly the sons of buniyas. These people care but little for education, and are satisfied to have their children taught writing and arithmetic. The bright-eyed boys marched across the sands to a spreading tamarind tree near the road, where we had made arrangements for the occasion. After racing and jumping they were seated on the ground in the shade of the tree and were treated to oranges and sweetmeats. Books were given those who had made proficiency in their studies.

At Colonel Gunge, we have five schools for boys, with 150 pupils, and two for girls, with 41 in attendance; we have as yet but one Christian family. Both boys and girls passed a good examination, which continued three days and showed that the time had been well improved and the teaching of the year remembered. The people here have a great prejudice against our Christian hymns. One man withdrew his three sons from our school merely because they were learning these hymns. However the 150 boys sing and sing with a will. Sweetmeats and sports followed.

We went next to Bilsapur in the jungle, 30 miles from Gonda. Our school here is small; the 20 boys are nearly all Brahmins and sons of cultivators. Pressing work in the fields keeps many of them at home and hinders their progress in their education. One boy has so learned the Ten Commandments that he refuses to worship idols, and we are assured he is but one out of thousands in India, who are thus coming nearer to Christ. Here, too, we gathered the boys under a tree and had them run and jump. As we were at some distance from a bazar we could only give them [illegible] off to their homes.

At Gonda we had a most successful time and were fortunate in being favored with the presence of Bishop Andrews, the Rev. E. Cunningham, Capt. Forbes, Deputy Commissioner, [illegible] and gentlemen of the station. 202 boys from three schools were present and a number of visitors. A [illegible] (merry go round) had been erected in the mission compound, and each boy had a swing [illegible] to begin with. Then all were seated on the bungalow verandah and the exercises began. After singing, prayer, and various recitations, the prizes were distributed. These were of various kinds. In each school one boy was selected on account of good attendance, good lessons, and good disposition to be the banner boy, and carried the banner as the [illegible] marched through the city to the mission house. The banner consisted only of a yard of bright red cloth (with or without inscription) attached to a slender bamboo; the cost was but a trifle but the value set upon it was considerable. In one school two boys were exactly alike in their attendance, standing, deportment, etc., and in the examination both recited the same number of hymns. The result of course was an extra banner. One Hindu boy repeated 300 verses, and took the cash prize for this. Another passed a successful examination (in Urdu) in the [illegible] Lesson for the current quarter, and received a cash prize for this. At the close, the boys joined in singing Malika salamat ho ("God save the Queen"), and in giving three cheers for the Empress of India. We had planned to have the boys swing and play afterwards, but as soon as the sweetmeats had been distributed they rushed off home. One is greatly surprised to see how little Hindustan children, [illegible] care for games or sports. We have tried again and again to have them play, but in vain. It is no easy thing to entertain them in such a manner as to convince one that they enjoy it; while to see them enter upon a game with the vim of English lads is not to be thought of.

Our last and most largely attended celebration was at Bahraich. Here we have seven boys' schools, with [illegible] and two girls' schools, with an attendance of 50, all superintended by a very faithful native preacher. We were busy an entire week in visiting and examining the schools, and were glad to find that the pupils had made good progress during the year, especially in memorizing hymns and Scripture selections. A number recited from thirty to thirty-three hymns. Others [illegible] one boy in a village school repeated 197 verses without stopping. [illegible] The only drawback to our Sunday-school work here is the need of a room large enough to accommodate all our pupils: this we hope soon to have.

The schools assembled at one end of the bazar about nine in the morning and formed in procession. Then with banners and singing they marched through the city to a grove in the suburbs, where we had erected a shamianah. The sight of so many well-dressed and happy-faced boys marching through the streets drew crowds of people who expressed no little surprise at seeing such an army. Arriving at the grove the schools were met by Col. Steel, the Deputy Commissioner, and all repaired (after sports, racing for kites, oranges, etc.) to the shamianah. About 400 in all were present, as many of the parents and friends of the boys were in attendance. After the usual amount of singing and one or two talks, Col. Steel distributed the prizes. A number of delightfully illustrated vernacular books from the enterprising presses at Lucknow and Allahabad were given the boys. Every one who had learned the Ten Commandments and Lord's Prayer was presented with a book; those who had done more received larger books and pictures; while all were supplied with the usual amount (three chattacks) of sweetmeats. At the close the more advanced scholars sang "God save the Queen," and all joined in cheering for her Royal and Imperial Highness. The whole occasion was a success. The boys were delighted, and our visitors were both surprised and pleased at what they saw and heard.

The Key of the East.

(From Scribner's Monthly.)

The events now progressing in Europe give special interest to all that concerns the control of the Mediterranean. That great inland sea has been the theatre of naval prowess since navies were first known. It is one curious result of the changes in the civilized world, that this important body of water is no longer controlled by those countries which constitute its borders, [illegible] commerce and naval supremacy. Spain, whose enterprise opened a new world across the ocean, and whose fleets once made maritime nations tremble, long ago dropped from her nerveless grasp Gibraltar, the key of the western entrance. She is now the weakling of Europe, and would have lost her independence ere this, if her geographical position were a menace to her neighbors. France is indeed a power not to be despised, but her glory has never been enhanced on the water. Italy, just rising into importance after centuries of division and decay, is but a poor representative of ancient Rome. She has, indeed, just completed some of the most formidable iron-clads, which are to be armed with one hundred-ton guns, the largest yet built; but while we admire the enterprise of her statesmen and rejoice in her growing prosperity, we cannot banish the sad historic contrast to her former splendor. For her bank-notes and great guns she must go to America and England, her armaments must be bought at second hand in a foreign market; and to expect that she can reach the full stature of national manhood while thus dependent on her thrifty neighbors is evident miscalculation. Egypt, once first among the gods who rode triumphant on the waves, is now tributary to Turkey, "the sick man of Europe," the power that has been for many years propped by diplomatic pillows; while Turkey herself, having earned the contempt of both friend and foe by insolent oppression, which she is powerless to perpetuate unaided, holds the straits of Bosphorus, just as the hired jailor holds the keys intrusted to his care. She is not a naval power; but she is formidable in her masters, England and Austria, who bid her keep fast hold of the door, and let no Russian pass without permission.

The passion for territorial aggrandizement is not foreign to the American mind. We boast quite enough of our material resources, and the past shows that we are not unwilling to fight for additional square miles of land, even though we cannot hope to develop thoroughly, for many years to come, the territory that belonged to us before the Mexican war. If we had not reached the western ocean, we should probably get up a new war of annexion before long, and our covetous eyes are already turned to Cuba and Canada. It therefore would ill become us to criticise the greed of European nations, even of enormously expanded Russia. But aside from the general lust of dominion, there are special incentives to mutual jealousy between Austria and Russia that may not be overlooked in the study of European politics. So long as Russia cannot send her ships unchallenged through the Bosphorus, she is practically excluded from the ocean. The gulfs of the Baltic Sea are for a portion of the year frozen over, and its entrance can at any time be blockaded by hostile powers. But the Mediterranean once reached by the Russian navy, the great Northern bear could cope with its cotemporaries on equal terms in the wild tug of war. Knowing this, "the five great powers," at the treaty of peace closing the Crimean war, made a condition forbidding Russia to maintain a navy on the Black Sea. That condition, under the the changed relations of international affairs, Russia has already set at naught.

Her next move, manifestly, is to get possession of Constantinople and the Bosphorus, so that no combination of fighting nations can thereafter say to her, Thus far shalt thou come, but no farther.

The strait that unites the Black Sea and the Sea of Marmora is only half a mile wide at its narrowest part, and not more than two miles at its widest. It is thus, unlike the strait of Gibraltar, which is nine miles wide in its narrowest part, capable of being made impassible by the resources of modern gunnery. Once possessed of it, Russia could extend her conquests over the feeble nations that lie upon the Mediterranean, having the ports of the Black Sea in which to develop her navy without molestation, and threatening Austria, which has but a limited and exposed seacoast with only one good harbor—at Trieste. The temptation to snatch this true key of the Mediterranean will thus be seen to be well-nigh overwhelming. Success would raise a nation now only formidable on land to the rank of a first-class naval power. Russia has the boundless resources, the strong government, the industrial skill—tardily developed, but rapidly increasing of late years—which make her hand heavy wherever she can bring it to bear. Set her free from the great natural barriers by which she is now confined, and who can foresee the result?

It is evident that none of the great powers of Europe have wished war to come at this time. England who likes her own way as much as ever, has become less inclined to fight for it since her wealth has accumulated so largely that she is able to profit peaceably by the commerce of every part of the globe. War is destruction, and a war almost anywhere now means the cutting of a portion of England's prosperity. France desires to recover from her misfortunes under the sham Napoleon. Prussia, leading the newly united Germany, is, in spite of the stimulus of recent success, anxious to work out other great problems than those of future expansion. Austria knows that she is weak; that her population is is not homogeneous; that "her strength is to sit still," and fortify herself among the nations by the encouragement of education and the outgrowing of old family quarrels. And Russia herself, if she could choose her time, would doubtless develop more thoroughly the organization of her forces upon modern models before engaging in the inevitable strife.

The causes that conspire with the Russian desire for territory and naval power are well known. Half of the population only in European Turkey are Turks; and the larger part of the other half belong to the Greek Church, of which Russia is the head. The Turkish Government is not more despotic than the Cazar's; but it matters much in all cases whose ox is gored. The Mohammedan is hardly more intolerant of the Christian than the average Oriental Greek Christian is of the Mohammedan. Yet it may well be believed that almost any responsible and intelligent government would sooner yield to the march of progress, which everywhere contemplates religious liberty, than the Sublime Porte.

A Visit to Bethany.

We went on over the hill to Bethany; we had climbed up by the path on which David had fled from Absalom, and we were to return by the road of the triumphal entry. All along the ridge we enjoyed a magnificent panorama; a blue piece of the Dead Sea, the Jordan plain extending far up toward Hermon with the green ribbon of the river winding through it, and the long, even range of Moab hills, blue in the distance. The prospect was almost Swiss in its character, but it is a mass of bare hills, with scarcely a tree, except in the immediate foreground, and so naked and desolate as to make the heart ache; it would be entirely desolate but for the deep blue of the sky, and an atmosphere that bathes all the great sweep of peaks and plains in color. Bethany is a squalid hamlet clinging to the rocky hill-side, with only one redeeming feature about it—the prospect. A few wretched one-story huts of stone and a miserable handful of Moslems now occupy this favorite home and resting-place of our Lord. Close at hand, by the roadside, cut in the rock, and reached by a steep descent of twenty-six steps, is the damp and doubtful tomb of Lazarus, down into which any one may go for half a franc paid to the Moslem guardian. The house of Mary and Martha is exhibited among the big rocks and fragments of walls; upon older foundations loose walls are laid, rudely and recently patched up with cut stones and fragments and pieces of Roman columns. The house of Simon the leper, overlooking the whole, is a heap of ruins. It does not matter, however, that all these dwellings are modern; this is Bethany, and when we get away from its present wretchedness, we remember only that we have seen the very place that Christ loved. We returned along the highway of the entry slowly, pausing to identify the points of that memorable progress, up to the crest where Jerusalem broke upon the sight of the Lord, and whence the procession, coming round the curve of the hill, would have the full view of the city. He who rides that way to-day has a grand prospect. One finds Jerusalem most poetic when seen from Olivet, and Olivet most lovely when seen from the distance of the city walls.—Atlantic Monthly.

Napoleon on the Divinity of Christ.

Canon Liddon, in his Bampton Lectures for 1866, gives the following accounts of Bonaparte's sentiments on this subject, expressed in St. Helena:

"When conversing, as was his habit, about the great men of the ancient world and comparing himself with them, he turned, it is said, to Count De Montholon with the inquiry, 'Can you tell me who Jesus Christ was?' The question was declined, and Napoleon proceeded. 'Well, then I will tell you. Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne and myself have founded great empires; but upon what did these creations of our genius depend. Upon force. Jesus alone founded His empire upon love, and to this very day millions would die for Him. * * * I think I understand something of human nature, and I tell you all these were men, and I am a man; none else is like Him; Jesus Christ was more than a man. I have inspired multitudes with such an enthusiastic devotion that they would have died for me; but to do this it was necessary I should be visibly present, with the electric influence of my looks, of my words, of my voice. When I saw men and spoke to them, I lighted up the flame of self-devotion in their hearts. * * * Christ alone has succeeded in so raising the mind of man toward the Unseen, that he becomes insensible to the barriers of time and space. Across a chasm of eighteen hundred years Jesus Christ makes a demand, which beyond all others it is difficult to satisfy. He asks for that which a philosopher may often seek in vain at the hands of his friends, or a father of his children, or a bride of her spouse, or a man of his brother—He asks for the human heart; He asks to have it entirely to Himself; He demands it unconditionally, and forthwith his demand is granted. Wonderful! In defiance of time and space, the soul of man, with all its powers and faculties, becomes an annexation of the empire of Christ. All who believe on Him experience that remarkable, supernatural love toward Him. This phenomenon is unaccountable; it is altogether beyond the scope of man's creative powers. Time, the great destroyer, is powerless to extinguish the sacred flame; time can neither exhaust its strength nor limit its range. This it is which strikes me most; I have often thought of it. This it is which proves to me convincingly the Divinity of Jesus Christ.'"

You Cannot Pass This Way Again.

Breakfast was not quite ready, and while waiting, Mary took up a paper for a minute, and her eye fell upon these words:

"A good Quaker was wont to say, 'I expect to pass this world but once. If therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or any good that I can do to my fellow beings, let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.'"

Mary read the paragraph twice over, and it made a deep impression on her heart. She took her seat at the table thoughtfully, and she wondered, as she glanced up at the already wearied face of her mother, whether she had not let many golden opportunities slip, never to return. She could not go that way again. But here was a long bright holiday she had proposed to spend in self-amusement. Indeed, she had kept herself awake an hour or more in planning the day's enjoyment, intending to fill it as full as she could.

Now these words, "I shall not pass this way again," haunted her mind, and awakened quite a new train of thought. What if that mother's cheek should grow paler and paler, her cough deeper, and her thin hands be finally folded away forever on her silent heart. The thought was startling and terrible. O what bitterness of regret she would feel that she had lightened her burdens so little! For this day at least, she would do what she could.

"Mother," she said, when breakfast was over, "you have been looking for a spare day to run over to Grafton and see Aunt Mabel, and now is your chance. I mean to take the helm to-day," she continued pleasantly.

"Not to-day, Mary, of all days, when there is so much work to be done."

"Yes, mother, this is just the day. I have nothing else to do but to take your place. You shall see to-night how well I have filled it."

Mary's persuasions prevailed, and the mother spent a long, bright summer day visiting with a beloved invalid sister, to whom her visit was indeed a joyful surprise. It "did good like a medicine" to both mother and sister, while the gain to Mary herself was a hundred-fold greater.

A Judge's Criticism.

Forney's memoirs give the views of a Judge of the Supreme Court, which are worthy of an earnest perusal:

"Ministers do not exercise good sense in addressing the people. They are afraid of repetition. They use language not well understood by the common people. Their illustrations are not taken from the common pursuits of life. They write in too elevated a style, read without repetition, and are not understood by the people. If lawyers were to take such a course they would ruin themselves and their clients. When I was at the bar I used to take it for granted that I should have to repeat over my main positions about as many times as there were persons in the jury-box. I learned that unless I did so,—illustrated and repeated, and turned over and over the main points of the law and the evidence, I should lose my case. One object in addressing a jury is to get their minds settled before they leave the jury-box; not to make a speech in language only partially understood by them; not to let ourselves out in illustrations entirely above their comprehension; not to display our oratory and then let them go. We are set on getting a verdict, and hence we are set upon being understood. We mean to convince them; and if they have doubts as to the law, we make them understand it, and rivet it in their minds. We expect to get a verdict and to get it on the spot, so that when they go to their room it will be found that they have understood us and that they have been convinced by the facts and arguments. If we do not thus take pains to urge home every thought and every word and every point, so as to lodge it in their convictions, we are sure to loose our cause. We must overcome their prejudices; we must overcome their ignorance; we must overcome their interest, even, in our client, if they have any.

"Now, if ministers would do all this, the effects of their preaching would be unspeakably different from what they are. They go into their study and write a sermon, they go into the pulpit and read it, and those that listen to it but poorly understand it. Many words they will not understand unless they go home and consult their dictionaries. Ministers do not seem to address the people expecting to convince them and to get a verdict in favor of Christ upon the spot. They rather appear to aim at making fine literary productions and displaying great eloquence and an ornate use of literature and language."

Honesty of Women.

The Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal writes: "The detection of another thief in the cash-room of the Treasury affords me the opportunity of calling attention to the superiority of women over men in resisting temptations. Since the first greenback was printed the counting and putting up of packages of money have devolved entirely upon girls and matrons. There are a few in office now who have been there from the beginning, and billions of dollars have passed through their hands without the fraction of a dollar sticking. Have they been rewarded? No! Numbers of men like Winslow, the last thief caught, have been appointed by political influences at salaries double these paid women; and these experienced and trusted women, who ought to be well dispensed with, are not only never promoted, but are treated as though they should be thankful that they are permitted to serve the government for $75 a month."

We may pray without limit for spiritual, though not for temporal blessings. Too much wealth we may have, but too much grace and peace we cannot have.—1 Peter i. 2.

To be too religious is impossible, unless we can be too wise, too just, too good and too useful.—Phil. iv. 8.

The Prospect.

The prospect of a final and amicable settlement of the Presidential question is certainly a great cause of thankfulness to the American people. In almost any other nation on earth war would have resulted from such a mixture of political affairs. But peace is the one thing essential just now. The best minds and hearts of the nation in both the great political parties have been averse to war. The republic passed through a great crisis when Abraham Lincoln fell from the bullet of the assassin, and Andrew Johnson became the constitutional President. Aside from the shock to the moral feelings of the nation and a temporary pause to pay a nations honor over the bier of the martyred President, there was no perceptible change in the public affairs. The wheels of government revolved regularly and things went on as if nothing had happened. There has been great political excitement and unrest in our country, for the last three or four months, and abundant opportunity for outbreak and revolutionary upheaval, but good sense has had the upper hand, and war is not among the possibilities. There are always some individuals whose tempers are stronger than their judgment. These are the men who revel in street brawls, duels and the rough side of life generally. But these hot-heads do not govern the nation, thank God! Their judgment is not respected by the more sober thinking and honest part of the political world. Peace is the word, and with it contentment, thrift, national growth, expansion, education and religion are sure. True there will be heart-burnings, bitter disappointments to many, but such is the fate of the politician. When a man enters this tumultuous political field, he must expect to be handled roughly. Politics is a hard game, and they who enter that arena must not complain if they do not always win.

Let us now show the world that a republic of free and intelligent people can maintain a stable government, and be in fact, what we claim to be in theory. We may never again be placed where we have been in this last election. Besides our experience will enable us to throw some additional guards about the ballot-box so as to secure exemption from perils in the future. We live and learn.

Success of Methodism.

Much has been said in certain quarters about some remarks recently made in the New York Preacher's Meeting, about the failure of Methodism. The fact is, a wholly erroneous construction was put upon the matter by the reporters who were present at the meeting alluded to. A few ministers were simply mourning over the fact that they were not doing all they desired to do. Methodist preachers have a burning desire to see the world converted at once, and because men do not rush into the Kingdom by the million they feel restless and disappointed.

We can afford to work, on even if the success is less rapid than we would desire. It is nearly twenty centuries since Jesus said to His disciples, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," and yet the world is very far from being converted. The work [illegible] moves slowly. Well let us remember that it was four thousand years from the time the promise of a Redeemer was made before He came into the world. With God a day is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day. God has his plans and He will work them out in His own way.

Methodism has not yet made the conquest of the whole world, but it is [illegible] in that direction. It is only a little over a hundred years since the beginning of the Wesleyan revival, and already the Methodist communicants in the world number between three [illegible] millions, who are living [illegible] followers of [illegible]

What is Religion?

This question is one of very great importance to us all. We all know the good its answer will bring us, and we shall endeavor to answer it correctly. There are skeptical minded people in the world, not a few, who try to reason away all religion, who call it superstition, and who brand all the believers in Christ as the verlest fanatics or enthusiasts. But how mistaken they are! There is something as certain and as true in that moral condition which we call religion, as there is in the shining of the sun, or the roar of the thunder. Men may differ in their opinions as to what religion is, as an abstract principle, but that is something decidedly supernatural in its effects on the heart and in the life is as certain as any thing of which mankind has any knowledge. St. James says "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Religion is the implanting in the heart of a new life—hence we are "born again"—are "new creatures,"—"children of God." But it is more than this, it is an outwardly consistent life—a life of even tempers—a life of genuine benevolence, activity in doing good to the bodies and souls of men. Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Religion begins with a recognition of the exceeding sinfulness of sin as offensive to God, as destructive to our peace and joy—a wrong in itself. It implies confession of sin, repentance of sin, forsaken sin, a determination to sin no more. It implies a recognition of the fatherhood of God, the atonement of the Lord Jesus, and an entire consecration to God. It reaches still farther and means entire sanctification of soul, body, mind.

Too many make of religion a mere emotion, if they are happy that will do. A greater mistake was never made. To be happy is a very good thing, but unless the whole life is a sealed, a consecrated life, our profession of religion is vain. The week day life is the place to test our religion. What is the man in his shop? What is the woman in her home life, among her servants and neighbors? Religion is not what we say, but what we do and what we are, and this is what St. James means when he says "pure religion and undefiled before God is to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction." It is an inward grace, wrought in the heart by the Holy Ghost, but it shows itself in the outward lives of its professors. Look well to the life, for by it we are judged by men and by our Father in Heaven.

Meeting of the Book Committee.

We take the following from the Christian Advocate, (New York.) The annual meeting of the Book Committee of the M. E. Church was held at the Book Room in this city last week. All the members—eighteen in number—(a complete list of whom was given in our last issue) were present, and remained until the close. The session opened with separate meetings of the Eastern and Western Sections, on Tuesday afternoon. On Wednesday, at 10 a. m., the joint meeting opened, and these sessions were held daily until the final adjournment, on Friday afternoon.

In addition to the Book Committee there were present the Book Agents, Dr. Nelson and Mr. Phillips, of the Book Concern at New York, Drs. Hitchcock and Walden, of the Western Book Concern; the editors of all our periodicals at New York, Drs. Nast and Liebhart, editors of our German publications; Dr. Hoyt, of the Western Christian Advocate, Dr. Edwards, of the Northwestern Christian Advocate; Dr. Fry of the Central Christian Advocate; Dr. Fuller, of the Methodist Advocate, Atlanta, and W. H. Kincaid, of Pittsburgh Christian Advocate; Bishops Simpson, Harris and Peck were also present at some of the sessions of the Committee.

After receiving elaborate reports of the Book Agents, East and West, and listening to brief statements from the General Conference editors concerning the condition, needs and [illegible] of their respective papers, the Committee entered into a careful [illegible] of all our publishing interests. Then followed the [illegible] of the Bishops, Book Agents and editors. As the decisions on these questions are to be reported at an early date by the Secretary of the Book Committee, D[illegible] which we omit any reference [illegible] present. We believe they will meet with the approval of the Church.

Rev. J. C. Hartzell, acting editor of the Southwestern Advocate, was elected editor of that paper in place of Dr. Revels, resigned. He received fifteen of the eighteen votes, the other three being blanks. Bishops Harris and Peck, who were present, concurred in the election provided for in the Discipline, and our good brother will assume at once the full position of connectional editor at New Orleans. We heartily extend the usual greetings.

The question of giving premiums in connection with the publication of our Church papers was thoroughly discussed, the decision closing by the adoption of a resolution remanding the question—where it properly belongs—to the judgment of the publishers.

The reports of the Book Agents showed that our publishing interests have been carefully supervised, and that, notwithstanding the protracted financial embarrassments of the country, the general business of our Book Concerns is in an improving and prosperous condition. The proper statistical summaries will, doubtless, be officially furnished in the forthcoming report of the Book Committee. Nearly all the members left either on Friday evening or Saturday for home.

Boston Letter.

MOODY'S WORK.

But three weeks have expired since the beginning of the evangelical efforts under the leadership of this man, and his success is assured beyond all question.

It is true that many friends of the movement looked upon the effort here as something of an experiment, and regarded the issue with much of solicitude, and no one unacquainted with the almost universal prejudice against such meetings and such men, in the minds of the abnormally educated classes of New England, can estimate the real occasion for anxiety. But God has given the doubting ones, and the scoffers a rebuke that ought to be remembered, and will, be, to all eternity.

From the beginning the Tabernacle has been crowded to overflowing. Many times one to two thousand being unable to get into the main building have gone to the overflow meetings in adjacent churches or turned away disappointed. The noon prayer meeting first organized in the old Park street Church, known in other days as "brimstone corner," was almost immediately removed to the Tabernacle, where it has since been held, there being very seldom less than five thousand in attendance and frequently seven thousand. As the work has advanced, additional services have been added until now every age and condition of life and experience has its own meeting, where none but those coming under the prescribed conditions are admitted. This is the only system that would give all an opportunity to come into personal contact with Mr. Moody.

Noticeable among these special meetings are the Friday noon and Monday evening services, devoted entirely to temperance, followed by inquiry, and consultation meetings for those seeking to be freed from the chains of appetite. Wonderful results followed them in Chicago and here they have been characterized by great earnestness and most thrilling experiences and appeals from those who have been entirely saved from their love for liquor.

Many a devoted wife and mother, whose heart has been yearning perhaps for years over some loved husband or son, is thanking God to-day that light has come at last and that, the blood of Jesus is able to cleanse, not only from the dominion of sin, but from the love of it. This doctrine is preached continually and there are not wanting those who are ready to witness to the truth of it. The success of the meetings, so far as man can make them successful, is assured by the perfect system with which everything is directed and controlled. Every thing is done at a certain fixed time and every one knows that he can depend upon it. Ushers and doorkeepers are directed in their duties from the superintendent in the stand, telegraphic communications with each door enabling him to speak to all at the same instant. Thus no time is lost and all friction avoided. Each service, too, has its distinctive feature, the hundred singers which can be depended on, and under the leadership of Mr. Fourjee [illegible] time and contributes not a little to the effectiveness of the service.

The work has drawn out the bitterest opposition from the Unitarian and other free-thinking (so called) ministers of the city, who are utterly uncompromising in their denunciation of everything connected with the movement. But it goes right on as though there were no such men in existence. Of Mr. Moody's particular methods we will speak in the future. W.

Florida Letter.

REV. J. C. HARTZELL:

My Dear Brother:—I regret I have not time and energy to write you a good long letter from this lovely land and the work so dear to my heart. My duties exhaust all my moments and I feel the only way to success is to be a man of one work.

We have been abiding under the blessing of God ever since we began helping the Lord's afflicted people. One year's labor has just been completed (though with pastor's duties and presiding elders cares we have toiled for the school nearly four years) and the results have surpassed our expectation. Our coadjutors have been those of my own household, furnishing much labor at a very little expense—and by the generosity of my friends we have as good a building and as well regulated, far advanced and progressive school as has been seen by the writer in the State.

A thorough English education is our aim and our advanced class has completed English Analysis, Philosophy, Physiology and Arithmetic. Algebra and Latin are receiving their share of attention and are being mastered with creditable success.

Our beautiful new building—plain, neat and substantial—gives us accommodation for 150 pupils. Ninety of these are enrolled, the boarding arrangements are all taken up for this year. Should more come we must fit up an adjoining building for their accommodation.

The Biblical class has been studying Binney's Theological Compend with Lectures, Talks on the wholesome doctrines of the Persons, Attributes and Offices of the Trinity, Church Services, Polity and Practice, with Hymnology, will have their place in our instructions this year.

The Normal instructions are very delightful to us, and the pupils manifest a degree of interest in their preparation for the Sabbath and Secular School beyond any precedent we ever saw. May the Lord continue to bless us in this promising work.

Our Conference was a season of spiritual profit and intellectual advancement. Bishop Harris manifested deep interest in our work. His counsels were sweet and his advice valuable, if followed out by the brethren.

We are to have a Conference Library—the books of which to be loaned to the brethren for one year, to be returned and exchanged at the end of each session for others. They are ordered and will soon be placed in the hands of the Presiding Elders for distribution. The collections were good, considering the times and circumstances, and we rejoice in the "increase which God giveth."

S. B. DARNELL.

Jacksonville, Feb. 20, 1877.

THE Rocky Mountain Christian Advocate, published at Salt Lake City, Utah, Rev. G. M. Pierce, editor and publisher, is well gotten up and printed on good paper, with clear type. A recent number contains, besides many other good articles, an able sermon on the text, "The Word was made flesh," by Rev. Dr. John McEldowney, who was recently called to the pastorate of the M. E. Church in the heart of Mormonism, from Michigan. Dr. McEldowney is one of the clearest thinkers in the Church—a thorough Methodist—a "defender of the faith," par excellence. He will be a terror to the evil doers of that stronghold of Satan, and will win if any man can.

A Vienna correspondent reports that the Central Society at St. Petersburg for assisting the wounded, has notified its branch establishments that the Czar permits the immediate commencement of the collection of money and materials. All the Russian nunneries have received orders to prepare to send delegations of nurses to the front.

Presidency of Albion College.

Some of the papers of Michigan are advocating the election of Rev. Dr. McCarty of this city to the presidency of Albion College. We clip the following from the Clear Lake News.

The sudden and unexpected death of Dr. Geo. B. Jocelyn, has left a vacancy in the presidency of Albion College, the institution of learning founded and supported by the patronage of the M. E. Church in this State. From a small beginning, like the Church whose support it receives, it has grown in importance and influence, until it is now second only to the State university, which is supported by the munificence of the State, and with a large national endowment. The growth and importance which Albion College has attained among the institutions of higher education, renders the filling of the vacancy occasioned by the death of Dr. Jocelyn, a matter of grave moment. It is quite probable that some of the older professors in the college will think that promotion is due to their past services at the low salaries which it was possible to pay them, and they certainly do deserve great credit for their earnest, faithful, self-sacrificing work. But the institution is of more importance than personal consideration, and the board of trustees, in filling the vacancy, should endeavor to do the best possible for the college. In our judgment some man acquainted with Michigan, should be elected, and we know of no man more likely to succeed in such a place than Rev. J. H. McCarty, D. D., lately of this State, now pastor of the Ames M. E. Church, New Orleans. The Doctor is a man of varied and versatile talents, of commanding appearance, and pleasing address, an accomplished scholar, a fluent and polished speaker, and a literator of no mean order. We do not know as the Doctor's services could be secured, as he is winning golden opinions in his new Southern home, but we are satisfied he would do honor to the position.

Crime in England.

ITS SUPPOSED RELATION TO DRINK.

Cardinal Manning, in a recent speech, gives the following facts, and wishes to know if any sane man can fail to observe the relation between them. He says: "In the five years ending in 1824, the five years before the beer act, the beer houses, the licenses to sell on the premises, the licenses to sell to carry away, the introduction of foreign wine, the cheapening of all duties, and finally the licenses given to grocers, there were 55,500 cases of crime in England."

In the five years ending in 1874, there were 400,000 cases of crime. More than six times as great in the latter five years as in the former five, while the population of England has scarcely doubled. He then gives the following table:

Increase in population from 1824 to 1874, a period of fifty years	88	per cent.
Increase in consumption of beer	82	"
Increase in consumption of British spirits	237	"
Increase in consumption of foreign spirits	152	"
Increase in consumption of wine	250	"
Number of places where liquors were sold:
In 1829		54,000
In 1860		135,000
In 1874 (estimated)		150,000

When we take into the account the fact that Cardinal Manning is the most eminent prelate in the Roman Catholic Church in England these significant utterances of his will be considered worthy of attention. He gives official authority for his statements, and leaves them to the "enlightened judgment of all mankind."—Ex.

Winter in a Northern City.

We take the following bit of graphic description from the Chicago Inter-Ocean of last week. For two months yet the reign of winter must be continued in that city. What a contrast with the balmy atmosphere, the verdue and flowers now about us, and what a blessing to the poor of New Orleans is our genial climate:

This is the season of want, of cold, of homeless poverty, of starving children. Hungry men stand slouching at street corners, hands in pockets, cursing fate, and standing on the borderland of crime. Gaunt and faded women, out of whose hearts have long since vanished every ray of happiness or hope, crouch in the corners of dark alleys, or flutter by the street-lamps at night, seeking for, longing for, praying for bread, for the means to save themselves and their little shriveled-up dear ones at home from the gutter, the jail or the coffin. The cities are full of rags, of unwholesome dens, of aching hearts, of agonizing cries of death in life. The sun looks down on sorrow, and the moon and stars light up the garret and the doom. It is also the season of carnivals, processions and general tomfoolery. Thousands of dollars are spent on criminal folly, on ministering to the amusement of easily tickled fools. Cavalcades of painted mountebanks parade the streets, music fills the air, over-grown boys deliver themselves of idiotic gibberish in the form of printed addresses; vain and silly men, eager to play the mock duke for a day, mount their prancing steeds, and smirk and smile to the fluttering handkerchiefs of thoughtless women. And there ascends through the din and buzz of trumpet and huzza the suffering cry of want. Through the ranks of wealth stalks the skeleton of poverty, and the silver lining gilds a cloud whose darkness and distress has never before been equalled in these United States. It is the season for sobriety, not folly; for the gentle dew of charity, not the heavy showers of waste. When the country has returned to a normal condition of health, there will be time enough for play; at present it is ours to arrest and cure the ravages of deadly disease.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. S. F. Marshall, Cheneyville, La., writes: "I have arrived at my appointed work. I find I am sent to a warm-hearted Methodist people. They greeted me with words of welcome and good cheer, and I already feel at home among them; I found no Sabbath-school at either of my appointments, but have arranged for immediate organization at both. I expect the Sabbath-school to be the means of accomplishing much in bringing souls to Christ, I am making up a list of subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Our first quarterly meeting has been held; the people are well pleased with Elder Davage.

Rev. D. W. Hays, Murfreesboro, Tenn., writes: We are enjoying a season of unusual religious interest just now. Scores of awakened sinners come forward every night seeking pardon. About twenty rejoice in having obtained the precious blessing. It seems the tidal wave will sweep as high as during our former pastorate, when more than a hundred were converted and added to the Church in less than sixty days. Truly the Lord is gracious! We must not omit to state that the tramp of many Sunday-school children is heard coming to the Savior. Bros. Lillard, Robertson, and Willis, (Baptist) have rendered efficient aid. Pray for us kind reader.

W. HAYS.

Rev. Samuel Davage, Presiding Elder of Shreveport District, says: "My first quarterly meeting of the year was held at Alexandria; I was most agreeably disappointed on reaching that work. From what had been told me I expected to find the churches at both Alexandria and Pineville in a disorganized and spiritless condition. Imagine my surprise on reaching there to find that Bro. Wm. Murrell had most interesting meetings in progress in both. At Alexandria twenty-five persons have united with the Church, and at Pineville fifteen. Our quarterly services were so largely attended that the house would not hold the people. Between seventy and eighty persons were at the communion table. The Sabbath-schools are well attended.

Rev. J. Carnes, Giddings, Texas, writes: "I am happy to say that the Lord is blessing our Church. Christians are being built up in faith and love, and sinners are brought to enquire what they shall do to be saved. Pray for us."

The Bartholdi lighthouse monument, to be erected in New York harbor by Frenchmen, is making slow progress. The excavation for the foundation was made last week and that part of the foundation will be laid down immediately. Mason and Slidell. In 1838 he sailed with five United States vessels and a store ship, on an exploring expedition through the Southern hemisphere, which lasted some four years.

England appears to be able to supply the world with gold. [illegible] imports of gold into [illegible] $116,[illegible], and the exports to $81,997,850, leaving a balance of $35,124,500. The imports of gold were about $5,000,000 greater in 1876 than in 1875.

One of the Vital Issues.

The gradual accumulation of property in the United States by ecclesiastical bodies, chiefly by the Church of Rome, causes grave apprehensions to those acquainted with the history of other countries. First, because to tie up such large portion of the property of the country in mortmain, gives its ecclesiastical owners an influence over their tenants, and over the public, and over legislation which no church should have; and, secondly, because by the [illegible] of legislatures exempted from taxation.

Notwithstanding these grave objections to the accumulation of property by churches, orders and communities [illegible] have, by an extraordinary fatality, [illegible] charters enabling those bodies to hold real estate [illegible] aggregate, but they have actually given in grants and donations and subsidies to ecclesiastical bodies enormous amounts of the public money and property.

The city of New York exhibits one of the most flagrant instances of this [illegible] of public property. According to the investigation of Dexter Hawkins, Esq., in 1872, the following sums [illegible] treasury to [illegible] or denominational institutions in this city:

1869—The Sisters of Mercy received	$125,000 00
Other Roman Catholic [illegible]	80,250 00
1870—[illegible] Foundling Asylum of Sisters of Charity	100,000 00
Catholic Protectory	50,000 00
[illegible]
Other Roman Catholic institutions	798,755 44
1871—New York Catholic Protectory	61,978 00
Other Roman Catholic institutions	69,220 00
	$519,069 44

the ordinary allowances for Roman Catholic schools, asylums, etc., during the same three years were:

1869	[illegible] 82
" 1870	[illegible] 05
" 1871	[illegible] 64
	[illegible] 51
Add the previous amount	[illegible] 44
	$1,015,4[illegible] 95

Against this enormous amount all other denominations of Protestants, including Jews, only received $357,774 47, or about one dollar in six. The above (nearly two millions) was the money share of the plunder of the city which the Tammany Ring allowed directly to the Church of Rome.

But this is not all, nor the worst. The Ring granted to the Church of Rome the site of the present Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, valued at $1,500,000, and a block adjoining also, valued at $1,500,000, and a half a block on Madison Avenue to the Sisters of Mercy valued at $200,000; also, a whole block to the Sisters of Charity, on Lexington Avenue, estimated at $300,000. These real estate grants amounted to the estimated value, four years ago, of $3,500,000, and with the money grants before mentioned made over five millions given to the Church of Rome by the Tammany Ring, besides dividing among the members of that Church nearly all the offices of the city, the [illegible]

Governor Hayes and the Champagne.

In the fall of last year, directly after his successful campaign for the governorship, Mr. Hayes chanced to be in Cleveland, in attendance upon some important duties in connection with the recent campaign. After supper he and several of his political friends retired to his own appartments to talk over recent events, and of course hearty congratulations were given him from all. In the course of the evening [illegible] some champagne, to rightly celebrate his recent election. Mr. Hayes remarked that he desired none, and would prefer to have none brought up. The gentleman, in spite of his remonstrance went into the hall, summoned a servant, and ordered some champagne. Presently a waiter came into the room with glasses and bottles of champagne on a tray and set them down upon the table.

Mr. Hayes immediately turned from the topic of conversation occupying those present, told the waiter to remove the tray from the room without delay, and remarked that he hoped the gentleman who had ordered the wine would excuse him, that he thanked him but that it was in direct opposition to his principles to partake of any liquor at all, especially so under present circumstances. He said: "Gentlemen, I consider my election to the Governorship worthy of a better [illegible] well for us, instead of resorting to this kind of conviviality, rather to consider well what [illegible] responsibilities such an office enjoins upon me." With these few manly remarks the subject was dropped. This incident shows unmistakably the general bearing of the man's character.—Providence Journal.

DIED.

David Crockett, a steward in Silver Spring Church, died Feb. 6th aged 80 years. He was an earnest Christian, and devoted to the interests of the Church. On Feb. 11th, the body of Washington Williams, an exhorter in my church, was found in the Amite river. He had been missing since he started out hunting on Jan. 19th. I am informed by persons who were present at the coroners' inquest that his skull had been mashed in, and the supposition is that he was murdered. On Jan. 27th, George Best, a member of my congregation was shot, and died in a day or two afterwards.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

The time of Elijah's departure was at hand. He had fought the good fight and finished his course, and when there were so few to keep it he had kept the faith. Henceforth there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, should give him. Since we last met him in Naboth's garden, the prediction he then uttered against Ahab had been fulfilled, and the dogs had lapped up his blood as they did the blood of his victim. I K. 22: 38.

Now we behold him on the way to his glorification. His stormy career is over his battles are at an end. He has been dreaded as the lightning which flashes across the sky, and his departure is to be as awe-inspiring as his most impressive miracle.....When the Lord would take up Elijah. Now God was ready. It was the Lord that desired his presence, that where he is there his servant might be also. The chariot of fire and the triumphal ascension never would have come in answer to such a repining, distrustful prayer as Elijah offered up under the juniper tree. Had his petition been granted then—from what a glorious translation it would have cut him off! The kindest thing that God oftentimes can do is to be deaf to our importunities.

The Lord hath sent me to Bethel. To the very last Elijah had something to do. Even on the very day when he was caught up to meet his Lord in the air, there were some words for him to speak. A Christian's work here is never done till he is entirely done with this life. At Gilgal, at Bethel, and Jerico there were schools of the prophets which very likely were re-established by Elijah. Such schools had been instituted by Samuel. The persecutions of Jezebel very probably scattered their students, and after it became safe to return, it was, without doubt, his name and authority that brought them again together. All such schools had as their father a prophet of eminence, Elijah, in this case, being their spiritual head. His unmistakably cordial relations to "the sons of the prophets" gives us a pleasant glimpse of the gentler side of his character. While he was unrelentingly tearing down Baal and annihilating its worship and its priests, he was here, in a quiet way, providing for the upbuilding and continuance of the true faith. Those do little for the real religion who tear down the false but do not build up the true.

As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth. An oath that is somewhat remarkable. It is made up of two; both of which were often separately used, but rarely, as here, together. It is, it will be noticed an asseveration of the eternity of God, and of the immortality of the soul. The life of the soul is here spoken of as distinct from that of the body. The point needs to be dwelt upon only because it is asserted by some that the old Testament does not indicate that its personages believed in the endless existence of the soul. This is only one of many incidental refutations of that absurd pretension. The oath itself indicates exceeding earnestness—an immovable resolve. I will not leave thee. His motive for continuing with him was hardly the selfish one of obtaining a blessing for himself. That were hardly worthy of Elisha's character. It was that of strong attachment for, and fidelity to the master, whom he knew was that day to be taken from him.

Thou has asked a hard thing. Of course it was hard; for it was not in the power of man, no matter how saintly or how powerful with God, to confer upon another the gift of the Holy Spirit. That must be the act of God alone. If thou see me. Upon that condition, nevertheless, the petition was to be granted. In other words, Elijah left the matter wholly with God. If the Lord did not desire to grant the boon, he could take him away so suddenly that Elisha could not see him. If he was willing to bestow it, he would not hesitate to accord him this sign.

The prophets parted (11, 12).—Of what did those two prophets converse as they journeyed on, for they "talked" as they still went on? Very likely they talked of the condition of affairs in Israel, and what should be done to bring the people to an acknowledgement of the Most High. The schools for "the sons of the prophets" were, probably, not forgotten. Perhaps Elijah may have told him of the Lord's lesson to him on Horeb, and how it came about that he had laid his mantle on Elisha. Possibly they may have had sweet converse about the inner witness of the Spirit, and those strange intuitions which came to them from above, revealing to them the will and the purpose of God. Or, it may be, that they spake of the decease which he should soon accomplish, just as, on the mount of transfiguration, that was the great theme of converse with reference to Christ. Like the sons of the prophet, we are left to view them "afar off"—but, like them, how would we like to know something of those last moments of intercourse between those two remarkable prophets.

Appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire. These were the symbols of divine power. 6:17; Ps. 104. 3; Is. 66: 15; Hab. 3: 8. When the servant of Elisha was despondent because of the hosts by which he and his master were encompassed, Elisha prayed that his eyes might be opened; and in answer to that petitition, the young man saw, "and behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire, round about Elisha." 6: 17. The chariot and horses came between, and parted them, and Elijah went up by a whirlwind.

And Elisha saw it. No doubt he saw it if there were opportunity to behold it! From the time he knew of the condition, it is scarcely likely that he once took his eyes off from his companion. Neither the splendor of the sky, nor the beauty of the landscape, nor the winsome loveliness of the flowers could attract away his vision. His ears were deaf to all alluring sounds, and his eyes could see but one object. Such a devotion could not help but obtain the blessing—would obtain it even now. But had he permitted anything else to occupy his attention, would such indifference ever have secured that "double portion?" My father! My father! His spiritual father. The chariot of Israel, and the horseman thereof! claimed the fulfillment of the promise.

Saw him no more. Was seen once more upon earth, however; and that was when he and Moses met the Savior upon the mount of transfiguration. Luke 9: 28-36.

Elijah's departure was accordant with the mystery of his life. He came as suddenly as the whirlwind in which he departed. The chariot of fire was a fit vehicle to come for him whose burning zeal was the terror of wicked men. His life had been a series of splendors, and the close of it was the most splendid of them all. But let no one envy such an ending, glorious as it was. For the real glory for Elijah lay not in his ascension, but waited for him just inside the pearly gates; and of that glory are all Christ's disciples the inheritors. And if we have coming for us no visible chariot of fire, we have that which is far better — we have the promise of the Master, that he will come for us himself, that where he is, there we may be also. "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory."

I desire to know the whereabouts of my brothers, sisters and mother. When last heard of they were in Wilcox county, Alabama. The names of my brothers are Peter and Evans; of my sisters are Belsora, Tillar and Mary Ann; my mother's name is Silvia. When we were separated they belonged to a Mr. McDole, and I to Mr. Wm. Hunter. Any person knowing the whereabouts of any of them will confer a lasting favor by notifying me or calling their attention to this notice. With hope, I await for tidings.

Two of the most celebrated artists the world has ever known dwelt in the same city. One delighted in delineating beauty in all its graces of tint, form, and motion. His portraits were instinct with the charm of physical vigor. The graceful, half-voluptuous outline of form and feature harmonized with delicately blended tints. On his canvas, the homeliest faces had an almost irresistable charm. The other found pleasure only in depicting weird and gloomy subjects. Above all, did he excel in painting the portraits of the dying. The agonizing death throe, the ghastly face and form, were all depicted with marvelous fidelity. There existed between these artists the most intense dislike. At length this dislike culminated. The beauty-loving artist had been engaged in painting the portrait of a beautiful woman. Connoisseurs pronounced it the most wonderful piece of art that had ever been produced. His brother artist was jealous of his fame and sought revenge. By bribing the keeper of the studio he gained access to the picture each night. At first he was content to only deaden the brilliancy of the complexion and eyes, efface the bloom from cheek and lip and paint a shadow on either cheek. Later, his strokes grew bolder and freer, and one morning the artist awoke to find the entire outline of the portrait changed. He could scarcely recognize in the emaciated form and haggard countenance the glowing conception he had embodied. The pallid face and expressionless eyes he had attributed to a lack of genuineness in his materials; but when the outlines were changed he suspected the cause and indignantly dismissed the keeper. What the revengeful artist marred by a few rapid strokes of his skillful brush was only restored by years of patient industry. Reader, need we name the artists,—Health, who paints the flowers and "grassy carpet" no less than the human form divine,—Disease, the dreaded artist who revels among the ruins both of nature and humanity,—and Carelessness, the keeper to whom Health often intrusts his portraits. And is not the beauty of woman, the most admired of all the works which adorn the studio of Health, that Disease oftenest seeks to mar? The slightest stroke of his brush upon the delicate organization leaves an imprint that requires much skill and patience to efface. Restoration must be prompt. Carelessness must be dismissed. Let suffering women heed the warning ere Disease has marred their chief beauty—Health—beyond reparation. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been used by thousands of these sufferers, and they are unanimous in their praise of its excellence. If you would be transformed from the pallid, nervous invalid into a happy, vigorous woman, try it.

The International Review for March and April contain an article reviewing President Grant's administration, with criticisms on its policy; also, "Theory and Practice in Architecture;" "German Comic Papers," by a German anthor; "Two Norse Sagas," by Prof. H. H. Boyesen, of Cornell University; "The University of Upsala" by a Swedish author; and "James Russell Lowell and Modern Criticism," by Ray Palmer; besides a letter from Mr. Hammerton, a sonnet by Charles (Tennyson) Turner, and the usual book-notices and notes on scientific and public events.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, that the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, billious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence. and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

O. S. BISLEY,

with the farmer. He will neglect what should receive his best attention. Mortgages will cover his acres and exhaust them more than his crops. Buildings, fences and tools get out of order and there is no money to make the immediate repairs which are imperatively demanded. The little stock he has and the poor crops must often be disposed of by forced sales at ruinous prices. His miserly desire for acquiring is gratified at the expense of his prosperity.

We hope our young men will learn to avoid this error without attending the school of experience. A few acres, upon which the whole means and energies are concentrated, will almost always yield ample and satisfactory results. A smaller capital suffices, the labor is lighter, the annoyances and perplexities are less while the profit is proportionally much greater.

Upon the tombstone of many a worthy farmer who has worked hard and died poor may truthfully be written this epitaph:—

DIED FROM TOO MUCH LAND.
—Son of the Soil.

Useful Hints.

(Bureau of Agriculture.)

These mixtures should be sown over the land broadcast when the ground is well prepared, before planting, and not put in the hills, so that the roots may seek the food and not concentrate and thereby cause the plants to "burn up."

To produce fifty bushels of corn to the acre more than the natural product of the land use:

Nitrogen, 64 pounds in the form of sulphate of ammonia;

Potash, 77 pounds, in the form of muriate of potash;

Phosphoric acid, 31 pounds, in the form of muriate of superphosphates;

To produce one ton of hay per acre more than the natural product of the land use;

Nitrogen, 36 pounds, in the form of sulphate of ammonia;

Potash, 31 pounds, in the form of muriate of potash;

Phosphoric acid, 12 pounds, in the form of superphosphate.

To produce 25 bushels of oats and the usual proportion of straw per acre more than the natural product of the soil, and in proportion for other quantities, use:

Nitrogen, 10 pounds, in the form of sulphate of ammonia;

Potash, 31 pound, in the form of muriate of potash;

Phosphoric acid, 8 pounds, in the form of superphosphate.

To produce 1,000 pounds of dried leaf tobacco, with the usual proportion of stalk, more than the natural yield of the land, use:

Nitrogen, 119 pounds, in the form of sulphate of ammonia;

Potash, 172 pounds, in the form of sulphate of potash;

Phosphoric acid, 16 pounds, in the form of superphosphate;

Lime, 160 pounds, in the form of sulphate of lime (land plaster;)

Magnesia, 28 pounds, in the form of sulphate of magnesia.

To produce 100 bushels of potatoes per acre, and their usual proportion of tops, more than the natural production of the land, and other quantities proportionally, use:

Nitrogen, 21 pounds, in the form of sulphate of ammonia;

Potash, 34 pounds, in the form of sulphate of potash;

Phosphoric acid, 11 pounds, in the form of superphosphate.

By the use of these formulas, upon any ordinary level lands, with a good clay subsoil, corn can be raised at about 21 cts. per bushel; oats 20 cents, potatoes, 10 cents, and tobacco about 6 per hundred pounds (all of superior quality,) counting in the cost of farm labor.

Hen-Hawks—How to Catch Them.

A singular but effectual method for destroying hawks, that greatest terror to all poultry yards, has recently been communicated to me. My informant says he took no less than seven the first day. They had previously been so frightened with powder and ball, that he could no longer reach them with his rifle. The world will not be much the wiser, or fowls generally more safe, on account of his discovery, unless it be published; and, should you deem it worth publishing, you may give it to your readers.

It is simply to erect, in an open field near by, a post a few inches in diameter made square at the top, and say five or six feet above ground, place on this a smart steel trap, fastened with a short chain. The intruder will be sure to take his stand there, it being a capital place for his observations; he [illegible] on [illegible] ground, is [illegible] and should be [illegible] so as not to alarm [illegible]

Cavalry regiments may be recruited to 1000, and it is provided that a sufficient force of cavalry shall be employed in the defence of the Mexican and Indian frontier of Texas. A prohibition, it is thought, will be inserted against the use of the army in support of State governments.

There are many rumors in regard to Mr. Hayes' cabinet, and also to his proposed Southern policy, but we are so close upon events and facts that it would seem idle to indulge in surmises. C.

Personal Recollections.

BY HENDICKSON.

I was sitting in my easy chair, the other day, cogitating that is I was not thinking or trying to think about anything in particular, I was in a sort of passive-mental state when the question came. Why am I a minister of the Gospel rather than a farmer, merchant, lawyer or mechanic? That question arose in my mind spontaneously, it came drifting along like a loose plank in the current of the stream, and caught in a sort of mental eddy, went floating round and round as if to compel me to take hold of it and make something out of it. Here it remained. Why am I a minister of the gospel? And like the ghost of Banquo would not down.

I confess that the more I thought of it the more suggestive it became. Then I found myself supplementing this main question with others such as these: Am I in any sense worthy of the position which I hold in the Church? Has any minister for twenty odd years been of any particular value to the Church or the world. If I had not occupied the places I have through all these years might not somebody else have stood there whose influence and power would have been greater for good than mine has been? In my choice of the ministry as a life work was I honest, or did I make the selection because it suited my tastes or natural inclinations some way? Am I to-day in hearty sympathy with the spirit of the gospel? and am I a minister because it was my first and chief duty to become one? These and many other questions flitted through my mind on that day as I reclined on my easy chair.

Well "while I was musing the fire burned." The more I thought on the subject the more interested I felt in it, for I was led to think over my career from my earliest recollection up to the moment I was led to review my life with much care. If I was not in the ministry lawfully, it was providential that it was not too late to quit. A man, only in the forties, is not too old to leave any new business, and if a mistake has been made in the choice of the past, the future should witness its correction. Besides, being only in middle life, there is abundant opportunity to get well settled in some other calling in the thirty or forty years yet to be mine, in all probability.

These recollections carried me back to my childhood home, and I sought to ascertain what motives within, or what forces without, directed me in the beginning of my life.

And then there came up at once my early training. My father was a man of the world, who was not opposed to religion, but who did not profess it until after I was a happy young convert myself. Parenthetically, I would just like to put the fact on record here, that he did become a christian in his experience, and died a very peaceful death in 1864. My mother had been a devoted christian from the time she was fourteen years old. My earliest recollections of home life, by my mother's side, are interwoven with the subject of personal and family religion. The farthest back I can go to any one point, is to a prayer scene. I could not have been over three years old, but to this day that scene is as vivid in my memory as if it had only transpired yesterday. My mother, taking her child's hand, [illegible] to an "upper room," in [illegible] two story house, bowed down and prayed long and fervently. I did not know anything about prayer at that time, but nevertheless it had its influence on me, even then. That mother's prayer, doubtless had something to do in shaping my life through all these years intervening between that day and this.

[illegible] minister because it was the [illegible] of a mother's heart! [illegible] there are many men [illegible] the gospel who were [illegible] purpose, and set apart [illegible] fathers and mothers [illegible] of several boys and [illegible] of course, have no [illegible]

dear "old folks" make arrangements for the future of their sons. There is Samuel, the eldest, he is rugged, a slow coach, but good natured; somewhat clumsy in his movements, and not much given to books; he had better be made to bear the burdens, do the heavy work of the farm, and ultimrtely to be its owner and manager. So the venerable couple decide what Samuel shall do and be, and their conclusions to human judgment, seems to be just the right one to come to in his case. Then there is William who is the reverse of Samuel, a sprightly, vivacious, sparkling person, of handsome face and quick wit. He is easy, graceful and rapid in his movements. Of course there is nothing in him out of which to make a farmer, and so it is decided that William shall go to school and come out a merchant or lawyer. Then there is James who is slim and spare, with a pale face, indicating a lack of iron in his blood; withal a boy rather fond of books, known to be destitute of any particular fondness for play, of rather an effeminate make up; he is selected for the ministry, and shipped off to college for that end. This is not all mere poetry. Such dispositions have often been made of the boys by fond and loving parents.

But how often such parental decisions have been reversed in time. The rough and hard-handed Samuel, of sluggish boyhood, plods on, but develops into strength of mind that equals his strength of body; and because he plods on unceasingly he wins in the end. While the sparkling and vivacious William soon runs his course, and, like a glass of soda-water, he effervesces and subsides into a very common-place life.

It is no unusual remark one hears that such a man "does not fulfill the promise of his brilliant boyhood. I know a family of three sons, all of whom are in the ministry. The ministry, like some diseases, runs in certain families. Well, the only unpromising one of the three in early life is now as far in advance of the other two, in the pulpit, as they were superior to him in youthful days. It is doubtles well enough for parents to encourage their sons in what seems to be a natural calling, but it is well at the same time not to be too hasty, nor to be disappointed if things turn out differently from what was hopefully expected. "Man proposes but God disposes," says an old adage.

But, to return to myself. My pious mother did devote me very early in life to the ministry, a circumstance of which I was not aware, however, until after my conversion, when I was about twelve years old. My mother died about this time and it was when she was on her death-bed that she told me that she very much desired that I should be a minister of the gospel. My father, on the other hand, thought that he saw in me the elements necessary to make a good lawyer, which was his plan, and which he cherished fondly. My older sisters always said they concurred in my father's judgment, intimating that I was naturally tricky and somewhat inclined to exaggerate in my statements. Of course they could not have meant that I was untruthful. But I have this recollection, that I was always preaching. If I could possibly get together half a dozen little fellows like myself they were my congregation, hymns were sung, prayers were said and sermons preached. Preaching was my business—early and late I was at it—and some of these imitations must have been sublimely eloquent, as I recollect them now. The modle for these child efforts at preaching was an elderly man, who came once in two weeks to our school-house to dispense the word of life. That he was a genuinely good man, every one believed. He dressed in the cheapest home-spun, and combed his hair down over his forehead to show that he was humble. His preaching was after the manner of the times, that is, it was delivered with violent gesteculations, and with a voice which would have filled the hippodrome, though the school-house would not have held over fifty persons. There was no let up to it from exordium to peroration. He usually closed his discourses with a voice completely broken, with the perspiration dripping from his venerable brow like a small air shower. He made his words emphatic by giving the Bible an occasional slap with the palm of his hand which made my young ears tingle. He talked about hell and damnation in a manner which caused the cold chills to run over me, and made me afraid to go to bed even in the early twilight of the evening. This, to me, was preaching, it was all the kind I ever heard, and following my only model in my childhood efforts, I stamped with my puny foot and pounded with my little fist, and screamed until I was hoarse, and tried hard to look wild and excited and say things to make my docile little auditors think I was really a wonderful preacher.

I have a recollection of a call made one day by a good christian man at my father's house, when the conversation turned upon a new minister who had just come into an adjacent neighborhood. "He is the greatest preacher," said this man, "we have ever heard; he is not large, in fact, is rather small, but you can hear him at least a mile every time he opens his mouth," of course that settled it. There were times in my own young life, before I was ten years old, when I felt deeply and truly religious. If ever in my life I have been possessed of real religious emotions it was in those days. When alone I was often moved to tears by my own contemplations. Then there would spring up in my child-heart feelings of joy and peace. The memory of those days of sunshine will never wholly depart. Somehow I feel drawn to the life of the christian, and how I obtained it the reader must judge my inclinations were all and constantly toward the calling which has occupied my life for a quartery of a century.

Ideal Recreations.

[We take the following extract from "Black Horse and Carryall," an interesting volume, by Rev. J. H. McCarty, A. M.]

We are not an "idealist," in the technical sense; and yet we see in idealism the source of much good. We all have our ideals—we must have them.

The architect constructs the house on paper, which is an ideal house. Take yonder lofty and beautiful building. The plan was not made from the building, but the building from the plan. Or, look at that delicate and beautiful piece of machinery. It was not built by simply adding one piece to another—here a lever, there an arm, yonder a wheel or piston—but first a plan was made, a nice adjustment of parts was arranged; and thus the machinist saw all complete and in running order, before the forge had wrought out a wheel or arm. The whole had existed subjectively, as the philosophers would say, in his mind. O, that is a strange power with which mortals are endowed! Battles can be planned, governments founded, navies set afloat, railroads constructed from ocean to ocean, in the mind; and the subjective thought can become an objective reality.

And here we have evidence of that soul-life, which we are yet to live, "when this mortality shall have put on immortality;" when the creations of the mind will be equal to the ability to explore all space, and roam at will through the dominions of the Eternal.

And so in our life, we need an ideal of goodness, truth, faith; a plan to work by. Where do we find our best pattern? In history? It furnishes us some noble names of martyrs, heroes, statesmen, artists, philanthropists. But we go not the history of Greece or Rome or England, to find the model on which to build our character, but to Him who was, "despised and rejected of men;" to Him whose life was a grand and beautiful illustration of goodness in its divine simplicity—who could look upon even his murderers, and say "Father, forgive." No other such man as he ever lived. Confucius and Zoroaster and Plato were, in their day and generation, brilliant lights, and have projected themselves into distant ages; but, compared with the Nazarene, the man of the seamless garment, the King of kings and Lord of lords, their light pales into dimness. O, there is a power in that name! Read the story of his life, and you will learn a lesson of meekness, patience and love which can be learned nowhere else. If we construct our lives by this model, they will be beautiful indeed.

Give your little child an outline picture of a house or tree; give it a blackboard and crayon, and set it to the task of copying the image. It will draw many crooked lines, and make many mistakes; but it will study the pattern, and will, in time, be able to master the subject, and produce a true copy. This is what the ideal will do for the child. And so let us set Jesus in the horizon of life—Jesus full of love, free from passion, meek, gentle, holy—and we shall soon find ourselves desiring to be like him; and longing to be so will have its influence on our lives. He, of the matchless speech once said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." If we look and long for the better life—the spiritual life—He will lift us up to it. Baron Von Humboldt speaks of standing on one of the lofty summits of Chimborazo, with the sun shining in brightness over him, the clouds wrapping their dark mantles about the mountain-sides, while far below him, lightnings flashed and thunders roared; yet all was serene where he stood firm on the rocks of Chimborazo. So we shall be lifted above clouds and storms; our feet may stand on the eternal Rock of Ages.

We are told that in the beginning man was created in the "image of God." It was a spiritual image. That image, lost in the fall, is put back by the Savior, our example, our Divine Redeemer; and that person only is truly man or woman who is God-like, Christ-like. Not long ago, we were whirling along in a fast train. It was early in the morning. During the preceding night, a mist had fallen, and, settling on the branches of the trees and shrubs and grass, had been sufficiently heavy to form drops on their extremities. There spread out before us an extended landscape, but O, how lovely! The weather had changed in the night, and when morning came, on shrub and tree and spear of grass, as far as the line which bound our vision, instead of drops of water were globules of ice; and each one reflected the perfect image of the sun, who, though more than ninety millions of miles away, mirrored his face in each one of all the millions of these ice-globules, so that the landscape was as lovely as if God had rained down on all the earth a shower of diamonds, rubies, and sapphires. It was a picture we never shall allow to fade from our memory. Ay, was it not a type of the better land—a spiritual mirage, a temporary reflection of the heavenly world upon our earth-life? We thought of the golden streets and pearly gates, and rode on.

But there was another thought. As each of all these millions of ice-globules bears an image of the distant sun, whose heat will soon dissipate them all back into the vapor from whence they have come, so we all may bear the image of God, we may reflect that image—the image of Him "whose throne is in the heavens, and whose kingdom ruleth over all," whom the heavens of heavens cannot contain, until we, too, return to Him.

O, is it not a wonderful thought, that the distant sun should picture his face in the tiny dew-drops of frozen mist-drop? Is it not more wonderful that the great God, whose hand has sprinklep space with stars, and lighted up the deep vaults of ether with suns, by the "word of his power," should thus dwell in man, put his image on the heart of mortals? O, it is most wonderful! But it is true.

Raising Cattle Upon a Large Scale in Texas.

The extent of country over which their cattle range depends upon the size of the stock; one of 75,000 head would range in most cases over an area of country fifty miles wide and one hundred miles long, though some may always be found beyond the limits. Most of our large stock-raisers, as they sell their beeves, invest their surplus money in other stocks of cattle contiguous to, or within their range, and much depends upon these purchases as to the size or shape of the territory. They always have a central rancho at which they keep a sufficient number of brood mares to supply all demands for horses. This place is known as 'headquarters'; they generally have other or sub ranchos, at which they keep two or more men who do what they can in driving up, marking and branding young stock, gathering and selling beeves, and looking out generally for the interest of their employer. As in the other case, nothing is done during the winter months with the cattle, except to get up and sell beeves to supply the home demand of the packing houses on the coast, and the New Orleans market. When the spring opens, as the grass is sufficiently high to support the horses at labor, the stock-raiser employs his hands, gets up his horses and prepares for operations. Twenty-five men are about as many as can work to an advantage in one gang, and for this number one large four mule wagon, laden with provisions, camp equipage, a very little baggage, and about one hundred horses, make up the 'out-fit.' Of course the cattle about the central rancho are first gathered in, marked and branded, and as many of the calves kept in the pen as is desirable. The largest stock-raiser, or a number combined, having a series of pens located with a view to permanent water throughout his range. The party thus equipped and provisioned establish their first camp at one of these pens, and the business of the season is considered fairly commenced. The wagon, and one man to cook, being always kept at the camp, another, with the assistance of a "bell mare," keeps the extra horses under herd, while the balance of the party ride over the country, in every direction, and drive up all the cows with young calves belonging to their employer. If it is the wish of the owner to gather beeves at the same time, they are driven along with the cows, kept in the same pen at night, and herded during the day. The calves are generally branded in the morning and turned out with the cows, and nothing more is ever done to them until the male portion are of sufficient age to gather and sell for beeves. This shows the cost of raising beef upon the prairies of Texas.

The beeves which are being gathered, are kept in hand until the drove is sufficiently large, say eight hundred to a thousand head, when they are turned over to the speculator, and the proprietor receives from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars in gold, and immediately commences the gathering of another herd.

The ease with which these cattle can be managed within their range, and by men of experience on horseback, is a matter of surprise to most strangers; there is little, if any, more difficulty about it than though they were so many work-oxen. I remember one morning, about ten o'clock, while passing over the immense praries between Victoria and the seaport town of Lavaca, in company with a gentleman from Chicago, seeing great numbers of cattle coming from three directions, north, east and south, and seemingly concentrating upon a point near our position. As there was not a human being visible to cause such a movement, we stopped our ambulance and watched the denoument. Presently a single horseman, away in the distance, was seen flying over the prarie; then another, and another, until ten were counted in as many different directions and it soon became evident that a place near us had been selected for 'rounding up.' When the cattle, coming from different directions, began to meet, they stopped of their own accord, so perfectly do they understand what is wanted of them. In less than one hour from the time of our halt fully six thousand head of beeves and stock cattle were concentrated into one herd, and Mr. Kuykendell, an esteemed citizen of Hines' Bay, rode up to our little party and exchanged the salutations of the morning. Understanding my friend from Chicago was interested in his cattle operations, he dismounted two of his men and kindly gave us their horses, that we might see all that was to be seen to more advantage.

We rode to and fro through that immense herd of cattle with as much safety as Daniel of old walked in the lion's den, while it is not improbable that had we attempted it on foot, we should have lost our lives by being run over, and the whole herd would have stampeded and rushed with irresistible fury, with almost the flight of deer, over the prairie. The reason of this is, many of the animals since they were branded, had never seen a man on foot, while with horse and rider they are perfectly familiar. When we had sufficiently inspected the herd, Mr. Kuykendall gave orders to 'turn out' on the south, east and north, whereupon the men commenced relieving or turning out from the herd all animals not belonging to their employer, and even such of his as he had no use for at that time, which were cows with unbranded calves, mavericks, and beeves over four years old, suitable to be sent by steamer to the New Orleans market.—West Texas Guide.

Blue Glass.

It was six years ago that General Augustus J. Pleasanton first published his views on blue glass. He was a true blue believer in the superior healthfulness of ceruleanized solar rays, and blew his trumpet through the medium of a blue-papered pamphlet, printed in blue ink. His alleged discovery did not create much attention at the time, but its late reappearance in an enlarged form has excited great interest, and made many converts to his theory. Invalids are even now claiming to be cured by sitting under the blue glass roofs and by blue glass windows, and the end is evidently not yet.

If half of what Gen. Pleasanton claims for blue glass be true, he ought to be ranked among the benefactors of humanity. It makes vines grow more luxuriantly, delivers a mule from rheumatism when substituted for ordinary panes in the windows of the animal's stable, is a remedy for spinal complaint with which a woman has long been afflicted, and is a soverign aid to the perfect fattening of pigs.

It is our discoverer's theory that blue light and the violet, which is the result of confounding it with the red ray, being the most refrangible rays of the solar spectrum, excite magnetism and electricity, by which carbonic acid gas evaporated from growing plants is decomposed and deoxygenated, thus supplying carbon to vegetation and sustaining both animal and vegetable life with its oxygen. When the solar rays pass through a glass medium the process is as follows:

"Sunlight passes through plain transparent glass with very slight obstruction, as it does through the atmosphere and ether of space; it produces no heat, for the glass remains as cold as the outside atmosphere, while the sunlight passes through it. When, however, the adjoining sunlight moving with the same velocity as the first-mentioned, viz. 180,000 miles per second, falls upon the blue panes of glass, six or seven primary rays of sunlight are suddenly arrested by it, only the blue ray being permitted to pass through it into the apartment. The sudden stoppage of these six rays of light with this enormous velocity produces friction; this friction evolves negative electricity, which is the electricity of sunlight passing through the cold ether of space and our cold atmosphere, both of which being negatively electrified, impart their electricity by induction to the rays of the sunlight as they pass. The blue glass is oppositely electrified. When these opposite electricities, thus brought together, meet at the surface of the glass, their conjunction evolves heat and magnetism; the heat expands the molecules of the glass, and a current of electro-magnetism passes into the room imparting vitality and strength to any animal or vegetable life within it. When the atmosphere of the room becomes thus electro-magnetized, its inhabitants can not fail to derive the greatest benefit from being in it.—Ex.

King George's Thanksgiving.

When our national independence had been triumphantly achieved, the colonies, of course, held a great general jubilee. And poor King George, who had been sadly worsted in the conflict, thinking himself quite as pious as his disloyal subjects, and not to be outdone in godliness by such rebels against the divine right, appointed also a day of thanksgiving for the restoration of peace to his long disturbed empire. In the vicinity of the monarch's residence, then Windsor Castle, dwelt a most estimable member of the Church, who shared his sovereign's intamacy, and conversed with him freely. On this occasion the worthy divine ventured to say;

"Your Majesty has sent out a proclamation for a day of thanksgiving. For what are we to give thanks? Is it because your Majesty has lost thirteen of the fairest jewels from your crown?

"No, no," replied the monarch, "not for that."

"Well then, shall we give thanks because so many millions of treasure have been spent in this war, and so many millions added to the public debt?"

"No, no," again replied the King, "not for that."

"Shall we then, give thanks that so many thousands of our fellow-men have poured out their life-blood in this unhappy and unnatural struggle between those of the same race and religion?"

"No, no," exclaimed the King for the third time, "not for that."

"For what, then, may it please your Majesty, are we to give thanks?" asked the pious divine.

"Thank God!" cried the King most energetically, "thank God it is not worse."

Yes, and here is a reason for thankfulness in all circumstances, since it is never so bad with us as it might be; and even if God be pouring out the vials of his anger, yet, blessed be his name, he never empties them to the uttermost!—Rev. Chas. Wadsworth, D. D.

Well Built Christians.

A well built Christian is harmonious in all his parts. No one trait shames another. He is not a jumble of inconsistencies—to-day devout, to-morrow frivolous, to-day liberal to one cause, and to-morrow niggardly toward another; to-day fluent in prayer, and to-morrow fluent in falsehoods. He does not keep the fourth commandment on Sunday, and break the eighth commandment on Monday. He does not shirk an honest debt to make a huge donation. He is not in favor of temperance for other folks, and of a glass of toddy for himself. He does not exhort or pray at each of a few meetings he attends, to make up arrearages for the most meetings which he neglects. He does not so consume his spiritual fuel during revival seasons, that he is cold as Nova Zembla during all the rest of the time, nor do his spiritual fervors ever out-run his well-ordered conversation.

What is a Gentleman.

A gentleman is just a gentle man, no more, no less; a diamond polished that was first a diamond in the rough. A gentleman is gentle. A gentleman is modest. A gentleman is courteous. A gentleman is slow to take offense, as being one who never gives it. A gentleman is slow to surmise evil, as being one who never thinks it. A gentleman subjects his appetite. A gentleman refines his tastes. A gentleman subdues his feelings. A gentleman controls his speech. A gentleman deems every other better than himself.

"Why did you not pocket some of those oranges?" said one boy to another. "Nobody was there to see you." "Yes there was. I was there myself, and I don't ever intend to see myself doing a mean thing."

A person may, by skilful conduct and various artificial means, make a sort of name for himself; but if the inner jewel is wanting, all is vanity and will not last.

He that will often put eternity before him, and who will dare to look steadfastly on both of them, will find that the more often he contemplates them, the former will grow greater and the latter less.

Three Great Facts.

When Paul wrote to the Christians at Thessalonica and spoke of the Gospel he had preached to them he said: "Our Gospel came not in word only but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." His point was that the Gospel they had received carried with itself evidence of its own truthfulness. "It came not in word only."

As did Paul, so the preacher of to-day can appeal directly to the "power" of the Gospel, as proving its truthfulness. This power is seen daily by the world, in three great facts which we will mention.

The first fact is conviction. By this is meant the impressions we have concerning truth, and our duties to follow and obey it. We cannot always tell at what particular time we receive them, but that all have them is a fact. They are not the result of teachings which we have received, though by instruction they are quickened and strengthened. Conviction is a universal fact. None need be convinced of the justice of right, or the injustice of wrong. This proves that a standard of right and wrong exists, to which all give assent. It is difficult to state precisely what that standard is, in words, but, in general terms, it may be said to forbid any action by which ourselves or our neighbors are injured, or the glory of God hindered. Sin hinders the glory of God, injures the man who indulges in it, and unfits him for his highest duty to his neighbor. Now, the Gospel in its ultimate principle, is simply war against sin. Church organizations and statements of creeds are outside matters. Christ came into the world to save sinners, and the very fact that men are impressed that sin is wrong and righteousness is right, and that they ought to forsake the one and follow the other is evidence that they stand convinced of the truth of Christ's mission.

And it must be remembered that the source of conviction is revealed in the Gospel. Christ said: "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you. And when He is come He will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment to come." This office of the Holy Spirit is unconditional and universal. All men are convicted by the truth, are made to feel that they are not as good as they ought to be, and that they ought to try to be better, because the Holy Spirit is abroad in the world. It is only by direct and persistent efforts that these impressions are withstood. And even then, in the still hours of repose, when there is no hum of business to disturb, no teacher near to speak, no bible at hand to instruct, no church near to remind, and no [illegible] from the pulpit to warn, these [illegible] return, and, like white winged messengers from above, beckon the soul to a higher and purer life. Still another fact is that just in proportion as men place themselves under the influence of Christianity, do these convictions become [illegible] and powerful.

Another fact is Conversion. By this is meant a change of heart. It has but little to do with the mental faculties. It neither destroys old [illegible]. It may stimulate those we possess naturally, quicken them into activity, increase their strength and enlarge their sphere of action by new motives, [illegible] and inspirations, but it [illegible] changes their essential [illegible] to their number. [illegible] are the same [illegible] are the [illegible] Christ or the [illegible]. On the other hand conversion is not a development. There [illegible] heart develop[illegible] of sin into [illegible] holiness. Conver[illegible] into the soul [illegible] never before [illegible] a new crea[illegible] animated [illegible] differ[illegible] a new [illegible] the [illegible] that are [illegible] on the [illegible]

earth, testify to [illegible] fact. They all sing—

> "There is a spot to me more dear
> Than earthly [illegible]
> A spot for which [illegible]
> Springs grateful from its fountain.
> 'Tis not where kindred spirits dwell,
> Though that is almost Heaven,
> But where I first my Savior found,
> And felt my sins forgiven."

Another fact is the witness of the Holy Spirit. "For as many as are led by the Spirit, they are the sons of God. . . Ye have received the Spirit of adoption whereby we cry 'Abba Father!' . . . The Spirit itself also beareth witness with our spirits that we are the sons of God." The witness of the Spirit, therefore, is an inward impression on the soul whereby the Spirit of God directly witnesses to our spirits that we are His children. Here we have an unmistakable foundation of Christian experience, resting in the individual consciousness of each professor. It is to him, spiritually, what the hull of the ship is to the sailor in a storm. His vessel may be driven by the winds and tossed upon the waves, the storm-cloud may envelope him in midnight darkness; his sails torn to shreds, his cordage broken; spars lost and masts driven away; still he does not despair. Beneath him is the hull that can bid defiance to the waves, for her every beam and plank are firm, girt about and and bolted through and through with ribs and bolts of steel. So, in the storms of life. All else may go, but let the heart have within the assurance of a home in Heaven and despair is impossible.

Conviction, Conversion and the witness of the Spirit are the three great facts upon which the Church may to-day rest her appeal to the world. They are matters of observation and experience.

Editorial Correspondence.

Saturday morning February 24th, we stood on the deck of the steamer Hutchinson as it approached the wharf in Galveston harbor. It was a beautiful morning. The Gulf was calm and the bright sunlight, tempering the cool breeze, made the air delightful.

Once in the city, we find quarters at the Washington Hotel, and then hasten to find some one of our four ministers in this goodly city. We were soon at the door of Rev. F. von Schluembach. Our greeting was cordial, and after a good lunch we were soon in that brother's buggy, and on the way to see our several ministers and arrange for Sabbath's work.

Bros. Schluembach and Werner make up our German ministry in Galveston. The former has charge of a good-sized German congregation, which, years ago, was in the Methodist Episcopal Church South; then, as the result of some disagreement, floated into the Presbyterian church, and lately, a few months since, the church became independent of all ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and is now known as St. Paul's Evangelical Church. At our last Southern German Conference the congregation requested Bishop Peck to appoint Bro. Schluembach their pastor. The appointment has proved a wise one, both for the congregation and for the cause of our Southern Methodism in this island city. The membership of the church has more than doubled, and the talent and genius of Bro. Schluembach are making an excellent impression for good upon this large German population. His ministry is like a new dispensation to the thoughtful Germans of Galveston, both intellectually and spiritually. Besides, this good German pastor is thoroughly American in his habits and instincts, and is also a prominent representative of the Young Men's Christian Association of America. His voice and influence are heard and felt in all the religious movements of the city.

In the west end of the city our German mission is located, and is under the care of Rev. F. Werner, a young man who combines in himself pastor and teacher. He has a good day school, and has gathered a small membership, with good prospects of rapid growth. Plans are already maturing for a new church. Here is a point where the Board of Church Extension ought to give a thousand dollars at once. It would all be returned to the treasury in a few years. Galveston has twelve thousand Germans, and among them are hundreds who are ready to receive the gospel from an acceptable Methodist minister.

The M. E. Church South has a small church and membership, near the center of the city. For several years the Church has had but little prosperity, owing to troubles of long standing, involving some of the pastors and leading people. A prominent Southern Methodist brother of the city suggested to us, but in view of the bad odor attached to German Methodism in Galveston, the past few years, that it would be wise for both Methodist churches to withdraw until the present generation has passed away. The suggestion surprised us and we were at a loss to account for it. No, no, true Methodism knows no retreat. If the past has had its blunders and unworthy leaders, let the present and future be free from blunders and let both Methodisms see that its representatives are true, and strong and pure.

Sunday was a busy day. We have two other churches in the city, in which worship large and intelligent colored congregations. They are two miles apart. The forenoon was given half and half to the Sunday-schools in each. In the afternoon we preached in Wesley Chapel, presided over by Rev. Jesse Shackelford. Of this pastor it is not too much to say, that he is loved and respected by all who know him. His congregation is engaged in a very important church enterprise. Its present poor church building is soon to give place to a very fine frame church. The location is good, being in one of the best parts of the city, corner of Avenue I and twenty-eight street. The church building was bought from the Presbyterian church of the city, and has been moved to our lots, and will be ready for dedication in a few weeks. It will be a splendid property, worth five or six thousand dollars. The church gave a supper Saturday night and cleared nearly a hundred dollars. The Board of Church extension has given loans and donations to the amount of one thousand dollars. It is money well spent.

Sunday night we preached at the East Church, as it is called, Rev. Paul Douglas pastor. This is our first and strongest church in Galveston. The singing was good, under the leadership of a trained choir. Bro. Douglas is a systematic Methodist preacher. He has organized classes among the young people, for religious instruction since Conference, and already there have been conversions.

On Monday night we spoke again at Wesley Chapel and on Tuesday night at East Church again.

The SOUTHWESTERN is popular among our people of Galveston. The East Church congregation has sixty-eight subscribers, and Wesley Chapel thirty-six. Our Galveston lists foot up one hundred and fifteen. This is a truly grand record. What city of the size in the Southwest can excel this?

Yesterday we enjoyed a pleasant interview with Dr. I. G. John, Editor of the Galveston Christian Advocate. He makes an excellent paper. It is a tower of strength against all kinds of public sins. A little more recognition of the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Texas, in its columns, would add to its representative character and value.

To-day, we spent a very delightful hour with Dr. Shepbard, the popular and eloquent pastor of St. John's M. E. Church South. The Doctor believes heartily in fraternity, and looks forward to the day, when organic union shall be feasible.

This visit to Galveston has given us a new interest in our Galveston churches. May their power for Christ be multiplied. To-morrow we go to Houston.

Chautauqua Meetings for 1877.

We are informed by Dr. Vincent that the Chautauqua series of educational meetings for 1877, will open on Saturday, August 4, at eleven o'clock, and close on Thursday evening, August 23. The "Reform Council" and the "Church Congress" will last from Saturday, August 4, to the following Tuesday; the "Sunday-school Assembly" from Tuesday, August 7, to Tuesday, August 21; the "Scientific Conference" opening on Saturday, August 18,—three days before the adjournment of the "Sunday-school Assembly"—will close on Thursday evening, August 23. The whole series of meetings will be the best ever held at Chautauqua. The following are named among the speakers for 1877: Dr. R. S. Storrs, Dr. W. M. Taylor, Rev. Joseph Cook, Dr. Deems, John B. Gough, etc.

About 30,000 cattle were driven in droves from Texas, during 1876. Over half passed through Fort Worth,

Mission Work in Mexico.

The recent visit of Dr. Butler, Superintendent of our Mission in Mexico, will not allow the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN to forget that our Church already has a hold upon this country, and that God is using Methodism as one of the means for the emancipation and salvation of this long-oppressed people.

Probably a few facts, showing the actual progress of the work in this part of the field, will interest those who love to see our blessed Gospel triumphing.

Within the last year the first evangelical sermon was preached in Guanajuato, and since that time the work has made constant advancement. Many have cast aside their idols, and entirely broken with the Church of Rome; hundreds have read our tracts and Bibles, and for miles around the city the truth has made itself felt.

Of course the new-born Church meets with all classes of opposition and persecution, but God has thrown over us the broad shield of his protection and we are safe, and the work advances. The government stands by the Constitution of 1857 and gives us the protection of the law, and if it still continues to do so, our Church will soon become a power for the renovation of Mexico. Neither are we doomed to labor without seeing the results of our toil, for already the fruit is being seen in what we can believe to be the conversion of souls. Christmas day we celebrated for the third time in Guanajuato the Lord's supper, and about sixty persons partook of the bread and wine, representing the body and blood of Christ. This was after three weeks of teaching with regard to the nature and real significance of this sacrament. Over thirty persons have given their names, and will be taken into full membership in the Church.

Last night, after two very interesting sermons, and the baptism of a young man who was dissatisfied with his baptism by the Church of Rome, and who is studying for a preacher, we received ten persons into full membership. Others will be received next Sabbath.

The reception was very impressive; the Spirit of God working upon hearts, and moving many to tears through the influence of the Word. Our faith increases all the time, and we have seen that the Gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of even Mexicans.

From all appearances the war is entirely over. The arms of Gen. Diaz are everywhere triumphant, and the most of the "liberals" are full of hopes for the future; but I fear they base their hopes on the wrong principles. The religion of Jesus is the only hope of Mexico, and never can this country advance until the Catholic Church is entirely overthrown. Emilio Castelar well says, that "Catholic nations must get another religion than Catholicism or perish." There is but one true religion.

"The Men to Save Africa."

MR. EDITOR:—I notice in your issue of Feb. 22d, an article under the caption "The men to save Africa." I confess to some surprise that a man of the apparent ability of the writer should treat so important a subject with such flippant superficiality. While I may not feel it my duty to go as a missionary to Africa, yet I feel that the call for men and means to evangelize Africa comes with more force to me, as a colored man, than it can to a man of any other race.

Africa has stronger claims upon the children of Africa's ancestors than she can have upon any other race of men.

While it is true, therefore, that we are "Africo-Americans," it is also true that we are the descendants of African ancestors. Africa is to us "Fatherland," and we are wanting in the essential elements of a true and noble manhood if our hearts are not drawn out toward her as the hearts of no other class of men can be, by those racial instincts that hold together every other race of men. Although we are removed some six or seven generations from Africa, the tropical element still lurks in our blood, and, say what we may to the contrary, we can stand the tropical climate better than the Anglo-Saxon.

It is to be hoped that the writer, who doubtless has positive views on the subject, will give us his opinions and the reasons upon which they are based. CUSHITE.

Central Tennessee College.

This school, under the patronage of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, is located in Nashville, Tennessee. It is in its eleventh school year. The college, preparatory, theological, medical and normal departments are now organized. On the 23d ult. the closing exercises of the first session of the medical department took place. The department has been under the superintendance of Dr. G. W. Hubbard, with able assistants. The examination proved that the freedmen can master the theoretical part of the profession admirably. One of the class, having practiced for three years and having passed a satisfactory examination in the entire course of study, received the degree of Doctor of Medicine. There is a good prospect for a large increase of the number of students in this department the next session. The value of well trained physicians among the colored people is felt in many places to be a necessity, which must be met, next to the school teacher and preacher. This school proposes to meet this necessity. It is also designed to impart needed medical training to some of the missionaries to Africa, as a knowledge of medicine has been found exceedingly valuable to missionaries in that field. The second session of the Medical Department begins on the first Monday in October next.

Book Committee Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Committee was held in the room of the Mission Board at 805 Breadway, New York, commencing at 10 a. m., Feb. 14, and closing at 3 p. m., Feb. 16. All the members were present at the opening of the sessions and remained to the closing hour. Bishop Harris and Bishop Peck were in attendance.

Full reports of the Eastern and Western publishing houses were before the committe, and a thorough examination was made into the condition and prospects of each periodical, and the profit or loss at each Depository. A retrenchment of thousands of dollars, in the expenses of the Concern has been affected, yet not so as to lessen the material aid allowed the periodicals. The estimated value of real estate has been reduced $146,000.

The vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Revels, as Editor of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, was filled, at the first ballot, by the election of Rev. J. C. Hartzell, B. D., who had fifteen out of eighteen votes—three being blanks.

A committee was appointed to draft resolutions respecting the death of Bishop Janes. An appropriate minute was put upon the journal of the committe.

The salaries of the Bishops and General Conference officers were ordered to be published by the chairman and secretary, and will appear hereafter within a few days. The official residence of the editor of the Repository and his office, were located at Cincinnati.

The agents were instructed to require a settlement of accounts due at the Annual Conferences by cash or note at ninety days, and if such notes be unpaid at maturity, all further credit shall be refused.

The judgment of the Book Committee was declared—that the pressure of the times requires severe retrenchment and economy in every department over which the agents have control; and that they were pleased to observe that the agents have already begun a systematic reduction of expenses which should be continued wherever practicable.

The question of premiums was discussed largely, and finally laid on the table. A neat copy of Dr. Fowler's memorial sermon on Bishop Janes, illustrated by likenesses of the Bishop, in his early and mature life, were presented to each of the Committee, by Mr. J. B. Cornell, at whose expense it was published.

The presence of all the editors, from the Center, West and South, with one or two exceptions, with the eighteen members of the Book Committee, and two of the Bishops made a goodly company whose association in counsel for a few days, will be productive of good to the publishing interests of the Church.

The report of the Book Committee to the annual Conferences, will give a fuller statement of what is here briefly summarized, by the direction of the Committee to the Secretary. The place and hour of the next annual meeting was fixed at Cincinnati, O., at 10 a. m., the second Wednesday of February 1878.

New York, Feb. 16, 1877.

Personal.

Bishop Peck is holding the Newark Conference at Jersey City, this week.

Bishop Merrill will reside corner of La Salle and Chicago Avenue, Chicago. The Methodists of that city gave him a public reception.

Rev. H. H. Kincaid and wife, of Pittsburgh, Pa., celebrated their "crystal" wedding Tuesday evening Feb. 13, and a very joyous time it was, judging from reports.

The Post-office address of Rev. J. L. Bradford, Presiding Elder of the Gulf District, (Miss) is changed to this city. He and his family will make their home here for the present.

Bishop Harris, after holding the North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida Conferences, visited New York during the session of the Book Committee last Month. He will reside permanently hereafter in New York City.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. A. Moore, of La. Harpe St. church in this city, reports forty-one recent accessions, and that church and Sabbath-school are doing well.

Rev. Isaac Smith, Victoria, Texas, sends subscribers with the cash and adds: "I have gathered the children of three of my four charges into Sabbath Schools. We have 105 schôlars and 8 teachers. My people are alive to their spiritual interests, and the prospects for the year are very encouraging."

Rev. C. King, Oakland, Tex. says, "The blessings of the Lord have attended us this year. We have had twenty-three accessions, and there is a good spiritual interest in Church and Sabbath-schools. I am at work for the SOUTHWESTERN because it is my duty and because I do like the paper."

Rev. Thos. Wadkins, Sutherland Springs, Texas, says: "Since I came to this work I have increased the preaching appointments from one to four. The revival spirit is now abroad among my people, and many are inquiring the way of salvation. We thank the Lord for his goodness."

Dr. J. Braden, Nashville, Tenn. writes: "The religious interest still continues in Central Tennessee College. There have been several conversions since I last wrote. The Young Men's Christian Association here is looking toward working for the salvation of the colored people. The plan is to hold meetings in the colored churches, in co-operation with the pastors. This is an important movement."

Rev. L. R. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., says: "The Conference year begins on this work with bright prospects. I have already had twenty accessions to the church. My people need a new house of worship. On last Sabbath we commenced the work of raising the money for the purpose, and one hundred dollars was contributed, which encourages us greatly. We are making up a good list of subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN in addition to those already sent in."

Rev. G. Brooks, Yazoo City, Miss. says: "I am safe at my post and busily engaged organizing my work.

I have a large congregation, and find the people of Yazoo City energetic and intelligent. A fraternal spirit seems to pervade both races. Our church building is old, but the ladies have undertaken the work of having a new church built, and are determined to have it completed this year. I expect to send a list of subscribers soon."

Rev. B. F. Smith, Hallettsville, Texas, says: "We have a very interesting series of meetings in progress. There have been several conversions, and the altar is crowded with penitents. The Lord is moving the hearts of his people. Pray for us. We have a large Sabbath School. I expect to fulfil my pledge in regard to subscribers.

Rev. A. Peebles, Enterprise, Miss. says: "I entered upon my work under rather discouraging circumstances. The church was rather disorganized, and the people disheartened. But I am thankful to say that I think we can already see the beginning of better times, we want all of our brethren in Mississippi Conference to pray for us."

Rev. B. H. Johnson, Gallatin, Tenn., write: "Our revival is still in progress. We have had ten conversions and forty accessions in past ten days. Our public services and social meetings are well attended, and our collections good. We

A PLEA TO SCIENCE.

O Science, reaching backward through the distance,
Most earnest child of God,
Exposing all the secrets of existence
With thy divining rod,
I bid thee speed up to the heights superual,
Clear thinker ne'er sufficed;
Go, seek and find the laws and truth eternal,
But leave me Christ.

Upon the vanity of pious sages
Let is the light of day;
Break down the superstition of all ages;
Thrust bigotry away,
Stride on, and bid all stubborn foes defiance;
Let truth and reason reign;
But, I beseech thee, O immortal Science,
Let Christ remain.

What canst thou give to help me bear my crosses,
In place of Him, my Lord!
And what to recompense for all my losses,
And bring me sweet reward?
Thou couldst not, with thy clear, cold eyes of reason,
Then couldst not comfort me,
Like One who passed through that tear-blotted season
In sad Gethsemane.

Through all the many wearying hours of sorrow,
What word that thou has said
Would make me strong to wait for that to-morrow
When I should find my dead?
When I am weak, and desolate, and lonely,
And prone to follow wrong?
Not thou, O Science,—Christ, my Savior, only,—
Can make me strong.

Thou art so cold, so lofty, and so distant,
Though great my need should be,
No prayer, however constant and persistent,
Could bring thee down to me.
Christ stands so near to help me through each hour,
To guide me day by day;
O Science, sweeping all before thy power,
Leave Christ, I pray!

Washington Letter.

[From our regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 28, 1877.

We find ourselves very near the end of the forty-fourth Congress, of the present administration, and, let us hope, for there is want of assurance, that we are near the end of the present conflict. For eight months this conflict has continued, paralyzed industry, stifling commerce, fomenting bitterness and strife. It has only been less disastrous than an eight months war. Statisticans estimate the loss in millions of dollars, and an English journalist cynically observes that it costs us more to conduct a Presidential campaign and election than it costs them to support a prolific royal family, or to carry on a foreign war.

The end of the Forty-fourth Congress will have no sooner come, than we shall have the beginning of another. The immediate convention of the Forty-fifth Congress will be a governmental necessity. The appropriation bills have not been passed, and the government will be out of funds in some of its departments by the end of the fiscal year. But, considering the political agitation, it is remarkable that Congress has accomplished so much. The invalid pension bill has become a law; the consular and diplomatic bill has passed both Houses, and is ready for the signature of the President. The Navy, Deficiency, Legislative, Indian, Fortification, Post-office and Military Academy bills are in the hands of conference Committees, but their passage can hardly be expected this session. The sundry civil bill is still pending in the House; the river and harbor bill has been reported in the House and recommitted, and the army appropriation bill was not reported until last Saturday. The army bill provides that no money shall be appropriated for recruiting the army beyond the number of 17,000 enlisted men, and limits the pay. of the General of the army to $11,000, of the Lieutenant General to $9000, and of a Major General to $7,000 per annum. None of the money appropriated by the act is to be paid to any railroad company for transportation of any property or troops of the United States over that portion of any railroad which was constructed by aid of a land grant, on the condition that such railroad should be a public highway for the use of the United States government. The number of cavalry regiments is reduced to eight, artillery regiments to four and infantry regiments to sixteen. Cavalry regiments may be recruited to 1000, and it is provided that a sufficient force of cavalry shall be employed in the defence of the Mexican and Indian frontier of Texas. A prohibition, it is thought, will be inserted against the use of the army in support of State governments.

There are many rumors in regard to Mr. Hayes' cabinet, and also to his proposed Southern policy, but we are so close upon events and facts that it would seem idle to indulge in surmises. C.

Personal Recollections.

BY RENDICKSON.

I was sitting in my easy chair, the other day, cogitating that is I was not thinking or trying to think about anything in particular, I was in a sort of passive-mental state when the question came. Why am I a minister of the Gospel rather than a farmer, merchant, lawyer or mechanic? That question arose in my mind spontaneously, it came drifting along like a loose plank in the current of the stream, and caught in a sort of mental eddy, went floating round and round as if to compel me to take hold of it and make something out of it. Here it remained. Why am I a minister of the gospel? And like the ghost of Banquo would not down.

I confess that the more I thought of it the more suggestive it became. Then I found myself supplementing this main question with others such as these: Am I in any sense worthy of the position which I hold in the Church! Has any minister for twenty odd years been of any particular value to the Church or the world. If I had not occupied the places I have through all these years might not somebody else have stood there whose influence and power would have been greater for good than mine has been? In my choice of the ministry as a life work was I honest, or did I make the selection because it suited my tastes or natural inclinations some way? Am I to-day in hearty sympathy with the spirit of the gospel? and am I a minister because it was my first and chief duty to become one? These and many other questions flitted through my mind on that day as I reclined on my easy chair.

Well "while I was musing the fire burned." The more I thought on the subject the more interested I felt in it, for I was led to think over my career from my earliest recollection up to the moment I was led to review my life with much care. If I was not in the ministry lawfully, it was providential that it was not too late to quit. A man, only in the forties, is not too old to leave any new business, and if a mistake has been made in the choice of the past, the future should witness its correction. Besides, being only in middle life, there is abundant opportunity to get well settled in some other calling in the thirty or forty years yet to be mine, in all probability.

These recollections carried me back to my childhood home, and I sought to ascertain what motives within, or what forces without, directed me in the beginning of my life.

And then there came up at once my early training. My father was a man of the world, who was not opposed to religion, but who did not profess it until after I was a happy young convert myself. Parenthetically, I would just like to put the fact on record here, that he did become a christian in his experience, and died a very peaceful death in 1864. My mother had been a devoted christian from the time she was fourteen years old. My earliest recollections of home life, by my mother's side, are interwoven with the subject of personal and family religion. The farthest back I can go to any one point, is to a prayer scene. I could not have been over three years old, but to this day that scene is as vivid in my memory as if it had only transpired yesterday. My mother, taking her child's hand in her own in an "upper room," in the old two story house, bowed down and prayed long and fervently. I did not know anything about prayer at that time, but nevertheless it had its influence on me, even then. That mother's prayer, doubtless had something to do in shaping my life through all these years intervening between that day and this.

Am I a minister because it was the expressed desire of a mother's heart? No doubt there are many men preaching the gospel who were selected for the purpose, and set apart to the sacred office by very pious and well meaning fathers and mothers. Here is a family of several boys and girls. The girls, of course, have no parent-appointed destiny, only as a matter of course, they are expected to finally settle down into good matronly ladies. But these boys—they must be planned for, or they will prove inevitable failures. And so on many a wintry evening, before the blazing fire on the hearth, these dear "old folks" make arrangements for the future of their sons. There is Samuel, the eldest. He is rugged, a slow coach, but good natured; somewhat clumsy in his movements, and not much given to books; he had better be made to bear the burdens, do the heavy work on the farm, and ultimately to be its owner and manager. So the venerable couple decide what Samuel shall do and he, and their conclusions to human judgment, seems to be just the right one to come to in his case. Then there is William who is the reverse of Samuel, a sprightly, vivacious, sparkling person, of handsome face and quick wit. He is easy, graceful and rapid in his movements. Of course there is nothing in him out of which to make a farmer, and so it is decided that William shall go to school and come out a merchant or lawyer. Then there is James who is slim and spare, with a pale face, indicating a lack of iron in his blood: withal a boy rather fond of books, known to be destitute of any particular fondness for play, or rather an effeminate make up; he is selected for the ministry, and shipped off to college for that end. This is not all mere poetry. Such dispositions have often been made of the boys by fond and loving parents.

But how often such parental decisions have been reversed in time. The rough and hard handed Samuel, of sluggish boyhood, plods on, but develops into strength of mind that equals his strength of body; and because he plods on unceasingly he wins in the end. While the sparkling and vivacious William soon runs his course, and, like a glass of soda-water, he effervesces and subsides into a very common-place life.

It is no unusual remark one hears that such a man "does not fulfill the promise of his brilliant boyhood. I knew a family of three sons, all of whom are in the ministry. The ministry, like some diseases, runs in certain families. Well, the only unpromising one of the three in early life is now as far in advance of the other two, in the pulpit, as they were superior to him in youthful days. It is doubtles well enough for parents to encourage their sons in what seems to be a natural calling, but it is well at the same time not to be too hasty, nor to be disappointed if things turn out differently from what was hopefully expected. "Man proposes but God disposes," says an old adage.

But, to return to myself. My pious mother did devote me very early in life to the ministry, a circumstance of which I was not aware, however, until after my conversion, when I was about twelve years old. My mother died about this time and it was when she was on her deathbed that she told me that she very much desired that I should be a minister of the gospel. My father, on the other hand, thought that he saw in me the elements necessary to make a good lawyer, which was his plan, and which he cherished fondly. My older sisters always said they concurred in my father's judgment, intimating that I was naturally tricky and somewhat inclined to exaggerate in my statements. Of course they could not have meant that I was untruthful. But I have this recollection, that I was always preaching. If I could possibly get together half a dozen little fellows like myself they were my congregation, hymns were sung, prayers were said and sermons preached. Preaching was my business—early and late I was at it—and some of these imitations must have been sublimely eloquent, as I recollect them now. The model for these child efforts at preaching was an elderly man, who came once in two weeks to our school-house to dispense the word of life. That he was a genuinely good man, every one believed, He dressed in the cheapest home-spun, and combed his hair down over his forehead to show that he was humble. His preaching was after the manner of the times, that is, it was delivered with violent gesticulations, and with a voice which would have filled the hippodrome, though the school-house would not have held over fifty persons. There was no let up to it from exordium to peroration. He usually closed his discourses with a voice completely broken, with the perspiration dripping from his venerable brow like a small air shower. He made his words emphatic by giving the Bible an occasional slap with the palm of his hand which made my young ears tingle. He talked about hell and damnation in a manner which caused the cold chills to run over me, and made me afraid to go to bed even in the early twilight of the evening. This, to me, was preaching, it was all the kind I ever heard, and following my only model in my childhood efforts, I stamped with my puny foot and pounded with my little fist, and screamed until I was hoarse, and tried hard to look wild and excited and say things to make my docile little auditors think I was really a wonderful preacher.

I have a recollection of a call made one day by a good christian man at my father's house, when the conversation turned upon a new minister who had just come into an adjacent neighborhood. "He is the greatest preacher," said this man, "we have ever heard; he is not large, in fact, is rather small, but you can hear him at least a mile every time he opens his mouth," of course that settled it. There were times in my own young life, before I was ten years old, when I felt deeply and truly religious. If ever in my life I have been possessed of real religious emotions it was in those days. When alone I was often moved to tears by my own contemplations. Then there would spring up in my child-heart feelings of joy and peace. The memory of those days of sunshine will never wholly depart. Somehow I feel drawn to the life of the christian, and how I obtained it the reader must judge my inclinations were all and constantly toward the calling which has occupied my life for a quartery of a century.

Ideal Recreations.

[We take the following extract from "Black Horse and Carryall," an interesting volume by Rev. A. H. McCarty, A. M.]

We are not an "idealist," in the technical sense; and yet we see in idealism the source of much good. We all have our ideals—we must have them.

The architect constructs the house on paper, which is an ideal house. Take yonder lofty and beautiful building. The plan was not made from the building, but the building from the plan. Or, look at that delicate and beautiful piece of machinery. It was not built by simply adding one piece to another—here a lever, there an arm, yonder a wheel or piston—but first a plan was made, a nice adjustment of parts was arranged; and thus the machinist saw all complete and in running order, before the forge had wrought out a wheel or arm. The whole had existed subjectively, as the philosophers would say, in his mind. O, that is a strange power with which mortals are endowed! Battles can be planned, governments founded, navies set afloat, railroads constructed from ocean to ocean, in the mind; and the subjective thought can become an objective reality.

And here we have evidence of that soul-life which we are yet to live, "when this mortality shall have put on immortality;" when the creations of the mind will be equal to the ability to explore all space, and roam at will through the dominions of the Eternal.

And so in our life, we need an ideal of goodness, truth, faith; a plan to work by. Where do we find our best pattern? In history? It furnishes us some noble names of martyrs, heroes, statesmen, artists, philanthropists. But we go not the history of Greece or Rome or England, to find the model on which to build our character, but to Him who was "despised and rejected of men;" to Him whose life was a grand and beautiful illustration of goodness in its divine simplicity—who could look upon even his murderers, and say "Father, forgive." No other such man as he ever lived. Confucius and Zoroaster and Plato were, in their day and generation, brilliant lights, and have projected themselves into distant ages; but, compared with the Nazarene, the man of the seamless garment, the King of kings and Lord of lords, their light pales into dimness. O, there is a power in that name! Read the story of his life, and you will learn a lesson of meekness, patience and love which can be learned nowhere else. If we construct our lives by this model, they will be beautiful indeed.

Give your little child an outline picture of a house or tree; give it a blackboard and crayon, and set it to the task of copying the image. It will draw many crooked lines, and make many mistakes; but it will study the pattern, and will, in time, be able to master the subject, and produce a true copy. This is what the ideal will do for the child. And so let us set Jesus in the horizon of life—Jesus full of love, free from passion, meek, gentle, holy—and we shall soon find ourselves desiring to be like him; and longing to be so will have its influence on our lives. He of the matchless speech once said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." If we look and long for the better life—the spiritual life—He will lift us up to it. Baron Von Humboldt speaks of standing on one of the lofty summits of Chimborazo, with the sun shining in brightness over him, the clouds wrapping their dark mantles about the mountain-sides, while far below him, lightnings flashed and thunders roared; yet all was serene where he stood firm on the rocks of Chimborazo. So we shall be lifted above clouds and storms; our feet may stand on the eternal Rock of Ages.

We are told that in the beginning man was created in the "image of God." It was a spiritual image. That image, lost in the fall, is put back by the Savior, our example, our Divine Redeemer; and that person only is truly man or woman who is God-like, Christ-like. Not long ago, we were whirling along in a fast train. It was early in the morning. During the preceding night, a mist had fallen, and, settling on the branches of the trees and shrubs and grass, had been sufficiently heavy to form drops on their extremities. There spread out before us an extended landscape, but O, how lovely! The weather had changed in the night, and when morning came, on shrub and tree and spear of grass, as far as the line which bound our vision, instead of drops of water were globules of ice; and each one reflected the perfect image of the sun, who, though more than ninety millions of miles away, mirrored his face in each one of all the millions of these ice-globules, so that the landscape was as lovely as if God had rained down on all the earth a shower of diamonds, rubies, and sapphires. It was a picture we never shall allow to fade from our memory. Ay, was it not a type of the better land—a spiritual mirage, a temporary reflection of the heavenly world upon our earth-life? We thought of the golden streets and pearly gates, and rode on.

But there was another thought. As each of all these millions of ice-globules bears an image of the distant sun, whose heat will soon dissipate them all back into the vapor from whence they have come, so we all may bear the image of God, we may reflect that image—the image of Him "whose throne is in the heavens, and whose kingdom ruleth over all," whom the heavens of heavens cannot contain, until we, too, return to Him.

O, is it not a wonderful thought, that the distant sun should picture his face in the tiny dew-drops of frozen mist-drop? Is it not more wonderful that the great God, whose hand has sprinkled space with stars, and lighted up the deep vaults of ether with suns, by the "word of his power," should thus dwell in man, put his image on the heart of mortals? O, it is most wonderful! But it is true.

Raising Cattle Upon a Large Scale in Texas.

The extent of country over which their cattle range depends upon the size of the stock; one of 75,000 head would range in most cases over an area of country fifty miles wide and one hundred miles long, though some may always be found beyond the limits. Most of our large stock-raisers, as they sell their beeves, invest their surplus money in other stocks of cattle contiguous to, or within their range, and much depends upon these purchases as to the size or shape of the territory. They always have a central rancho at which they keep a sufficient number of brood mares to supply all demands for horses. This place is known as 'headquarters'; they generally have other or sub ranchos, at which they keep two or more men who do what they can in driving up, marking and branding young stock, gathering and selling beeves, and looking out generally for the interest of their employer. As in the other case, nothing is done during the winter months with the cattle, except to get up and sell beeves to supply the home demand of the packing houses on the coast, and the New Orleans market. When the spring opens, as the grass is sufficiently high to support the horses at labor, the stock-raiser employs his hands, gets up his horses and prepares for operations. Twenty-five men are about as many as can work to an advantage in one gang, and for this number one large four mule wagon, laden with provisions, camp equipage, a very little baggage, and about one hundred horses, make up the 'out-fit.' Of course the cattle about the central rancho are first gathered in, marked and branded, and as many of the calves kept in the pen as is desirable. The largest stock-raiser, or a number combined, having a series of pens located with a view to permanent water throughout his range. The party thus equipped and provisioned establish their first camp at one of these pens, and the business of the season is considered fairly commenced. The wagon, and one man to cook, being always kept at the camp, another, with the assistance of a "bell mare," keeps the extra horses under herd, while the balance of the party ride over the country, in every direction, and drive up all the cows with young calves belonging to their employer. If it is the wish of the owner to gather beeves at the same time, they are driven along with the cows, kept in the same pen at night, and herded during the day. The calves are generally branded in the morning and turned out with the cows, and nothing more is ever done to them until the male portion are of sufficient age to gather and sell for beeves. This shows the cost of raising beef upon the prairies of Texas.

The beeves which are being gathered, are kept in hand until the drove is sufficiently large, say eight hundred to a thousand head, when they are turned over to the speculator, and the proprietor receives from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars in gold, and immediately commences the gathering of another herd.

The ease with which these cattle can be managed within their range, and by men of experience on horseback, is a matter of surprise to most strangers; there is little, if any, more difficulty about it than though they were so many work-oxen. I remember one morning, about ten o'clock, while passing over the immense praries between Victoria and the seaport town of Lavaca, in company with a gentleman from Chicago, seeing great numbers of cattle coming from three directions, north, east and south, and seemingly concentrating upon a point near our position. As there was not a human being visible to cause such a movement, we stopped our ambulance and watched the denoument. Presently a single horseman, away in the distance, was seen flying over the prarie; then another, and another, until ten were counted in as many different directions and it soon became evident that a place near us had been selected for 'rounding up.' When the cattle, coming from different directions, began to meet, they stopped of their own accord, so perfectly do they understand what is wanted of them. In less than one hour from the time of our halt fully six thousand head of beeves and stock cattle were concentrated into one herd, and Mr. Kuykendell, an esteemed citizen of Hines' Bay, rode up to our little party and exchanged the salutations of the morning. Understanding my friend from Chicago was interested in his cattle operations, he dismounted two of his men and kindly gave us their horses, that we might see all that was to be seen to more advantage.

We rode to and fro through that immense herd of cattle with as much safety as Daniel of old walked in the lion's den, while it is not improbable that had we attempted it on foot, we should have lost our lives by being run over, and the whole herd would have stampeded and rushed with irresistible fury, with almost the flight of deer, over the prairie. The reason of this is, many of the animals since they were branded, had never seen a man on foot, while with horse and rider they are perfectly familiar. When we had sufficiently inspected the herd, Mr. Kuykendall gave orders to 'turn out' on the south, east and north, whereupon the men commenced relieving or turning out from the herd all animals not belonging to their employer, and even such of his as he had no use for at that time, which were cows with unbranded calves, mavericks, and beeves over four years old, suitable to be sent by steamer to the New Orleans market.—West Texas Guide.

Blue Glass.

It was six years ago that General Augustus J. Pleasanton first published his views on blue glass. He was a true blue believer in the superior healthfulnes of ceruleanized solar rays, and blew his trumpet through the medium of a blue-papered pamphlet, printed in blue ink. His alleged discovery did not create much attention at the time, but its late reappearance in an enlarged form has excited great interest, and made many converts to his theory. Invalids are even now claiming to be cured by sitting under the blue glass roofs and by blue glass windows, and the end is evidently not yet.

If half of what. Gen. Pleasanton claims for blue glass be true, he ought to be ranked among the benefactors of humanity. It makes vines grow more luxuriantly, delivers a mule from rheumatism when substituted for ordinary panes in the windows of the animal's stable, is a remedy for spinal complaint with which a woman has long been afflicted, and is a soverign aid to the perfect fattening of pigs.

It is our discoverer's theory that blue light and the violet, which is the result of confounding it with the red ray, being the most refrangible rays of the solar spectrum, excite magnetism and electricity, by which carbonic acid gas evaporated from growing plants is decomposed and deoxygenated, thus supplying carbon to vegetation and sustaining both animal and vegetable life with its oxygen. When the solar rays pass through a glass medium the process is as follows:

"Sunlight passes through plain transparent glass with very slight obstruction, as it does through the atmosphere and ether of space; it produces no heat, for the glass remains as cold as the outside atmosphere, while the sunlight passes through it. When, however, the adjoining sunlight moving with the same velocity as the first-mentioned, viz. 180,000 miles per second, falls upon the blue panes of glass, six or seven primary rays of sunlight are suddenly arrested by it, only the blue ray being permitted to pass through it into the apartment. The sudden stoppage of these six rays of light with this enormous velocity produces friction; this friction evolves negative electricity, which is the electricity of sunlight passing through the cold ether of space and our cold atmosphere, both of which being negatively electrified, impart their electricity by induction to the rays of the sunlight as they pass. The blue glass is oppositely electrified. When these opposite electricities, thus brought together, meet at the surface of the glass, their conjunction evolves heat and magnetism; the heat expands the molecules of the glass, and a current of electro-magnetism passes into the room imparting vitality and strength to any animal or vegetable life within it. When the atmosphere of the room becomes thus electro-magnetized, its inhabitants can not fail to derive the greatest benefit from being in it.—Ex.

King George's Thanksgiving.

When our national independence had been triumphantly achieved, the colonies, of course, held a great-general jubilee. And poor King George, who had been sadly worsted in the conflict, thinking himself quite as pious as his disloyal subjects, and not to be outdone in godliness by such rebels against the divine right, appointed also a day of thanks-giving for the restoration of peace to his long disturbed empire. In the vicinity of the monarch's residence, then Windsor Castle, dwelt a most estimable member of the Church, who shared his sovereign's intimacy, and conversed with him freely. On this occasion the worthy divine ventured to say;

"Your Majesty has sent out a proclamation for a day of thanksgiving. For what are we to give thanks? Is it because your Majesty has lost thirteen of the fairest jewels from your crown?

"No, no,' replied the monarch, "not for that."

"Well then, shall we give thanks because so many millions of treasure have been spent in this war, and so many millions added to the public debt?"

"No, no," again replied the King, "not for that."

"Shall we then, give thanks that so many thousands of our fellow-men have poured out their life-blood in this unhappy and unnatural struggle between those of the same race and religion?"

"No, no," exclaimed the King for the third time, "not for that."

"For what, then, may it please your Majesty, are we to give thanks?" asked the pious divine.

"Thank God!" cried the King most emergetically, "thank God it is not worse."

Yes, and here is a reason for thankfulness in all circumstances, since it is never so bad with us as it might be; and even if God be pouring out the vials of his anger, yet, blessed be his name, he never empties them to the uttermost!—Rev. Chas. Wadsworth, D. D.

Well Built Christians.

A well built Christian is harmonious in all his parts. No one trait shames another. He is not a jumble of inconsistencies—to-day devout, to-morrow frivolous; to-day liberal to one cause, and to-morrow niggardly toward another; to day fluent in prayer, and to-morrow fluent in falsehoods. He does not keep the fourth commandment on Sunday, and break the eighth commandment on Monday. He does not shirk an honest debt to make a huge donation. He is not in favor of temperance for other folks, and of a glass of toddy for himself. He does not exhort or pray at each of a few meetings he attends, to make up arrearages for the more meetings which he neglects. He does not so consume his spiritual fuel during revival seasons, that he is cold as Nova Zembla during all the rest of the time, nor do his spiritual fervors ever out-run his well-ordered conversation.

What is a Gentleman.

A gentleman is just a gentle man, no more, no less: a diamond polished that was first a diamond in the rough. A gentleman is gentle. A gentleman is modest. A gentleman is courteous. A gentleman is slow to take offense, as being one who never gives it. A gentleman is slow to surmise evil, as being one who never thinks it. A gentleman subjects his appetite. A gentleman refines his tastes. A gentleman subdues his feelings. A gentleman controls his speech. A gentleman deems every other better than himself.

"Why did you not pocket some of those oranges?" said one boy to another. "Nobody was there to see you." "Yes there was. I was there myself, and I don't ever intend to see myself doing a mean thing."

A person may, by skilful conduct and various artificial means, make a sort of name for himself; but if the inner jewel is wanting, all is vanity and will not last.

He that will often put eternity before him, and who will dare to look steadfastly on both of them, will find that the more often he contemplates them, the former will grow greater and the latter less.

Mr. Moody says there are 31,000 promises in the Bible.

Subscribers are coming in at a very encouraging rate, but there are some of our friends that we do not hear from as we expected. Push the canvass, brothers!

The closing scenes in the House of Representatives at Washington, owing to the efforts of the filibusters to prevent the completion of the Electoral count, were exceedingly disgraceful.

The bill creating the Electoral Commission, to decide who was elected President was passed by both Houses of Congress, by a vote of 182 for, and 19 against it on the Democratic side, and 56 for and 85 against it by Republicans. It was, therefore, a Democratic measure. It proved to be a Democratic Waterloo.

President Hayes took the oath of office at noon on Sunday the 4th inst. This was done in order that there might be no interregnum, it not being deemed safe in the excited state of public feeling to leave the country for one day without a President. The inaugural was delivered to a crowded house at the Capitol on Monday.

The Methodist Advocate, Atlanta, is publishing the names of the ministers in its patronizing territory, stating how many take that paper, and how many subscribers each have obtained. In the Georgia Conference 27 ministers have obtained 85 subscribers; 11 ministers obtained none, and 6 do not take the paper. In the Savannah Conference, 53 ministers have obtained 112 subscribers; 30 ministers obtained none and 17 do not take the paper. It would seem from this that, outside of the ministers, the Methodist Advocate has for 1877, 197 subscribers. Reports from other Conferences are to follow.

VERY BEST PIANOS.—Chickering & Sons, Boston and New York, are manufacturing three styles of new scale upright pianos, which they are shipping to Mr. Philip Werlein, for his Southern trade. These pianos are regarded as absolutely perfect and the model piano of the world. The Chickerings during the past fifty years have made about 50,000 pianos, and it is no unusual thing to see a Chickerings 25 years in use, and in good playing order. What other piano has such a record for durability?

Three Great Facts.

When Paul wrote to the Christians at Thessalonica and spoke of the Gospel he had preached to them he said: "Our Gospel came not in word only but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." His point was that the Gospel they had received carried with itself evidence of its own truthfulness. "It came not in word only."

As did Paul, so the preacher of to-day can appeal directly to the "power" of the Gospel, as proving its truthfulness. This power is seen daily by the world, in three great facts which we will mention.

The first fact is conviction. By this is meant the impressions we have concerning truth, and our duties to follow and obey it. We cannot always tell at what particular time we receive them, but that all have them is a fact. They are not the result of teachings which we have received, though by instruction they are quickened and strengthened. Conviction is a universal fact. None need be convinced of the justice of right, or the injustice of wrong. This proves that a standard of right and wrong exists, to which all give assent. It is difficult to state precisely what that standard is, in words, but, in general terms, it may be said to forbid any action by which ourselves or our neighbors are injured, or the glory of God hindered. Sin hinders the glory of God, injures the man who indulges in it, and unfits him for his highest duty to his neighbor. Now, the Gospel in its ultimate principle, is simply war against sin. Church organizations and statements of creeds are outside matters. Christ came into the world to save sinners, and the very fact that men are impressed that sin is wrong and righteousness is right, and that they ought to forsake the one and follow the other is evidence that they stand convinced of the truth of Christ's mission.

And it must be remembered that the source of conviction is revealed in the Gospel. Christ said: "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you. And when He is come He will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment to come." This office of the Holy Spirit is unconditional and universal. All men are convicted by the truth, are made to feel that they are not as good as they ought to be, and that they ought to try to be better, because the Holy Spirit is abroad in the world. It is only by direct and persistent efforts that these impressions are withstood. And even then, in the still hours of repose, when there is no hum of business to disturb, no teacher near to speak, no bible at hand to instruct, no church near to remind, and no sound from the pulpit to warn, those convictions return, and, like white winged messengers from above, beckon the soul to a higher and purer life. Still another fact is that just in proportion as men place themselves under the influence of Christianity, do these convictions become definite and powerful.

Another fact is Conversion. By this is meant a change of heart. It has but little to do with the mental faculties. It neither destroys old ones nor creates new. It may stimulate those we possess naturally, quicken them into activity, increase their strength and enlarge their sphere of action by new motives, tastes and inspirations, but it neither changes their essential character nor adds to their number. Just as the lungs are the same whether breathing pure air or poison, the mental faculties are the same whether serving Christ or the devil. On the other hand, conversion is not a development. There is no such thing as a heart developing from the impurities of sin into the purities of holiness. Conversion is the imparting into the soul principles which were never before there. It makes a man a new creature: he is born again, animated by a new life, prompted by different motives and guided by a new agency. This is the standing miracle of the world. How it is that a man can pass from a life of the flesh to a life of the spirit; from the faith that rests in brother man to the faith that rests in the "first born of many brethren;" from a love and hope that are entangled among creatures of clay, to a love and hope that are busy among the immortal realities of heaven, cannot be explained, but can be experienced. Millions now in Heaven, and millions now on the earth, testify to this fact. They all sing—

"There is a spot to me more dear
Than earthly vale or mountain,
A spot for which affection's tear
Springs grateful from its fountain.
'Tis not where kindred spirits dwell,
Though that is almost Heaven,
But where I first my Savior found,
And felt my sins forgiven."

Another fact is the witness of the Holy Spirit. "For as many as are led by the Spirit, they are the sons of God.... Ye have received the Spirit of adoption whereby we cry 'Abba Father!'.... The Spirit itself also beareth witness with our spirits that we are the sons of God." The witness of the Spirit, therefore, is an inward impression on the soul whereby the Spirit of God directly witnesses to our spirits that we are His children. Here we have an unmistakable foundation of Christian experience, resting in the individual consciousness of each professor. It is to him, spiritually, what the hull of the ship is to the sailor in a storm. His vessel may be driven by the winds and tossed upon the waves; the storm-cloud may envelope him in midnight darkness; his sails turn to shreds; his cordage broken; spars lost and masts driven away; still he does not despair. Beneath him is the hull that can bid defiance to the waves, for her every beam and plank are firm, girt about and and bolted through and through with ribs and bolts of steel. So, in the storms of life. All else may go, but let the heart have within the assurance of a home in Heaven and despair is impossible.

Conviction, Conversion and the witness of the Spirit are the three great facts upon which the Church may to-day rest her appeal to the world. They are matters of observation and experience.

Editorial Correspondence.

Saturday morning February 24th, we stood on the deck of the steamer Hutchinson as it approached the wharf in Galveston harbor. It was a beautiful morning. The Gulf was calm and the bright sunlight, tempering the cool breeze, made the air delightful.

Once in the city, we find quarters at the Washington Hotel, and then hasten to find some one of our four ministers in this goodly city. We were soon at the door of Rev. F. von Schluembach. Our greeting was cordial, and after a good lunch we were soon in that brother's buggy, and on the way to see our several ministers and arrange for Sabbath's work.

Bros. Schluembach and Werner make up our German ministry in Galveston. The former has charge of a good-sized German congregation, which, years ago, was in the Methodist Episcopal Church South; then, as the result of some disagreement, floated into the Presbyterian church, and lastly, a few months since, the church became independent of all ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and is now known as St. Paul's Evangelical Church. At our last Southern German Conference the congregation requested Bishop Peck to appoint Bro. Schluembach their pastor. The appointment has proved a wise one, both for the congregation and for the cause of our Southern Methodism in this island city. The membership of the church has more than doubled, and the talent and genius of Bro. Schluembach are making an excellent impression for good upon this large German population. His ministry is like a new dispensation to the thoughtful Germans of Galveston, both intellectually and spiritually. Besides, this good German pastor is thoroughly American in his habits and instincts, and is also a prominent representative of the Young Men's Christian Association of America. His voice and influence are heard and felt in all the religious movements of the city.

In the west end of the city our German mission is located, and is under the care of Rev. F. Werner, a young man who combines in himself pastor and teacher. He has a good day school, and has gathered a small membership, with good prospects of rapid growth. Plans are already maturing for a new church. Here is a point where the Board of Church Extension ought to give a thousand dollars at once. It would all be returned to the treasury in a few years. Galveston has twelve thousand Germans, and among them are hundreds who are ready to receive the gospel from an acceptable Methodist minister.

The M. E. Church South has a small church and membership near the center of the city. For several years the Church has had but little prosperity, owing to troubles of long standing, involving some of the pastors and leading people. A prominent Southern Methodist brother of the city suggested to us, that in view of the bad odor attached to German Methodism in Galveston, the past few years, that it would be wise for both Methodist churches to withdraw until the present generation has passed away. The suggestion surprised us and we were at a loss to account for it. No, no, true Methodism knows no retreat. If the past has had its blunders and unworthy leaders, let the present and future be free from blunders and let both Methodisms see that its representatives are true, and strong and pure.

Sunday was a busy day. We have two other churches in the city, in which worship large and intelligent colored congregations. They are two miles apart. The forenoon was given half and half to the Sunday-schools in each. In the afternoon we preached in Wesley Chapel, presided over by Rev. Jesse Shackelford. Of this pastor it is not too much to say, that he is loved and respected by all who know him. His congregation is engaged in a very important church enterprise. Its present poor church building is soon to give place to a very fine frame church. The location is good, being in one of the best parts of the city, corner of Avenue I and twenty-eight street. The church building was bought from the Presbyterian church of the city, and has been moved to our lots, and will be ready for dedication in a few weeks. It will be a splendid property, worth five or six thousand dollars. The church gave a supper Saturday night and cleared nearly a hundred dollars. The Board of Church extension has given loans and donations to the amount of one thousand dollars. It is money well spent.

Sunday night we preached at the East Church, as it is called, Rev. Paul Douglas pastor. This is our first and strongest church in Galveston. The singing was good, under the leadership of a trained choir. Bro. Douglas is a systematic Methodist preacher. He has organized classes among the young people, for religious instruction since Conference, and already there have been conversions.

On Monday night we spoke again at Wesley Chapel and on Tuesday night at East Church again.

The SOUTHWESTERN is popular among our people of Galveston. The East Church congregation has sixty-eight subscribers, and Wesley Chapel thirty-six. Our Galveston lists foot up one hundred and fifteen. This is a truly grand record. What city of the size in the Southwest can excel this?

Yesterday we enjoyed a pleasant interview with Dr. I. G. John, Editor of the Galveston Christian Advocate. He makes an excellent paper. It is a tower of strength against all kinds of public sins. A little more recognition of the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Texas, in its columns, would add to its representative character and value.

To-day, we spent a very delightful hour with Dr. Shepherd, the popular and eloquent pastor of St. John's M. E. Church South. The Doctor believes heartily in fraternity, and looks forward to the day, when organic union shall be feasible.

This visit to Galveston has given us a new interest in our Galveston churches. May their power for Christ be multiplied. To-morrow we go to Houston.

Chautauqua Meetings for 1877.

We are informed by Dr. Vincent that the Chautauqua series of educational meetings for 1877, will open on Saturday, August 4, at eleven o'clock, and close on Thursday evening, August 23. The "Reform Council" and the "Church Congress" will last from Saturday, August 4, to the following Tuesday; the "Sunday-school Assembly" from Tuesday, August 7, to Tuesday, August 21; the "Scientific Conference" opening on Saturday, August 18,—three days before the adjournment of the "Sunday-school Assembly"—will close on Thursday evening, August 23. The whole series of meetings will be the best ever held at Chautauqua. The following are named among the speakers for 1877: Dr. R. S. Storrs, Dr. W. M. Taylor, Rev. Joseph Cook, Dr. Deems, John B. Gough, etc.

About 30,000 cattle were driven in droves from Texas, during 1876. Over half passed through Fort Worth.

Mission Work in Mexico.

The recent visit of Dr. Butler, Superintendent of our Mission in Mexico, will not allow the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN to forget that our Church already has a hold upon this country, and that God is using Methodism as one of the means for the emancipation and salvation of this long-oppressed people.

Probably a few facts, showing the actual progress of the work in this part of the field, will interest those who love to see our blessed Gospel triumphing.

Within the last year the first evangelical sermon was preached in Guanajuato, and since that time the work has made constant advancement. Many have cast aside their idols, and entirely broken with the Church of Rome; hundreds have read our tracts and Bibles, and for miles around the city the truth has made itself felt.

Of course the new-born Church meets with all classes of opposition and persecution, but God has thrown over us the broad shield of his protection and we are safe, and the work advances. The government stands by the Constitution of 1857 and gives us the protection of the law, and if it still continues to do so, our Church will soon become a power for the renovation of Mexico. Neither are we doomed to labor without seeing the results of our toil, for already the fruit is being seen in what we can believe to be the conversion of souls. Christmas day we celebrated for the third time in Guanajuato the Lord's supper, and about sixty persons partook of the bread and wine, representing the body and blood of Christ. This was after three weeks of teaching with regard to the nature and real significance of this sacrament. Over thirty persons have given their names, and will be taken into full membership in the Church.

Last night, after two very interesting sermons, and the baptism of a young man who was dissatisfied with his baptism by the Church of Rome, and who is studying for a preacher, we received ten persons into full membership. Others will be received next Sabbath.

The reception was very impressive; the Spirit of God working upon hearts, and moving many to tears through the influence of the Word. Our faith increases all the time, and we have seen that the Gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of even Mexicans.

From all appearances the war is entirely over. The arms of Gen. Diaz are everywhere triumphant, and the most of the "liberals" are full of hopes for the future; but I fear they base their hopes on the wrong principles. The religion of Jesus is the only hope of Mexico, and never can this country advance until the Catholic Church is entirely overthrown. Emilio Castelar well says, that "Catholic nations must get another religion than Catholicism or perish." There is but one true religion.

"The Men to Save Africa."

MR. EDITOR:—I notice in your issue of Feb. 22d, an article under the caption "The men to save Africa." I confess to some surprise that a man of the apparent ability of the writer should treat so important a subject with such flippant superficiality. While I may not feel it my duty to go as a missionary to Africa, yet I feel that the call for men and means to evangelize Africa comes with more force to me, as a colored man, than it can to a man of any other race.

Africa has stronger claims upon the children of Africa's ancestors than she can have upon any other race of men.

While it is true, therefore, that we are "Africo-Americans," it is also true that we are the descendants of African ancestors. Africa is to us "Fatherland," and we are wanting in the essential elements of a true and noble manhood if our hearts are not drawn out toward her as the hearts of no other class of men can be, by those racial instincts that hold together every other race of men. Although we are removed some six or seven generations from Africa, the tropical element still lurks in our blood, and, say what we may to the contrary, we can stand the tropical climate better than the Anglo-Saxon.

It is to be hoped that the writer, who doubtless has positive views on the subject, will give us his opinions and the reasons upon which they are based. CUSHITE.

Central Tennessee College.

This school, under the patronage of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, is located in Nashville, Tennessee. It is in its eleventh school year. The college, preparatory, theological, medical and normal departments are now organized. On the 23d ult. the closing exercises of the first session of the medical department took place. The department has been under the superintendance of Dr. G. W. Hubbard, with able assistants. The examination proved that the freedmen can master the theoretical part of the profession admirably. One of the class, having practiced for three years and having passed a satisfactory examination in the entire course of study, received the degree of Doctor of Medicine. There is a good prospect for a large increase of the number of students in this department the next session. The value of well trained physicians among the colored people is felt in many places to be a necessity, which must be met, next to the school teacher and preacher. This school proposes to meet this necessity. It is also designed to impart needed medical training to some of the missionaries to Africa, as a knowledge of medicine has been found exceedingly valuable to missionaries in that field. The second session of the Medical Department begins on the first Monday in October next.

Book Committee Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Committee was held in the room of the Mission Board at 805 Broadway, New York, commencing at 10 a. m., Feb. 14, and closing at 3 p. m., Feb. 16. All the members were present at the opening of the sessions and remained to the closing hour. Bishop Harris and Bishop Peck were in attendance.

Full reports of the Eastern and Western publishing houses were before the committe, and a thorough examination was made into the condition and prospects of each periodical, and the profit or loss at each Depository. A retrenchment of thousands of dollars, in the expenses of the Concern has been affected, yet not so as to lessen the material aid allowed the periodicals. The estimated value of real estate has been reduced $146,000.

The vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Revels, as Editor of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, was filled, at the first ballot, by the election of Rev. J. C. Hartzell, B. D., who had fifteen out of eighteen votes—three being blanks.

A committee was appointed to draft resolutions respecting the death of Bishop Janes. An appropriate minute was put upon the journal of the committe.

The salaries of the Bishops and General Conference officers were ordered to be published by the chairman and secretary, and will appear hereafter within a few days. The official residence of the editor of the Repository and his office, were located at Cincinnati.

The agents were instructed to require a settlement of accounts due at the Annual Conferences by cash or note at ninety days, and if such notes be unpaid at maturity, all further credit shall be refused.

The judgment of the Book Committee was declared—that the pressure of the times requires severe retrenchment and economy in every department over which the agents have control; and that they were pleased to observe that the agents have already begun a systematic reduction of expenses which should be continued wherever practicable.

The question of premiums was discussed largely, and finally laid on the table. A neat copy of Dr. Fowler's memorial sermon on Bishop Janes, illustrated by likenesses of the Bishop, in his early and mature life, were presented to each of the Committee, by Mr. J. B. Cornell, at whose expense it was published.

The presence of all the editors, from the Center, West and South, with one or two exceptions, with the eighteen members of the Book Committee, and two of the Bishops made a goodly company whose association in counsel for a few days, will be productive of good to the publishing interests of the Church.

The report of the Book Committee to the annual Conferences, will give a fuller statement of what is here briefly summarized, by the direction of the Committee to the Secretary. The place and hour of the next annual meeting was fixed at Cincinnati, O., at 10 a. m., the second Wednesday of February 1878. L. C. MATLACK.

Rev. Thos. Wadkins, Sutherland Springs, Texas, says: "Since I came to this work I have increased the preaching appointments from one to four. The revival spirit is now abroad among my people, and many are inquiring the way of salvation. We thank the Lord for his goodness."

Dr. J. Braden, Nashville, Tenn. writes: "The religious interest still continues in Central Tennessee College. There have been several conversions since I last wrote. The Young Men's Christian Association here is looking toward working for the salvation of the colored people. The plan is to hold meetings in the colored churches, in co-operation with the pastors. This is an important movement."

Rev. L. R. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., says: "The Conference year begins on this work with bright prospects. I have already had twenty accessions to the church. My people need a new house of worship. On last Sabbath we commenced the work of raising the money for the purpose, and one hundred dollars was contributed, which encourages us greatly. We are making up a good list of subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN in addition to those already sent in."

Rev. G. Brooks, Yazoo City, Miss. says: "I am safe at my post and busily engaged organizing my work.

I have a large congregation, and find the people of Yazoo City energetic and intelligent. A fraternal spirit seems to pervade both races. Our church building is old, but the ladies have undertaken the work of having a new church built, and are determined to have it completed this year. I expect to send a list of subscribers soon."

Rev. B. F. Smith, Hallettsville, Texas, says: "We have a very interesting series of meetings in progress. There have been several conversions, and the altar is crowded with penitents. The Lord is moving the hearts of his people. Pray for us. We have a large Sabbath School. I expect to fulfil my pledge in regard to subscribers.

Rev. A. Peebles, Enterprise, Miss. says: "I entered upon my work under rather discouraging circumstances. The church was rather disorganized, and the people disheartened. But I am thankful to say that I think we can already see the beginning of better times, we want all of our brethren in Mississippi Conference to pray for us."

Rev. B. H. Johnson, Gallatin, Tenn., write: "Our revival is still in progress. We have had ten conversions and forty accessions in past ten days. Our public services and social meetings are well attended, and our collections good. We are expecting a more abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and ask our brethren to pray for us."

Rev. J. Hayward, Donaldsville, La., says: "Our Church is making good spiritual progress, and our Sabbath-school now numbers fifty-five scholars. I have just visited a sister who seems near the cold Jordan of death. She was converted and received by me in the Church in 1855, and has ever since kept the faith, and is joyfully awaiting the coming of her Lord."

Rev. J. M. Pickett, Lebanon, Tenn., writes: "We have just closed a three weeks protracted meeting. There were seventeen conversions and twenty-one accessions to the Church, backsliders were reclaimed and believers strengthened in faith and love. I was favored in the matter of assistance, for this place is famous for the number of its preachers."

Rev. J. Johnson, Goliad, Texas, encloses subscriptions for the SOUTHWESTERN and adds; "Presiding Elder Gregory has visited us and held our first quarterly meeting for the year. The services were largely attended, and were very impressive. On Saturday night we had "general Class," and on Sabbath afternoon at 4 o'clock the Eucharist was administered to a great number of persons. At the close of the services on an invitation being given, serveral persons came forward to the altar desiring the prayers of the church. Liberal benevolent collection were taken."

Rev. D. Gregory writes from Victoria, Texas, "I am now making my first round on my district. I find the preachers all at work, and in good spirits. With but few exceptions I find Sunday schools in all of the charges. I encourage the brethren to organize schools where five children can be gathered. I receive a christian greeting everywhere I go, and this hospitable people certainly must prosper, for the good book tells us that the liberal soul shall be made fat."

Miss Evelina Reid, Columbus, Texas, writes: "I am a Sabbath school-teacher, and I am glad to say we have a good Sabbath-school, and that it is doing very well. Our beloved pastor, Rev. Jas. Henderson, is now giving us a course of interesting lectures. We thank the good Lord for sending us a minister who feels that he is sent to the Sabbath-school, children as well as to the Church folks.

SCRIPTURE LESSON for MARCH 18.

THE SPIRIT OF ELISHA.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"They said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

TOPIC.—"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."

HOME READINGS.

Monday—Gen. 41: 15-44.
Tuesday—Ex. 35: 20-35.
Wednesday—Num. 24: 1-25.
Thursday—Luke 2: 25-38.
Friday—Acts 6: 1-15.
Saturday—Acts 9: 1-31.
Sunday—I Cor. 3: 1-23.

Took up, also, the mantle of Elijah. The mantle had fallen at his feet, as a sign that the double portion for which he had asked, had fallen on himself. For nine years he had served for this mantle. When first it was thrown upon his shoulders, as a token that ultimately it was to be his, he was a farmer, plowing behind twelve yoke of oxen, and he with the twelfth. 1 K. 19: 19. Small time was then given him for decision, as to whether he would take up the self-denying position of a prophet's servant, or whether he would continue in the farmer's life of comfort. Without waiting for a reply, the swift-footed Elijah strode on. If Elisha would take the position, he must run for it. In those few seconds, how great a struggle must have taken place! Twelve yoke of oxen indicate that he was a farmer of some means. He had something to leave behind. But the Lord knew the temper of the man before he commanded Elijah to anoint him. The prophet was not out of sight before his mind was made up. He ran after him, and only filially asked the privilege of kissing his father and his mother before he left them, it might be forever. He went back, slew the yoke of oxen that he had been following, boiled their flesh over a fire made from the plow they pulled and the yoke they wore, symbollically to show how entirely he had given up his old calling for the new one, made a feast for those who had been laboring with him, and was ready to minister unto Elijah. Would that all might as promptly and as irrevocably decide to follow Christ, as Elisha did to follow Elijah!

Smote the waters. This, so far as the record shows, was his first and only use of the mantle. He made no fetish of it. He did not ascribe to it powers more wonderful than it actually possessed. To him it was only a mantle—even though it had been worn by Elijah. It was only a symbol that had been granted to him of a power which was not vested in the mantle, but in himself.

Urged him till he was ashamed. Ashamed to refuse them any longer. They were ardent at the idea of finding Elijah or his dead body—felt sure they could do it. Send. The best way sometimes is, to let the head-strong have their own way. Some only will learn from experience. Sought three days, but found him not. Experience is a teacher who never fails to make her pupils pay the full price of every lesson. Three days of weary climbing, and no result. They had their labor for their pains. It took them three days to learn that Elisha knew better than they. It was a fatigued, dejected, chagrined band of disciples that wended their way back to Jericho. Did not say unto you, Go not? Short rebukes sometimes are the most severe. The censure upon them was for their lack of faith in him. They had, of themselves, declared that the spirit of Elijah was upon him, but had in consistently disregarded his injunctions—as they would never have done with regard to the word of Elijah. But their search at least accomplished one good—it corroborated the wonderful facts of Elijah's ascension. If his body had been found, the materialists of that age would very easily have accounted for his death—he was caught in a whirlwind, and dashed to pieces on the rocks. Three days of faithful but fruitless exploration carried conviction of the truth of the reality of the ascension wherever the facts were told.

The water is naught (bad), and the ground barren. There are some draw-backs to every locality. In this one, the effect of the water from the spring which irrigated the plain, was that it was apt to make the land "miscarry;" crops were uncertain. The soil was not absolutely barren, but so affected by the brackish water, that no fruitage could be depended upon. Bring me a new cruse. The miracle was solicited. In all probability, it had not occurred to the chief men that the spring could be cured. Christ's first miracle was that of turning water into wine—Elisha's, that of turning bad water into good. Both were to add to domestic happiness. Put salt therein. Salt is not exactly the chemical agent men would select to make waters taste better. It would add to their unpalatable character, rather than take from it. It was therefore used only as a symbol. It is employed to preserve things from corruption, and so was thrown in as a sign that henceforth there should be no more corruption in those waters.

Shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. Life instead of death; beauty instead of corruption; fruitfulness instead of barrenness. Such is the miracle of regeneration, in nature or in spirit. The human heart, unregenerated, is a fountain of bitter waters causing death, and destroying all good fruitage; but, cured by the word of the Lord, there flows forth from it waters that vivify and bless, and help to fill the world with bud and blossom and fruit.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, that the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, bilious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Information Wanted.

HAWKINS, WOOD CO., TEXAS, February 10, 1877.

I desire to know the whereabouts of my brothers, sisters and mother. When last heard of they were in Wilcox county, Alabama. The names of my brothers are Peter and Evans; of my sisters are Belsora, Tillar and Mary Ann; my mother's name is Silvia. When we were separated they belonged to a Mr. McDole, and I to Mr. Wm. Hunter. Any person knowing the whereabouts of any of them will confer a lasting favor by notifying me or calling their attention to this notice. With hope, I await for tidings.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, Rochester N. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine. O. S. BISLEY,

De Kalb Street, Lawrence, N. Y.

January 8, 1877.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2 50 per Bottle, or Three Bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address, CRADDOCK & Co., 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia.

TO-MORROW.

The shadow of to-morrow falls
Across our best to-day;
It marks the face with lines of care,
And steals our joys away;
It stints the sweets of daily bread,
And mocks us when we pray.

It glides with stealthy steps among
The violets, dewy faces,
Which lift above the frosted earth
Such sweet and tender graces,
And fancy sees them withering
In all the olden places.

It pours into the nectar's cup
A drop of poisonous gall;
It folds the gayest robes beneath
A dark funereal pall,
And where our love is most secure,
Its blight is sure to fall.

It frets away the finest edge
Of pleasure and content,
And brings to every feast we spread
Its bitter supplement;
With all the hopes of glad to-day,
To-morrow's fears are blent.

To-morrow! ay we look in vain
To see its promised light,
'Tis always just a step beyond
The darkness of to-night,
And never yet have mortal eyes
Been gladdened with the sight.

Yet many, burdened with to-day,
Are hoping for relief
Among its unknown legacies,
From want and fear and grief,
And bless the solace which they find
In fallacy so brief.

—Son of the Soil.

The Duty of a Woman to be a Lady.

Wildness is a thing which girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost and found. No art can restore to the grape its bloom. Familiarity without love, without confidence, without regard, is destructive to all that makes woman exalting and ennobling.

"The world is wide, these things are small;
They may be nothing, but they are all."

Nothing! It is the duty of a woman to be a lady. Good-breeding is good sense. Bad manners in woman is immorality. Awkwardness may be ineradicable. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All cannot be condoned, and do not banish man or woman from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking and aggressive coarseness of demeanor may be reckoned as a State prison offence, and certainly merits that mild form of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Women are the umpires of society. It is they to whom all mooted points should be referred. To be a lady is more than to be a prince. A lady is always in her right inalienably worthy of respect. To a lady, prince and peasant alike bow. Do not be restrained. Do not have impulses that need restraint. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently. Be such that you confer honor. Carry yourself so loftily that men shall look up to you for reward, not at you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of man toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained into propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when a woman fails in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in sentiment, in delicacy, in kindness, she should be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.—Gail Hamilton.

Luther's Snow Song.

On a cold, dark night, when the wind was blowing hard and the snow was falling fast, Conrad, a worthy citizen of a little town in Germany, sat playing his flute, while Ursula, his wife, was preparing supper. They heard a sweet voice singing outside:

"Foxes to their holes have gone,
Every bird unto its nest;
But I wander here alone,
And for me there is no rest."

Tears filled the good man's eyes as he said, "What a fine sweet voice! What a pity it should be spoiled by being tried in such weather."

"I think it is the voice of a child. Let us open the door and see," said his wife, who had lost a little boy not long before, and whose heart was open to take pity on the little wanderer.

Conrad opened the door, and saw a ragged child, who said:

"Charity, good sir, for Christ's sake!"

"Come in, my little one," said he. "You shall rest with me for the night."

The boy said, "Thank God," and entered. The heat of the room made him faint, but Ursula's kind care soon revived him. They gave him some supper, and then he told them that he was the son of a poor miner, and wanted to be a scholar. He wandered about and sang, and lived on the money people gave him. His kind friends would not let him talk much, but sent him to bed. When he was asleep, they looked upon him, and were so pleased with his pleasant countenance that they determined to keep him, if he was willing. In the morning he was only too glad to remain with them.

They sent him to school, and afterwards he went into the monastery. There one day he found a Bible, which he read, and learned the way of life. The sweet voice of the little singer became the strong echo of the good news—"Justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Conrad and Ursula, when they took that little street singer into their house, little thought that they were nourishing the great champion of the Reformation. The poor child was Martin Luther. "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers."

Don't Scold.

Of all the disagreeable and useless habits the world was ever troubled with, scolding is the most annoying. To hear a saw filled, to hear a steamboat whistle, to hear a peacock scream or hear an Indian yell, is music compared with it. Since we were a child we have always felt a mortal abhorrence of scolding. If we had been scolded as some children are, we know not as we should have been good for anything. Our sensitive spirit would have rebelled itself into a hateful, discordant thing. It is no wonder many children are bad. The good is scolded out of them. It is stunned or killed by early frost or cold, icy scolding. What a frost is to spring buds, scolding is all the best in a child's heart. Scolding folks at home! How miserable! Let all the powers that be wage a war of kindness on all the scolders that they may be overcome with a better spirit.

House and Farm.

Robbing the Soil.

Few farmers consider that each crop that is grown and removed from the soil has taken away so much strength and virtue from it; that in the stalk and kernel is found the concentrated richness that was in the ground until transformed by the mysterious ways of nature in its transformation. Nature asks no aid from the husbandman, neither will it quietly brook being plundered, but instead, following each demand made upon it in way of a crop, it is found reduced and worn, and will not again attain to its former merit until there is restored to it equally and in proportion as it has been taken from it.

Rotation in crops is demonstrated as being not only best, but demanded; the continual growing and gathering from the same field a harvest of the same or kindred product, will in due time deprive the soil in that field of the ability to produce that especial article, as it has taken from the soil all that is necessary for the successful production of that crop, and either fertilizers must be supplied, or the field will become wholly worthless, save for some other and entirely different kind of product. When crops fail of themselves, the failure can, as a rule, be traced to the neglect of men, and not the defect of nature, or mistake of the Creator. The soil is provided in a general state of richness; if continual demands are made upon it to produce, and no return offered in way of remedies for its degenerating tendency, the outcome will be a thin crop from an exhausted soil.

The principal products of the farm are of that class that are employed in feeding the great family of consumers, and consequently it is removed in bulk from the soil, and but a minimum portion of it remains to enrich the ground for another season; the stalks and straw are lost to it, and another robbery committed. Taking from the soil these vital principles and making no return for them, is reducing each year the value of the farm per acre, in dollars and cents.

This need not be, as the product from the soil taken and transformed into other conditions, such as compost and manure, if returned to the fields, will restore to the soil its strength, and keep it ever in condition to respond to the demands made by succeeding crops.—Factory and Farm.

Diversified Farming.

The Western Farmer advances the following cogent arguments, in favor of diversified farming which we earnestly endorse and recommend to the consideration of every farmer in the country:

1. Because, under the present system, the market is overstocked with some products, and the price is correspondingly low, while right here at our doors other farm products bring as much as in New York city, a great center of consumption and export. Diversity of cropping tends to equalize prices.

2. Because diversity of cropping means rotation, and under a system of rotation, larger crops can be produced each year, and the fertility of the soil will last much longer than when the same crop is sown year after year.

3. Because it is safer. He who stakes all upon a single crop merely buys a ticket in a good lottery. If everything proves favorable, he gets a good thing and a large sum of money all at once. But if the crop proves a poor one, he is in a correspondingly bad condition.

4. It distributes the labor, and the cash receipts also, more equally through the year. Under a judicious system, the farmer will first sow his wheat, then follow with oats barley, potatoes, roots, corn, beans, etc. He may get returns for wheat, barley and oats in August; for potatoes and beans in September and October. His hay, corn and root crops, will make the wool to sell in June, the pork to sell in November, the poultry to sell at the holidays, beef and mutton to sell in March and April, butter and eggs to sell almost the year round. Thus little bills can be paid as they become due, and the long credit system discontinued.

5. Another advantage will arise from fewer purchases at the grocery and a greater variety in the home fare.

Cotton Raising.

Will cotton pay at ten cents? Certainly it will; it paid at that price before the war and will do it now. But says some one, we can't make cotton at ten cents when we have to pay thirteen or fourteen cents for meat. Of course not, that is out of the qestion. No farmer can afford to make cotton at ten cents if he buys meat at any price; let him raise his own meat. If he can't do that he had better sell his farm and go at some business he knows something about. Says another, we can't make cotton at ante bellum prices, because our hands wont work like they did before the war. Very well; get rid of them then; and let him and his boys go to work on less land, plow deep and cultivate well, put manure on it, every bit he can get hold of or make, and he will get more cotton than he would off of a thousand acres of gullied hill sides scratched by a lot of lazy negroes. If farmers, instead of selling their cotton seed at a trifling price, would save it all and mix with the manure that is wasted about their stables and stock pens until they thoroughly ferment and decompose, then spread this mixture thick on thin cotton land, they would get three times as much for their seed, as by selling it. If New England farmers can import cotton seed meal from the South at from $30 to $40 per ton and English farmers at $50 to $60, and make money by using it, surely we of the South can use it to the best possible advantage when we have the raw material at hand on every farm.—Southern Farmer.

Plan Your Work and be Ready.

Winter after a successful season of sowing and harvesting is a welcome resting "spell" to the farmers; the long winter evenings give time for reflection upon the last season's labors, and thoughts, ideas and plans will be worked over in the mind, with the help of good agricultural papers and books for improvement of operations another season.

Definite plans in the mind and on paper will find the farmer ready to go ahead without hesitation when time for action arrives. This is the true way to forward work, no backward steps; plans are definite no lost time, no waiting; a satisfactory day's work, pleasant to both employer and his men.

Do all work that can be done through the winter that will advance the spring work and find you all in readiness on the opening of spring with no back work on your hands to interfere with immediate work in progress. Keep ahead of your work.—N. J. Agriculturist.

Wonders of Modern Science.

The perfect accuracy with which scientists are enabled to deduce the most minute particulars in their several departments, appears miraculous if we view it in the light of the early ages. Take for example the electro-magnetic telegraph—the greatest invention of the age. It is not a marvelous degree of accuracy which enables an operator to exactly locate a fracture in a submarine cable nearly three thousand miles long? Our venerable "clerk of the weather" has become so thoroughly familiar with those most wayward elements of nature that he can accurately predict their movements. He can set in Washington and fortell what the weathir will be in Florida or New York, as well as if several hundred miles did not intervene between him and the places named. And so in all departments of mordern science, what is required is the knowledge of certain signs. From these the scientists deduce accurate conclusions regardless of distance. A few fossils sent to the expert geologist enable him to accurately determine the rock-formation from which they were taken. He can describe it to you as perfect as if a cleft of it were lying on his table. So also the chemist can determine the constitution of the sun as accurately as if that luminary were not ninety-five million miles from his laboratory. The sun sends certain signs over the "infinitude of space" and the chemist classifies them by passing them through the spectroscope. Only the presence of certain substances could produce these solar signs. So also, in medical science, diseases have certain unmistakable signs, or symptoms, and by reason of this fact, Dr. Pierce, of the World's Dispensary, has been enabled to originate and perfect a system of determining, with the greatest accuracy, the nature of chronic diseases without seeing and personally examining his patients. He has spared neither pains nor expense to associate with himself, as the Faculty of the Worlds' Dispensary, a large number of medical gentlemen of rare attainments and skill—graduates from some of the most famous Medical Colleges and Universities of both Europe and America. By aid of Dr. Pierce's system of diagnosis, these physicians and surgeons annually treat, with the most gratifying success, many thousands of invalids without ever seeing them in person. In recognizing diseases without a personal examination of the patient they claim to possess no miraculous powers. They attain their knowledge of the patient's disease by the practical application of well established principles of modern science to the practice of medicine. And it is to the accuracy with which this system has endowed them that they owe their almost world-wide reputation for the skillful treatment of all lingering or chronic affections which has been attained through it, demonstrate the fact that diseases display certain phenomena, which being subjected to scientific analysis or synthesis, furnish abundant and unmistakable data to guide the judgment of the skillful practitioner aright in determining the nature of diseased conditions. The ample resources for treating lingering or chronic diseases, and the greatest skill, are thus placed within the easy reach of every invalid, however distant he or she may reside from the physicians making the treatment of such affections a specialty. The peculiarities of this scientific system of practice are fully explained in the Appendix of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser,"—a book of over nine hundred pages, which is so popular as to have reached a sale of almost one hundred thousand copies within a few months of its first publication. It is sent (post-paid) by the Author to any address, on receipt of one dollar and fifty cents. Address, R. V. Pierce, M. D., World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y.

STRENGTH FOR TO-DAY.

Strength for to-day is all that we need,
As there will never be a to-morrow;
For to-morrow will prove but another to-day,
With its measure of joy and sorrow.

Then why forecast the trials of life
With such sad and grave persistence,
And watch and wait for a crowd of ills
That as yet have no existence?

Strength for to day—what a precious boon
For the earnest souls who labor,
For the willing hands that minister
To the needy friend or neighbor.

Strength for to-day—that the weary hearts
In the battle for life may quail not;
As the eyes bedimmed with bitter tears,
In their search for light may fail not.

Strength for to-day on the downward track,
For the travelers near the valley
That up, far up on the other side,
Ere long they may safely rally.

Strength for to-day that our precious youth
May happily shun temptation,
And build from the rise to the set of sun
On a strong and sure foundation.

Strength for to-day in house and home
To practice forbearance sweetly.—
To scatter kind words and loving deeds,
Still trusting in God completely.

Strength for to-day is all that we need,
As there will never be a to-morrow;
For to-morrow will prove but another to-day
With its measure of joy and sorrow.

CALL TO THE MINISTRY.—NO. 2.

Having spoken of the personal evidence of a call to the ministry, in a former article, we now notice other signs of such a call. No one who is clearly convinced that he is moved by the Holy Ghost to preach should feel that he must make his own way into the sacred office. God, who has called, can open the door. The young man can afford to wait for other evidence than his own impressions, before he rushes into the work of the ministry. It is possible to be deceived by our own feelings and professions, hence these should not be relied on invariably without other evidence. This may be various. It may be in the young man himself. It may be that, notwithstanding his impressions that he is called to preach, that he is poorly qualified for the work. He may have such physical or mental peculiarities as will totally unfit him for his work. His religious experience may be defective, and his life irregular. His ideas of the teachings of the Bible may be imperfect or erroneous. He may have a very low estimate of the Bible as a book of religious experience, and he may have loose notions of the Christian life. It may be that these impressions of the call to preach spring from the cherished desire to be placed in so holy a calling. It is best for the young man to wait for the Lord to open the door which admits him into the vinyard. God will find no difficulty in this matter when he calls any one to work for Him. If the young man yields to the call and puts himself into positions where his adaptation to this work may be manifest, he will not have to wait long before there will be evidence coming to him from other sources than his own convictions that he ought to preach. If his exercises in the class-meeting or prayer-meeting are indicative of power with God, or with man, or are unusually interesting, exhibiting gifts for usefulness, some good brother or sister will tell him what is though of his call to the ministry. This may not be done after the first or second effort in public. It may be that the young man may attend these meeting for prayer and exhortation for months, or even years, and no one ever question him as to his call to preach. What is he to do? Work on, and wait. Perhaps he is doing all that God wants him to do in that way. If no one, in the Church, sees anything in him to indicate that God designs him to occupy a larger field of usefulness, then he should take it for granted that he can afford to wait. He is not to take it as absolutely settled that God has not called him, but if his convictions still remain as to his duty, he can still exercise his gifts as often as opportunity affords, and consult with some of the oldest and wisest of his brethren. Never let him think the people with whom he labors fail to appreciate him, and he must go round to the official members of the Church and urge them to bring his case before the Church and secure his license. He can better afford to trust God and wait than to assume this responsibility, when God has not called him. No one can have any clear views of the fearful responsibility of the ministry and be willing to assume its solemn duties without the clearest testimony that it is his duty to do so. To push his way into the ministerial office, over the protests of some of the best men in the Church, because the young man may have friends in the places of power who can secure the license for him, generally proves his total unfitness for the holy calling. There are men in the ministry who ought never to have received the authority from the Church, as they have never given any evidence that they were moved to preach, by any higher motives than the hope of honor, ease, position and bread. Let no young man be in a hurry to get into the ministry. The tendency of the age is to rush ahead, in church, in State, as well as in the race for wealth. Young men are apt to think that the world cannot get along without them. So, with little preparation, they enter life, and thousands fail in business, in the professions, in the ministry, because they have, with erroneous views of their own powers, and actuated by wrong motives, entered upon a course of life for which they were entirely unfitted. To make this mistake in reference to secular callings is a calamity. Lives are wasted in some positions that might have been eminently useful in others. But to make this mistake in regard to the ministry may be attended with disaster such as would make the stoutest heart shudder to contemplate. The young man can wait, as long as there is no voice speaking from the Church, calling him into the vinyard of the Lord. But let him work in the Sunday-school, prayer-meetings, class-meetings, revival meetings as he may have opportunity, and if he develops no gift that leads any one to suggest that he may be more useful in the ministry, he can generally conclude that God sees that he will be most useful in the Church as a faithful worker in the laity. This will not suit a class of young men that urge their plea to be put into the ministry, and who chafe under the requirements of the Church or grow sulky because their wishes are not gratified at once, and refuse to take any active part in church work because they cannot do so in the pulpit. But the church is generally the gainer by their silence.

If any young man who reads this feels that he is called to preach, let him work in the Sunday-school, in the prayer meeting and other meetings as occasion offers, and let him show a deep interest in the growth of the Church and salvation of souls, and, if his call is from Heaven, he may rest assured that God will give the church some intimation of His will in the case. He need not hurry—only to prepare by working and waiting.

The Mutual Education of the Races.

In the January number of the Methodist Quarterly Review is an able and significant article by Prof. Edward W. Blyden, of Liberia, Africa, entitled "Mohammedanism and Negro Race." The leading thought of this timely paper is the recorded observation of travelers, expressed by R. Bosworth Smith in these words:

"Christian travelers, with every wish to think otherwise, have remarked that the negro who accepts Mohammedanism acquires at once a sense of the dignity of human nature, not commonly found even among those who have been brought to accept Christianity."

The writer of the article accepts the truth of this statement, although, in our judgment, his own explanations refute it. Perhaps none would question the averment that the negroes who are Mohammedans actually do exhibit "a sense of the dignity of human nature not commonly found even among those who have been brought to accept Christianity." But to say that they acquire this higher sense of human worth "at once," on accepting Mohammedanism, is quite a different thing; and it is this proposition which we think the writer refutes, without seeming to notice that he does so. That we are not mistaken will appear from the following positions taken by the writer:

I. The difference to be explained he accounts for by "the difference in the conditions under which the systems"—i. e. Christianity and Islam—"came to those of the negro race who embraced the one or the other." * * * "When the religion"—of Mohammed—"was first introduced it found the people possessing and enjoying all the privileges of an untrammeled manhood." * * * "Christianity came to the negro as a slave, at least as a subject race in a foreign land."

II. "Another reason for the superior manliness and armour propre of negro Mohammedans may be found in the fact that, unlike their christian brethren, they have not been trained under the depressing influence of Aryan art." He maintains, with truth, that the painting and sculpture of the European whites represent the negro in a state of degredation, and therefore discourage and depress him.

III. A third cause of the effect the author finds in "the social and literary pressure which he has undergone. It is not too much to say that the popular literature of the Christian world, since the discovery of America, or at least for the last two hundred years, has been anti-negro."

IV. "Another very important element, which has given the Mohammedan negro the advantage over his Christian brother, is the more complete sympathy which has always existed between him and his foreign teacher."

These are decissive proofs of the proposition stated as we have put it, but not in the form quoted from R. Bosworth Smith: and they are all comprised in the effects of slavery on the white man and the negro.

But the assumption that there is anything in Islamism to give the negro a higher estimate of "the dignity of human nature," than he will derive from Christianity is utterly false. The religion of Mohammed stands and grows on the monstrous claim that this earth and Heaven, especially the latter, belong only to the followers of "the Prophet" and that "infidels" have no rights that Mussulmen are bound to respect. They are dogs to be devoured by sword and consigned to damnation. The "dignity" of Mussulmen is the contempt and damnation of other men, and these followers of the false prophet are the very demons now plundering and wasting the heart of Africa with the horrors of the slave trade, whom Christian nations are combining to expel.

But the depression of the negro in contact with Christian whites is a stubborn and wicked fact. It must be removed. Christianity demands its eradication: and the Christian world will not rest until it is removed.

A process of reciprocal education has already commenced and will go foward to completion. Forces are at work whereby the white man will be educated out of his caste feeling, and the colored man will be educated out of his servility. The Christian's ideas about the paternity of God, and the equality of men will do this work. The power of this world is in ideas. These Christian ideas, like God himself, are omnipotent. There is no uncertainty in the result. Let the colored man patiently and cheerfully wait God's time.

His welfare will come of humility not of assumption; of sound character and attainments, not of pretension and bluster; of honest work and self reliance, not of severe criticisms and office seeking. These are Christian qualities, which will assert his true manhood and make him felt for good. There are already among us colored men of this type and their number is increasing. These are the men who will come to the front, when pretenders have failed.

Prepare for Your Conference Examinations.

I want to urge upon those young men, who have in immediate view the itinerant work in our Southern Conferences, the imperative necessity for prompt effort in seeking to be prepared in the studies upon which they are required to pass a rigid examination, previous to being admitted. The Church has recently awoke to the humilitating fact that her vital interests have been seriously damaged by introducing into her ministry, an element absolutely unavailable. She is now forced to assert her unalterable decission against admitting any, who, on account of habitual indolence, or constitutional effeminacy, can never rise above mediocrity. Let the aspiring candidate heed this, and determine to subject himself to such judicious disipline as will wholly remove every obstacle in the way of his entrance into the coveted field. He should at the earliest moment endeavor to procure the necessary books, and then grapple with, and as far as practicable, master the contents of each. The temptation to procrastinate this duty should be met with a firm resistance. Yielding to it would be attended with incalculable mischief inasmuch as it would frustrate his plan, and perhaps completely defeat his laudable purpose. But aside from a jealous regard for his own reputation, a proper appreciation of the present and future weal of the multitudes to whom he proposes to minister, should operate as a powerful incentive to accelerate diligence in the task of preparation. Our people, especially the young, upon whom the blight of slavery has fallen with greatly diminished severity, are asking daily for an intelligent ministry, capable of faithfully dispensing to them the Word of life, and leading in every needful benevolent enterprise. Their hearts are beginning to throb with a more intense desire for a broader and deeper christian culture, and they demand such instrumentalities as will ensure its attainment in the shortest length of time. The candidate should keep this fact constantly before his eyes, and consider the mighty responsibility devolving upon him. This will beget in him an active, inquiring habit, if aught this side of the judgment can. Let him spurn the idea of packing a bundle of vain excuses up to the committee room, for if he can find an excuse for lack of time for study, he will, after awhile find another for his ignorance, and ultimately, he will find still another for his disgraceful failure, which, of course, follows as an inevitable sequence. Some will find it difficult to prepare thoroughly, owing to the peculiar circumstances which environ them. Let each one do his best, relying at the same time for help upon Him who hath said, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

D. W. HAYS.

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The Unattainable.

We strive ever for what is just beyond us, and we shall die without ever reaching it. We set out light-hearted at first and courageously divide and subdivide the distance between us and our goal.

When the first ardor of our pursuit has cooled a little, we pause to calculate what yet lies before us.

Our work which was at first done with boyant confidence, is now performed with the earnestness of one who feels his conflict a doubtful one.

This deepens again into the firm energy of despair, and we leave, looking back at the steps already gained, concerning ourselves only with the ever multiplying obstacles in our way.

We value most the unattained; and what charmed us yesterday, to-day we fling behind us, a worthless thing. But our ideal we never reach. We pine for something we do not and cannot possess; and which if we did, could never satisfy us. The intrinsic value of the thing comes not into the reckoning; it is the difficulty of attainment that gives it its value. The girl who risked and lost her life for the flower that grew on the brink of the Niagara, might have had a hundred sweeter and more beautiful, for the price of a single smile.

Did the great Webster dream that it would add lustre to his name to be the President of the greatest republic? He stooped very low to win that distinction, and when it slipped from his grasp, his great heart broke and he died.

And the same may be written of the "good and great Greeley."

Who of us could not tell of some secret longing of this sort, which possesses and urges us? We may wear the seeming of contentment, but the substance is far from us. We all have a hidden fire somewhere, into which we daily sprinkle incense to the unattainable.

Contentment! Poets have sung its praise, orators have spoken its eulogy, and divines commended it, but it would be a sad day for the world if contentment should become the common lot. For it is not more true, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," than that eternal restlessness is the price of progress.

Religion itself does not quench, but purifies and lightens it. Indeed our religion would be a tame thing without this out-streching of the soul after a higher, holier, and truer life.

Contentment in religion would make us sluggards in godliness. But with this restless aspiration toward the unattainable in holiness, such as David felt when he said—"My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God," there is activity, progress, and happiness.

It gives no rest while there is wrong to combat, or suffering to relieve, or souls to save. It makes toil better than repose and privation better than luxury. It makes our life a constant labor, it makes us sleep sweetly at its close, and prepares us for that rest that remaineth for the people of God.

CUSHITE.

The Best Way.

The distinguished Rowland Hill has said, "We can do more good by being good than in any other way." Let us remember this. It is not genius that we need, nor intellectual mastership, nor profound learning, nor skill in the use of apparatus, nor tact in communicating truth. These we must not despise. There is little danger of our doing so. But the Bible teaches that our great, deep, imperative, indispensible need is—character.

An Angel's Work.

A lady on an errand of charity came upon a group of noisy, dirty boys, playing ball in an alley. A pale boy of nine or ten years, very tidily dressed, sat on an old wheelbarrow, watching the game. In asking directions from this child she noticed that he was a hunch back, and apparently in very ill health.

He replied to the question, "If you will give me your hand, to help me up, I will show you Mrs. Lane's room. It is at the top of our house. Thank you. I can do almost anything but rise up alone. I help mother a good deal with the children. They are lovely boys—so straight—and they've got red cheeks and curly hair. But mother doesn't love them a bit better than she does me. They are very good to me; they never pull things away from me, nor push me down as bad boys in the street do sometimes. This is my house. Come in and look at them."

And opening a door, he asked, "May this lady just peep in one minute to see the children, mother?"

A pleasant woman appeared, wiping her hands on a towel, and said, smiling, "Poor, dear Allen is so proud of the children, he sometimes seems a little silly. Walk in."

The children were stout, rosy fellows of three and five years, and looked as if they could "push" almost anybody "down," if they tried. The appearance of their weak brother was a token for rejoicing.

"Now isn't this a beautiful home?" the poor child said, looking round proudly on the shining stove, the neat paper, and pictures on the wall.

"Poor, dear boy," said the woman, laying her hand on his head, "he doesn't know much about 'beautiful homes.' Everything is beautiful that he loves. He is so patient, and wise, and careful of me and the children that I don't know how I could have lived without his sympathy after his father's death. He's very feeble, and sometimes I'm afraid that he doesn't get all the care he needs—I have so much to do, and the other boys take so much of my time;" and she patted his thin cheek tenderly.

When the lady was ascending the attic stairs, her little guide, who was hobbling after her, stopped and said:

"I'll tell you a secret. She isn't my truly mother—but she doesn't know it! I mean she wouldn't know it if I hadn't been big enough to be at her wedding! She loves me just as well as Willie and Tom. And oh, she tells such beautiful things about God and heaven. She says that God will change this tired body of mine, and give me one like His own, by-and-by. She washes and irons all the time, but she's always pleasant. I can't go to church or Sunday-school because I'm so easy pushed over in a crowd; but she says our room is my church and Sunday-school and singing school and everything."

As the lady bade her new friend "Good-bye," he said, with the air of a hospitable patron, "You may come here any time you like to see the children. They say their prayers about seven o'clock, and they do look so lovely in their little white nightgowns!"

The lady looked at the boy's happy face and asked, "Do you remember your father?"

"O yes, ma'am," he replied, "it is only two years since that night. This is what he said—mother made me say it over and over, so as never to forget it—'Allen, be good to your mother as long as you live. You can never pay back her love to you. She is doing an angel's work, and your own mother in heaven is blessing her for it, and so will I, forever and ever. Love God and keep close to her."

The lady's eyes were filled with tears, and she, too, blessed and resolved to help this woman who was rearing this feeble boy with a love that almost made her forget he was not her own.

If there is one work on God's earth holy above all others, it is her's who takes the children of a dead mother to her heart with a love that almost veils the fact that they are not her own; and who makes them love her as a mother, without forgetting that One whom no child should be allowed to forget.

If the redeemed above get glimpses of earth, and the loved ones they left here, what benisons are hourly falling on those who have taken their places in desolate homes, and made them real homes again.

God smiles on her who, though not "a truly mother," is a mother still.—Ex.

A gentleman had a board put upon a part of his land, on which was written, "I will give this field to any one who is really contented." And when an applicant came he asked, "Are you contented?" The general answer was, "I am," and his reply invariably was, "Then what do you want with my field?"

The North India Conference.

This Conference of the M. E. Church met in Moradabad, India, January 3, 1877, Bishop Andrew presiding, and Rev. B. H. Badley Secretary. Tents were erected for the accommodation of the preachers and their families and all ate at a common table. It was a happy week for all. There were 37 American men and women; half a dozen lady missionaries, and eight ordained hindoos.

There had been a good increase during the year. At one point Bishop Andrews baptized 50 adults. It is twenty years since the work in India was organized by Dr. Butler. On Conference Sunday four native preachers were ordained Elders, and two Deacons. The following are the statistics and appointments:

A Near Relative.

A sick officer went to a mineral spring in Germany for the benefit of his health, but the hotel-keepers refused to admit him lest he should die in the house.

At the last hotel a gentleman came forward and said, "This officer is my near relative. He may have my bed, and I will sleep on the sofa."

The landlord consented, and the half-fainting man was carried to the gentleman's room. When he had rested a little, his first question was, "May I ask your name, my kind friend? How are you related to me?"

"Through the Lord Jesus Christ, for I have learned from Him that my neighbor is my brother."

General News Items.

The public debt was reduced during February over $2,000,000.

Word comes that the silk factories in France are suffering. The cause is attributed to the vigorous competition of the growing industry in the American States. It is, however, probably due in a great degree to the economy of the times.

The sentence of death passed upon "Bishop" John D. Lee, of Salt Lake City, for his participation in the Mountain Meadow massacre, has been confirmed by the Supreme Court of the Territory, and the Courts below have been directed to set a day for his execution.

The bill for compulsory education has passed the Ohio legislature. The law will take effect on the first of next September, and compels all children in the State, between eight and fourteen years of age, to attend school at least twelve weeks in each year, not less than six weeks of such attendance to be consecutive.

Grandmotherly old Boston led off with a spelling match about a year ago, and in a few weeks the whole country was spelling down. This time a new custom is to be set at Music Hall—a public singing match. Singing bees are popular in Germany and England, and are vastly more entertaining than spelling matches.

President William S. Clark, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, writes from Japan that he has been permitted to give religious instruction in the institution with which he is temporarily connected, that there is a deep interest in Christianity among the Japanese students, and that he may decide to remain in Japan as a missionary.

A fire at East St. Louis, Feb. 20, burnt up a dozen frame houses, and the flames being carried by a strong wind toward the bridge, that structure took fire and some 300 feet of the carriage-approach, which is largely of wood, was destroyed, and some of the iron work will have to be replaced. Loss to Bridge Company about $50,000.

Minneapolis ground and shipped, during 1876, a million barrels of flour, and cut 200 million feet of lumber. Kansas City shows an increase of 30 per cent. in her bank clearings, marketed 6,000,000 bushels of corn and 1,800,000 of wheat, about 190,000 head of cattle, 150,000 hogs and 6,000 sheep, there being a large increase in all these respects.

Attention having been drawn to the absence from the seat of government of several of the foreign ministers accredited to Washington, and who persistently reside in New York, it is rumored that the Secretary of State is about to call the attion of their governments to their constant absence, and to request instructions to the ministers to be at their posts, or that others may be appointed who will remain at the seat of government.

Two colored students from the Barbadoes graduated at the Philadelphia Divinity School not long since, one of whom is now pastor of a church in New York, and the other is at the head of the Episcopal Theological School, Port-au-Prince, Hayti. While in the school, on one occasion, the latter read in public the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah in eight languages.

A newspaper paragraph states that the Pope has become very much altered. His feet do not carry him any longer. His face, formerly fresh and of a jovial expression, is now shrunk and of a listlest aspect. He rarely leaves his bed-room, and receives visitors there between five and seven in the afternoon, more reclining than sitting in an arm chair. He has a large table before him, on which a few candles only are placed; between them there stands a crucifix. His memory is failing him very much in matters of quite recent occurrence, though he remembers well the things of a long time past. Many doubt whether he will complete his eighty-fifth year.

Miss Mary Dancer, who died in New York a few days ago, gave to charitable objects over four-fifths of the large property acquired by Mathias Dancer, gambler. Mary is said to have been a young lady of rare beauty of character, of a devotional bent of mind, and almost a religious recluse. During her life she gave much to charities, and by her will, drawn just before her death, divided $335,000 among thirty-one religious, benevolent and charitable societies. After disposing of $183,000 to relatives and friends, the American Female Guardian Society, the Home for Incurables, the Children's Aid Society, the New York City Mission, the Tract Society, the Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society, the American Seaman's Friend Society, the New York Society for the Relief of the Raptured and Crippled, the American Bible Society and the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school Union get $20,000 each.

THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1877.

1000 MORE.

We need, and must have, One Thousand more Subscribers for the "Southwestern" to pay its bills for 1877. Will the 500 Methodist Preachers in the Southwest, who are now acting as our agents, not give us these during the next thirty days? It can be done, it must be done. Without these your paper is embarrassed, but with them we go through the year easily. Act promptly and send the names and money to Nelson & Phillips, Lock Box B, New Orleans. Subscriptions may begin at any time, and the paper will be sent as long as paid for. Two Dollars a year, or four cents a week pays for the "Southwestern."

Special Notice.

Subscriptions to the SOUTHWESTERN may begin at any time and the paper will be sent so long as paid for. Tell your people this and see how many new subscribers you can get at once.

The Editor, Rev. J. C Hartzell, now in Texas, writes that he is to be at Bryan March 16, Dallas 18, Fort Worth 19, Dallas again 20, Dennison 21, Lawrence 23, Marshall 25, Jefferson 26, Marshall again 27 and on April 1 at Shreveport, La.

The Post-office address of Rev. L. Bradford is 189 Carondelet St., New Orleans, La.

Rev. J. N. Breeze, of Third Church Houston, Texas, although building a new Church, says his people will take thirty SOUTHWESTERNS and pay for them.

Rev. Jeremiah Smith, of Harrisburg, Texas, says he learned to read his first scripture text out of the old New Orleans Advocate, and the SOUTHWESTERN is to him next to the Bible.

Persons wishing to procure copies of Dr. McCarty's books—the "Black Horse and Carryall," and "Inside the Gates"—will find them on sale at Robert J. Harpe's book store, at 110 Camp street.

Rev. J. S. Whitaker and Brother Gabriel Todd, of Second Church, Houston, propose to have fifty SOUTHWESTERNS in their Church every week. Two week's more hard work and they will succeed. Already $27 of the cash has been sent.

Galveston takes one hundred and fifteen SOUTHWESTERNS. Pastors Shackleford and Douglass understand how much good their Church paper among their people will do. They send $35 cash, and all the rest to be sent within thirty days.

Rev. J. F. Cozier and Bro. Frank Vance, of First Church, Houston, Texas, propose to put their SOUTHWESTERN list to one hundred cash subscribers within thirty days. They have made a grand beginning and will succeed. They challenge any single church in the South. Who will compete with them? They send $62 95 cash and the rest is soon to follow.

Death of Dr. A. C. McDonald.

A telegram from Rev. J. M. Shumpert, at Holly Springs, Miss., conveys to us the sad intelligence that Rev. Albert C. McDonald, D. D., died at three o'clock on Saturday morning, the 10th inst.

Bro. McDonald was from Iowa, we think a native of that State. He graduated from Indiana Asbury University in 1852, and at once entered the active work of the ministry. At the close of the war he responded to the call of the Church for laborers among the recently emancipated colored people of the South, and in that work, first in this State, and afterward in Mississippi, he has faithfully and earnestly labored until death. Of the man—his devotion to the work of the Master—of his connection with Shaw University and other enterprises of the Church—of his learning, piety, and christian zeal and integrity, we have not the time now to speak. In his death the colored people have lost a faithful friend and the cause of Christ an able and effective minister. At the time of his death he was Presiding Elder of the Okolona District.

Editorial Correspondence.

Houston, fifty miles north of Galveston, is the railroad center of Texas. It is a city of over twenty thousand people. Its churches, schools, other public buildings, street railroads, etc., are creditable. It rivals and bids fair to surpass any city in Texas in commercial importance. New Orleans is losing immensely in commerce by not having railroad communication with Texas through Houston. It is to be hoped that some of the schemes now on foot to build the railroad from New Orleans to the Texas line will succeed.

We have four churches in Houston. Our German people have recently dedicated a beautiful chapel The pastor, Rev. Mr. Bruck, is a diligent and earnest worker, and there is every prospect for a rapid increase in his congregation and membership.

Our three other churches are located in different parts of the city and are attended by our people of color. First Church, Rev. J. F. Cozier pastor, is a strong, influential body of people. The Sabbath school enrolls two hundred and seventy scholars, and, under the direction of Mr. Frank Vance as superintendent, is doing good work. On Sunday morning we had a delightful half hour with this school. The Berean lessons are used, a teacher's meeting, under the direction of the pastor, is held weekly, and nearly every teacher takes the SOUTHWESTERN. We met the public congregation of this Church at 3 o'clock on Sabbath, and, after preaching, asked for subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN. The pastor had already made a good beginning, and the list was run up to over sixty. A good portion of these came forward and paid, and the remainder promised the money in a few days. The pastor and brethren propose to put the list to one hundred. Where is the Church, North or South, which will surpass this?

Second Church, Rev. J. S. Whitaker pastor, is not so large but is equally enthusiastic. The Church is engaged in building a plain but commodious edifice, to cost about four thousand dollars. We worshipped with this Church Sunday night in company with Presiding Elder Molloy. On asking for subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN, forty-two came forward and gave their names, and either paid or promised to pay in a few days. Here we met Brother Todd, Lay delegate to our last General Conference, and an earnest worker.

Third Church, Rev. J. N. Breeze pastor, has nearly finished a neat church building, capable of seating four hundred people. The pastor has a large school during the week. We met and preached to this church last Friday night. Nearly thirty subscribers were obtained.

Our Church at Harrisburgh, five miles below Houston, is the charge of Rev. Jeremiah Smith, assisted by Rev. Wm. Burley, an efficient co-laborer. We met this church Monday night and, after a lecture on the history and work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, took thirty-six subscribers.

Last night we held a union meeting in First Church, in which the pastors and members of the Second and third Churches united. The large Church was crowded, Presiding Elder Molloy presided. This brother honors the position he holds by his diligent and prudent work. Prayers, songs and addresses filled the evening. The lists of subscribers from the Houston churches were reported and the number was put up to one hundred and fifty. The pastors feel sure that at least one hundred and twenty-five of these will be cash subscribers before thirty days. These people thirst for knowledge and truth. Shame on the man or Church that would speak lightly of such a people or weary in giving them Christian fellowship or aid.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South in this city is presided over by Rev. Mr. Neighbors. It is a large and influential congregation. A good revival is in progress. Dr. Ditzler, of Tennessee, has just closed a course of lectures, bearing upon the relation between science and religion, which have made a profound impression upon the thoughtful minds of the city. This week Dr. Shepherd, of Galveston, preaches every night. A daily meeting is held at 10 a.m., and is largely attended. Brothers Hall and Cree, of the Young Men's Christian Association were present for two days last week. Sabbath was quarterly meeting time, and the Presiding Elder, Rev. N. A. Craven, invited us to preach at the morning service, which we did, and participated in the communion services which followed. Four years ago this pulpit was refused to Bishop Wiley. It was a delightful service to us, and the fraternal greetings received were heartily enjoyed. Bro. Craven referred to his association, years ago with Dr. Foster (now Bishop) and spoke in highest terms of our honored Superintendent. Bro. Neighbors is one of the rising young men of the Southern Church and we predict for him a brilliant future. God bless the brethren of the Church South in Houston.

Since being here we have enjoyed the hospitality of Rev. S. M. Kingston, Presiding Elder of Trinity District, who, with his wife, has made our stay very pleasant. To-day we go to Brenham, and next Sabbath expect to be at Austin.

Houston, March 7, 1877.

Have Faith in God.

There is no one thing that will add more to human strength than faith in God. The man that links himself with Deity in a holy trust is strong. The nation that trusts in God is made more powerful. There was a time when we were fighting for our independence. For seven long years our forefathers continued the struggle. A few feeble colonies, with three and a half millions of people, with a few raw militia, without money and without prestige, won our liberty—achieved our independence—and drove from our soil the armies of the most powerful nation on the globe at that day. Our forefathers had faith in God; Washington used to retire to the grove to pray. God was with America then, and made her strong. So in the recent war for the national unity. There were many dark days. At one time the clouds were thick around us—our troops were dying off—reverses had followed on many a field, and we were on the very borders of despair. It was at that moment doubtful what the issue would be. A Governor of a Western State telegraphed to our President: "Call out a million of men, and overrun the whole South with armed bands," or something to that effect. President Lincoln telegraphed back these words: "Stand still and see the salvation of God." Here was trust in, and recognition of a power higher than man. Just then God was leading our nation by the pillar of cloud. Then it was that the time had come to blot out our national curse, and it was done. The voice of the people spoke through their President and said to four millions of slave men and women, "Go free." The shackles fell off, the colored man came to the rescue of the nation under whose laws he had groaned, and from that day the smile of Providence was on us, and to-day the "salvation of God is seen" in a disenthralled—a united nation.

Have faith in God. Do you believe in Him? See the marks of design in all his works. The engine made with your hand reflects not half the skill which is seen in all the works of God. Every leaf and twig—every ray of light and every crystal—every thing in the universe tells us of God. And our bodies are "fearfully and wonderfully made." God is in our life—our ways are marked out by Him. He claims the service of our hearts. Let us have faith in him and be strong. In every trial of life, in all the labors of our life, in him we find solace, comfort, strength. Our highest aim should be to be true men. Never was there a better age in which to live than this—never was there a better country in which to live than this. If we have manhood, it has a value now and here. What wealth is now poured forth to be controlled? What activities now stir the heart of the nation? Make your mark on the age and on the world. Be something, do something in your sphere, whatever it may be, and if it be not our lot to have a national fame or rank among the nation's monied princes; if it be not our lot to shine among the scholars, yet we can be strong, and acquit ourselves like men. We honor the great generals who led our conquering armies to victory, but we do not forget the brave men of the rank and file, whose blood has made sacred our soil. So will we not forget the men who with strong arms and noble hearts push forward the car of a nation's wealth, and extend by their industry the area of a nation's civilization.

Will our Conference Preachers please act at once on suggestions in postals mailed them this week.

The Precious Gospel.

That which educates man up to the highest point is the Gospel. We must have an ideal. The architect constructs his building according to a plan. Take a piece of beautiful machinery and it was not built up by simply adding one piece to another, here a lever, there an arm, yonder a wheel. But first a plan was made, a nice adjustment of parts, and thus the machinest saw the machine all complete, even before a wheel or arm was made—his plan was his ideal. So in our life, we need an ideal, a pattern to work by. Now where do we find the best pattern? In history? What history? Rome? Greece? England? Surely not. The best man that ever lived was Jesus. Renan says so—Hume admits it, Bonapart said so, yet they were not all Christians. But facts cannot be denied. No such man has ever lived as Jesus. Hence the gospel gives us the best ideal, the best pattern by which to construct our lives. We cannot persuade all to be devout followers of Jesus, but if we could so move you, that you all would make Him the model of your manhood, we know that you would rise to a diviner life. Give your little girl an outline picture of a house or a tree, give her a board and crayon and she will try to imitate it. She will draw many crooked lines and make many mistakes. She will study the pattern instinctively, and her hand will soon follow the lines and angles until she can reproduce the picture. This is what the ideal will do for her. Let a man set Jesus before him—Jesus full of love, Jesus free from passion—meek, gentle, holy, and he will soon find himself desiring to be like Him, and as he desires to be like Him he will grow more and more like Him. It is a law of our very being. Let a man of refined sensibilities go into dens of iniquity and associate with vicious people and he may soon become just like his associates. Hence it is, the gospel is our text book of character, and Jesus is the great example of all the world.

The gospel is radical. It begins inside of a man and works out. The heart moulds the life. The hands on the face of a watch do not move the spring—the spring moves the hands. God does not begin our regeneration at the ends of our fingers, but in the heart. "The axe is laid at the root of the tree." "His fan is in his hand and will thoroughly purge his floor." There are, then, in man two forces—that within himself which assimulates him to his surroundings, and that which comes unto him from above. Thus the gospel, by offering to every man an image of goodness, an ideal set in the horizon of life, avails itself of a law of our nature in lifting us up, and then aids us by the infusion of a spirit that quickens and creates us anew. Jesus meant all this when He said to the Ruler that came to Him by night, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, 'ye must be born again.'" There must be a radical change in us, else the gospel has not done its work. Christ is a pattern, but He is more than that, He is a Savior, which means that He helps us—works in us by the Spirit and so redeems us from sin.

Immortality.

One of the most extraordinary of the many wonderful phenomena of the insect world is the change of a crawling worm into a beautiful butterfly, organism, functions, appearance all changed, and the catterpillar, after this transformation, goes sporting away on wings of azure and gold. In its worm-state it devoured the substance of the green leaf, but in its butterfly existence it sips the delicate nectar of the flower cup. Take the Libellulidu, or Dragonfly, its first existence was beneath the water in the form of a larva—a mere worm, burrowing in the mud and filth, but at a particular period in its existence, by a law of God, it rises and, on brilliant, irradiant wings of gauze, it goes away in the sunlight of Heaven. This does not prove that we are immortal, but it shows that there is a possibility of it. The power that can transform a mere worm into such an object of beauty can transform us—"when this corruptable shall put on incorruption."

The Young Men's Christian Association of Charleston, S. C., are holding open air meetings in all parts of the city. On a recent Sunday one was held in front of the city post-office at the hour when business men were waiting for the opening of the mail.

The Inauguration.

On Monday, March 5th, the eyes of not only this great nation but of the civilized world were centered on the city of Washington. On that day it was estimated that not less than one hundred thousand visitors from nearly all parts of the Union had congregated within the national capital. Railroad trains on all the roads leading thither were crowded with passengers, reminding one of the rush to Philadelphia to behold the wonders of the Centennial.

The curiosity was not to see the brow of some sprig of royalty decorated with a crown, but to participate in the ceremonies which should seal the agreement made by the peoples' representatives, that Rutherford B. Hayes should preside over the destinies of this great Republic during the ensuing four years. Of the great procession, the manner of dress of the foreign embassadors and their wives, the disposition of dignified men and bodies, and of the mere details of such a parade, the Washington newspapers have informed the world.

At about 10½ o'clock the Presidental party moved from the White House toward the capitol. In this procession were many of the most distinguished men of the nation. Pennsylvania Avenue was crowded with people who cheered the new President and Vice-President to the echo as their respective carriages passed along. At the capitol the ceremonies were very impressive. The oath of office was administered to Vice-President Wheeler by Senator Ferry in the Senate Chamber, and to President Hayes by Chief Justice Waite, at the east portico, in the presence of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand people, after which the President delivered his inangural address in a clear voice and in an animated manner. The address was frequently applauded by the multitude within hearing distance. President Grant, through all the ceremonies, gave his attention to every particular. He cared for it in all of its details as a good mother would care for the marriage of her daughter. Mrs. Grant did not attend the inangural ceremonies, but remained at the White House superintending the preparation of a collation for the new President, his family and friends. Thus, amid the ringing of bells, the booming of cannon, the music of bands and the surging of the multitude, the new President assumed formally the duties of his high office, thus transforming a private citizen, for he was not even then a Governor, into the ruler of one of the greatest nations of the world.

Let us breathe easier, we have passed the crisis. The ship of State has been steered safely away from the rocks—she rides gallantly on the high seas, with as noble a captain, we believe, as ever trod on a nation's quarter-deck.

Will President Hayes please everybody? No! That would be an impossibility. Let him do his whole duty to the whole nation. Let him take counsel out of the book which he pressed with his lips in front of the capitol with the eyes of forty millions of freemen upon him. Let him be true to the American citizen of whatever color or nationality, and though disappointed politicians may curse him, the people as a whole will sustain him, for the American people have good sense as well as a high appreciation of honor. He takes his position at a time fraught with most imminent perils, but let him be true to right principles and the Author of nations will bless his administration and make it a blessing to the age and to the world.

God save our President!

God save the State!

President Haye's Cabinet.

The Cabinet of President Hayes, as confirmed by the Senate on Saturday last, consists of the following gentlemen:

Secretary of State—Wm. M. Evarts, of New York.

Secretary of the Treasury—John Sherman, of Ohio.

Secretary of the Interior—Carl Schurz, of Missouri.

Postmaster General—Davis M. Key, of Tennessee.

Secretary of War—Chas. Devins, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of Navy—Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana.

Attorney General—George W. McCrary, of Iowa.

Lincoln was the President born of agitation; Grant the President born of revolution; Hayes the President of what we hope may prove the era of restoration.—Inter-Ocean.

Local Option in Texas.

Texas has a law providing that intoxicating drinks cannot be sold in any county, if by an election a majority of the voters in any county vote against it. The temperance people of the State are rallying their forces. Elections are being held nearly every week. Already about thirty counties have voted for prohibition. Thank God for this! Let our preachers and people every where stand firmly with the friends of temperance. The Methodist Episcopal Church is by her laws a total abstinence organization. Any minister or member can be expelled for taking intoxicating drinks except in cases of sickness.

This question of local option is no political question. It is a question of public morals. No minister is fit to preach the Gospel of Christ who will not give his influence and voice actively to help vote out grogshops by which men are protected in their work of damning the bodies and souls of their fellow-men. Vote "For Prohibition," every time.

GENERAL Cyrus Bussey of this city is prominently named for the collectorship of this port. Gen. Bussey served through the recent war on the Union side, where he won distinction. At the close of the war he settled in New Orleans in the cotton business, taking little part in politics. Gen. Bussey has twice been elected President of the Chamber of Commerce, and has the goodwill of all parties. In the judgment of most people in these parts, the President could not appoint a man who would be received with greater enthusiasm, and it is to be hoped that President Hayes will see the matter in this light. We look with much confidence for the appointment to be made.

Gold and silver are drawing so near together in value that it is pretty clear specie payments might have been resumed on the first of March. The premium on gold is now so small, and the fluctuations so little, that the gold brokers and speculators find their occupation unprofitable and the talk is to shut the Gold Room. It is only the gambling sales of speculators that have kept up the premium so long, and when the room closes, the premium will probably disappear or dwindle down to one per cent. or a half per cent. at the brokers' offices. What a history would be that of the Gold Room and its victims all over the continent.

The Young Mens' Christian Association Convention, held lately in Galveston, was a success. Delegates were present from the various parts of Texas, and the discussions were of a high order. Bros. Hall and Cree were present. Among the prominent home workers were Rev. F. von Schlnembach, Drs. Shephard, Johns and Bunting, of Galveston. Hon. Wm. E. Dodge, who was in the State looking after his large railroad interests, was present, and spoke on Sunday night.

The young ladies of Ames M. E. Church, in this city, have recently purchased a fine new organ for the Church, taking the old one for the Sunday-school. The instrument was purchased from Mr. Philip Werlein, Baronne street, corner of Union. Mr. W. sells instruments on very reasonable terms, and guarantees entire satisfaction to his customers. If you wish to purchase give him a call before deciding.

The Michigan Christian Advocate comes to us bright and fresh—it is a credit to the Advocate household, and is one of the very handsomest daughters of that numerous family. May her complexion always be as fresh and bright as now. We learn that, although the paper has only been in existence a couple of years, it has now a paying list of 5000, with a strong upward tendency.

The resignation of Governor Hayes was placed on file in the Governor's office about noon of March 2, and Lieutenant Governor Young notified of it. The resignation is as follows:

"Columbus, Feb. 18, 1877.

I hereby resign the office of Governor of the State of Ohio, my resignation to take effect the 2nd day of March next.

R. B. HAYES."

The state dinner given by President Grant to the members of his cabinet and their families, was the grandest one of the past eight years.

New Orleans University.

THE classes of New Orleans University will be examined Thursday, March 15, beginning at 9 a.m., and continuing until 2 p.m. The public are invited.

The third term will open Monday, March 19, at 9 a.m.

Our building has been thoroughly repaired and is in neat and perfect condition. Our library numbers one thousand volumes of good and choice books. By the liberality of Dr. Rust and of Mr. H. M. Ingham, of Cleveland, Ohio, our library is now excellent and very inviting. Our new organ in the newly furnished chapel is a joy to us in our daily worship. We are now prepared for a large increase of our students and for a prosperous term.

W. D. GODMAN.

March 10, 1877.

Rev. J. Emory Haynes, of Brooklyn, has withdrawn from the Ministry of the M. E. Church. Mr. Haynes had accepted a call to the pastorate of one of the prominent churches in Baltimore, but all of a sudden he withdraws to join the Baptists. Any man has a perfect right to choose where he shall preach and if Mr. Haynes, can do more good in the Baptist Church than in the Methodist then let him go there. One thing is certain, notwithstanding we do occasionally lose a man in this way our ranks are quite full. Most of our Eastern Conferences, and many of the Western, though "pressed down and shaken together" are "running over" into other communions. We are sending them the leaven of Methodism. May it work well!

Senator Bruce and Congressman Lynch of Mississippi.

An Inter-Ocean correspondent at Washington, speaks thus of these two representative men of Mississippi:

U. S. Senator Bruce quietly and modestly took his seat in the Senate, and during the last session won the respect and admiration of every one in or out of Congress. He made two speeches—one on the Pinchback case, another on the Mississippi troubles. Both were models, as far as the composition was concerned, but were delivered with such hesitation and timidity as to greatly mar their effect. Mr. Bruce's history and characteristics were described by me in a letter last summer, and need not be repeated. Before he leaves the Senate—when the novelty of his position has worn off, and his timidity has been overcome—I predict that he will make his mark.

Mr. Lynch has proved himself one of the ablest, most conscientious, and active members that his race has ever sent to Congress. He would be a strong man if he was white; being black he is stronger. He was born a slave in Louisiana, but his mother and himself, being purchased from his father's master, were taken to Mississippi and placed on a plantation near Natchez, where they remained until the close of the war. Lynch got good opportunities for learning something, and earning something when the armies were around Natchez, and the first introduction into the mysteries of the alphabet was at a school started by the soldiers in a camp on his master's plantation. He learned rapidly, and after the soldiers left he went into a photograph gallery as man of all work, learned how to take pictures, and saved his money until he was able to buy a camera of his own. He made a good business out of it, and at once rose to prominence among his race, was elected to the City Council, then justice of the peace, then he was sent to the Legislature, and was Speaker of the lower house for two years. In 1872 he was elected to Congress, and in 1874 was re-elected.

VERY BEST PIANOS.—Chickering & Son, Boston and New York, are manufacturing three styles of new scale upright pianos, which they are shipping to Mr. Philip Werlein for his Southern trade. These pianos are regarded as absolutely perfect and the model piano of the world. The Chickerings during the past fifty years have made about 50,000 pianos, and it is no unusual thing to see a Chickerings 25 years in use, and in good playing order. What other piano has such a record for durability?

THE BIBLE.—The book that is older than our fathers, that is truer than tradition, that is more learned than universities, that is more infallible than popes, that is more orthodox than creeds, that is more powerful than ceremonies—the omnipotent Word of God—the wonder of the world, the boon of heaven.—Bishop James.

The Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia, persists in their determination not to occupy their new edifice until it is paid for. The total cost of the building was $469,790. Thus far $390,400 has been raised toward payment.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. P. Douglas, Galveston, Texas, writes: "Since Dec. 7th, I have had 16 accessions to the Church. At that time the Sabbath-school numbered about fifty, but now there is an attendance of over one hundred. Some of our Sabbath-school children have been converted. We thank the Lord for his blessings."

Rev. P. Blue, Oxford, Miss., in sending money for subscribers, adds: "We have entered upon our new field of labor with flattering prospects of success. Already there have been a number of accessions to the Church, and so much interest is manifesting itself that we are preparing to commence a protracted meeting."

Rev. Marshall Smith, Jackson, La., says: "We have just closed a protracted meeting at which there were four conversions, and nine accessions to the Church. The meeting has been a great blessing to us, strengthening believers, and reclaiming others who were backsliders in heart. Bro. Smith (blind) from Clinton, came to my assistance and labored earnestly and faithfully for the salvation of souls. On last Sabbath (March 4th) at 3 o'clock p.m., we held a memorial service of our departed brother, Rev. Wm. Daily, D. D. I preached on the occasion to a very large congregation for this vicinity, there being about two hundred and fifty people present. Our Sabbath school has doubled its membership within the past four weeks. May the blessings of the Lord continue with us during all the year."

Rev. W. J. Grant, Lawrence, Texas, writes: "Methodism in Lawrence moves steadily. We have had twenty-three accessions since Conference. We had a Sunday-school Missionary concert a few evenings since. It was very enthusiastic. At the close we received a thanks-offering for the Missionary Society amounting to $13. We shall have several during the year. There will be no blanks in the annual report from Lawrence."

Rev. J. Braden, Nashville, Tenn., writes: "The Lord has been reviving His work in the bounds of the Murfreesboro District, Tennessee Conference. At Murfreesboro, Rev. D. W. Hays, pastor, there have been thirty-five conversions and about the same number of additions to the Church. At Franklin, Rev. Moses Young, pastor, assisted by Rev. J. P. Andrews, there have been twenty-five conversions and a large increase in membership. At Gallatin, Rev. E. Provine, pastor, fifty conversions and 116 additions to the Church since the first of this year, and at the Central Tennessee College, ten conversions in the last month, and the good work goes on."

Rev. Stephen Duncan, Cypremort, La., says: "We are in the midst of a most interesting revival. There have been five conversions and eleven accessions to the Church, and still the good work goes on. At night our altar is crowed with seekers. Our church is thoroughly aroused, and our brethren and sisters unite heartily in the services. The Lord grant us a yet greater outpouring of the Spirit. We have an attendance of from seventy-five to eighty at Sabbath-school, and it is ably conducted, and is accomplishing great good."

Peligious Items.

The Congregational Quarterly gives the number of churches of that denomination in the United States as 3,000, an increase of 71; of members, 350,658, an increase of 12,345. The increase of members is the greatest ever reported, and that of churches is above the average yearly increase for nineteen years. There are 3,333 ministers, of whom only 1,783 are settled pastors—though the settlement of an "acting pastor" is equivalent to what passes for a pastoral settlement among Baptists. The contributions to Foreign Missions in 1876 amounted to $456,862; to Home Missions, $383,632. No denomination excels the Congregational in the completeness of its statistical reports, or in the degree of its benevolent liberality in proportion to its number of members.

Ten Methodist Churches of colored people, in Louisville, Ky., have organized as the Louisville Christian Union, for the purpose of holding union Gospel meetings, and putting forth their united strength to rescue the rising generation of their race from sin and degradation. The protracted meetings held under the auspicies of this union have been productive of much good, and the awakening of considerable zeal. As high as one hundred souls have arisen at one meeting for the prayers of the people of God. There have been numerous conversons.

The following are the sizes of the largest churches in Europe: St. Peter's at Rome will hold 54,000 people; Milan Cathedral, 37,000; St. Paul's at Rome, 32,000; St. Paul's at London, 35,600; St. Petronio, at Bologna, 24,400; Florence Cathedral, 24,300; Antwerp Cathedral, 24,000. St. Sophia's, Constantinople, 23,000; St. John's, Lateran, 22,900; Notre Dame, at Paris, 21,000; Pisa Cathedral, 13,000; St. Stephen's, at Viena, 12,400; St. Dominic's at Bologna, 12,000; St. Peter's at Bologna, 11,400; Cathedral of Vienna, 11,000; St. Mark's, at Venice, 7,000; Spurgeon's Tabernacle, 7,000.

Tristam Dunham, who died in Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 1, provided in his will for giving five thousand dollars to the Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society on the death of his widow, and five thousand dollars to each of the following societies, namely: Methodist Episcopal Church Extension, American Bible Society, and to the Old People's Home of the city of New York.

The missionary meetings which took place in Philadelphia about the middle of February were successful. Large collections were realized. Arch street Church, which gave thirty-nine hundred dollars last year, has raised five thousand five hundred this year.

Seven daily prayer-meetings are held in New York city, all well attended.

On the Southern Pacific Railroad, 340 miles south of San Francisco, is seen a unique piece of railroading, where the track after passing through a tunnel, winds arounds the mountain and crosses itself directly over the tunnel, thus gaining a height of seventy-eight feet on 3,795 feet of rail. About one hundred miles further south the road runs through one of the longest tunnels in America, that of San Fernando, 6,967 feet in length.

Heavenly Treasures.

(The Sabbath-school lesson for March 25th being a Quarterly Review, we give, instead, the following extract of a sermon recently delivered in Boston, by Mr. Moody.)

I want to call your attention this afternoon to a few words that we shall find in the sixth chapter of Matthew and the nineteenth verse: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." Now if we are truly children of God and live as He would have us our treasures are in heaven and not on earth. I think the reason there are so many disappointed people is because they have been laying up treasures here on earth and they have been taking to themselves wings and flying away.

Let us see that our treasures are where Christ tells us to have them and then we shall certainly live for heaven ourselves. A great many are wondering why they don't get on better, why they are spiritually poor. Now, it is not only rich people, but there are many poor people who have their hearts set on things down here. They are not rich towards God. You hear that a man has died worth a million. Why, my dear friends, he was not worth anything when he died. He was worth nothing at all the minute after he died. All he was worth then was what he had up yonder. If a man isn't rich toward God he dies a pauper. If our hearts are set on things down here we don't grow heavenly minded, we don't grow spiritually, and we are dwarfed and crimped as we should not be if we laid up treasures in heaven. I am told that those men who go up in balloons take up sand bags with them, and as they want to go higher they throw out sand. I advise some of those rich men to throw out sand. You have too much sand. Give out your money, if you want to be rich toward God, rich eternally. Don't hold on to it so. We talk about it being more blessed to give than to receive, but how few of us carry it out in our lives. Yet that is the teaching of Scripture, and if men would give more and be willing to do more for others, they would become rich towards God; and then how easy it would be for them to live for heaven.

A friend of mine said he was in Liverpool some time ago and a vessel came up the harbor, up the Mersey, and it was clear down to the water's edge, and he wondered why it didn't sink. He inquired, and found it was loaded with lumber and waterlogged. And at the same time another vessel came steaming up the harbor, with full sail set, without any trouble. And that's the way with a great many men in the church. They are loaded down with lumber and waterlogged. They have so many treasures down here that they cannot live for God, and their minds are not on things above. A lady some time ago lay in bed—she was one of those bed-ridden saints whom God is polishing up for His kingdom—and she observed a bird building its nest near the ground outside her window. And she wanted to speak to the bird and say, "Bird, build higher." But she couldn't make the bird understand, and it went on and built its nest there, and laid its eggs and hatched them, but one morning she observed the feathers were all strewn around, the bird was gone and the nest was broken up. The cat had come and destroyed it. Ah! how many of us build down here too low. Let us build up higher. If we build up yonder we shall not be disappointed in our old age. A great many old people are soured in their old age. What is the trouble? It is because they have been earthly-minded. The heavenly-minded grow sweeter and sweeter, and brighter and brighter till they are ushered into glory. Some men have kept only one corner of their hearts for God, and the result is that in their old age they are not real sunny Christians; they don't glow and brighten. The nearer a Christian gets to the eternal harbor the more he ought to shout for joy.

Now, there is another thing which we find in Paul's epistle to the Hebrews: "There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God." This is not a place of rest. We have as many members of our churches of the resting sort as we want. No, we will work till Jesus comes, and then we'll rest at home. But this is not the place to rest in. Don't go into your church meetings to rest; go in there to work. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they shall rest from their labors and their works shall follow them"—that is one of the treasures of heaven. There "the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary shall be at rest." I know of a man who had great success as a minister at one time. At last he was not so successful, and he wished that he was in heaven. And he had a dream. He dreamt that he had died and was taken to the Eternal City, and there the Savior met him and took him in His chariot to the battlements of Heaven, and said, "Look down yonder." And he said, "Why, I see that dark world I have just escaped from." "Look again." "Why, I see men blindfolded and falling into a bottomless pit." "Now," said the Savior, "will you stay here, or go back and tell these men their condition?" He says he has never wished to be dead since, but to live as long as he can, to tell men of the Savior, and to save them from ruin. Let us work now, friends, all we can, and by and by we shall rest through eternal ages. There is something else we have got in Heaven and that is our reward. Will you turn over, if you have your bibles, to the Epistle of Timothy, the fourth chapter and the eighth verse: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." Then in Peter's first epistle I want to call your attention to one verse, the fourth verse in the first chapter, which says: "To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." Many people are making the mistake of looking for their reward down here. Remember, your reward is yonder. No man is ready to work for God until he is willing to take his reward up yonder. What does Christ say? "When the world persecutes you, rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." And when the Son of God calls it great it must be great indeed. That's what made Paul such a mighty warrior. He was not working for his reward down here. Ah, my friends, I never read that life of St. Paul but I am ashamed of myself and of the Christianity of the nineteenth century.

He didn't have any committee to build him a building like this. Look at him going down to Corinth. He had his bundle under his arm, his tools I suppose, to make tents with. He went down there and found some cheap lodgings on some side street, and then he began to preach, and then the Jews began to put him down; they didn't want him—they cast him out. After he had been preaching eight months they had a committee, but it was more a vigilance committee than one of help, and they took him out of the city and gave him thirty-nine stripes. If a man got one stripe now-a-days what a martyr he would be. He went to another place, and they stoned him and left him for dead, and I don't know but he was, and God raised him. "What are you going to do now, Paul?" they said. "I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling," he said. The devil got his match when he got Paul. On he went and they couldn't stop him. "Five times I received of the Jews forty stripes save one." But he leaped into the field again and went on preaching the Gospel as before. All the devils in hell couldn't stop him. God said "Preach the Gospel," and he went and preached it. That's what America wants—men who will preach the Gospel in season and out of season. A great cry came to him to go over into Macedonia, and over he goes, and the first thing that happened to him was thirty-nine more stripes. He and Silas were cast into prison, his feet put in the stocks, his hands in chains, and his back black and bleeding. And he and Silas began to sing. If it had been you and I we should have sung "Hark from the tombs a doleful sound." And they had just got through their prayers when God shouted from heaven, Amen, and the prison doors shook and the Phillippian jailor was converted, he and all his family. Look at Paul again at Rome. The time of his departure is at hand. He took up his pen and wrote to Timothy: "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course." I don't know what Boston would have done with him. They would certainly have called him a bigot, but he held on to the faith. Now the time had come for him to be executed, and he passed over that highway—they took him two miles out of the city. He went with a firm, proud step. I see him at the gallotine. His head is cut off; the devil can have his head, but God shall have his soul. I see him leap into a chariot and they ring the bells of heaven and there is great joy there as he goes sweeping through the gates and up the shining way, and you hear them shout, "Well done! Well done!" and as it rolls on to the throne of God I hear Christ say to him, "Well done, Paul, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!" See that no man takes your crown. There will be a great many crownless Christians in heaven. See to it that you do not loose your reward, and remember it is up there, not down here. One more thought before I close. What occasions joy in heaven? You know how excited this country has been about the last election. I don't know that they took any notice of it in heaven at all. But if a man or woman in this assembly should repent to-day there would be joy in heaven. I don't know that it would be noticed in Boston. But in heaven there is joy over one sinner that repenteth.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, that the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, billious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchits, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

5,000 BOOKS GIVEN AWAY For the Asking.

WHILE Dr. H. James was attached to the British Medical Staff in the East Indies, his high position enabled him to call about him the best chemists, physicians and scientists of the day, and while experimenting with and among the native, he accidentally made the discovery that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently CURED. During the many years of his sojourn there he devoted his time to the treatment of Lung Diseases, and upon his retirement he left with us books and papers containing full particulars, showing that every one can be his own physician and prepare his own medicine, and such information as we have received we now offer to the public without price, only asking that each remit a three cent stamp for return postage. SOUTHWESTERN

Christian Advocate,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.,

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.
1877.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There, is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2 The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms,

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the SOUTHWESTERN one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year,

Send for a specimen copy. ddress,

LET ME GET A START.

A little black-eyed girl once laid
Her book upon my knee;
And with a troubled look essayed
To learn her A B C.

But all in vain—she did not call
A letter right—not once;
At length I harshly sat her down,
And called her "little dunce,"

Sad tears soon filled her merry eyes;
I'd pained her little heart;
"Aunt Fanny, do jest wait," she cries,
"Till I can get a start."

And soon the dear girl "got a start,"
Each letter learned to tell,
And e're three months had passed away
Could learn a lesson well.

Now, when you find some duller mind
Discouraged, sick at heart,
I say, be patient—chide them not,
But help them "get a start."

THE CROSS.

Blest they who seek,
While in their youth,
With spirit meek,
The way of truth,
To them the sacred Scriptures now display
Christ as the only true and living way;
His precious blood on Calvary was given,
To make them heir of endless bliss in heaven
And e'en on earth the child of God can trace
The glorious blessings of his Savior's grace.
For them he bore
His Father's frown;
For them he wore
The thorny crown;
Nailed to the Cross,
Endured its pain,
That His life's loss
Might be their gain.
Then haste to choose
That better part,
Nor o'er dare refuse
The Lord thy heart,
Lest He declare,
"I know you not,"
And deep despair
Should be your lot.
Now look to Jesus, who on Calvary died,
And trust to Him who there was crucified.

A Thoroughly Practical Joke.

A young man of eighteen or twenty, a student in a university, took a walk one day with a professor, who was commonly called the students' friend; such was his kindness to the young men whom it was his office to instruct.

While they were now walking together, and the professor was trying to lead the conversation to grave subjects, they saw a pair of old shoes lying in the path, which they supposed belonged to a poor man who had nearly finished his day's work.

The young student turned to the professor, saying, "Let us play the man a trick. We will hide his shoes and conceal ourselves behind these bushes and watch to see his perplexity when he can not find them."

"My dear friend," answered the professor, "we must never amuse ourselves at the expense of the poor. But you are rich, and may give yourself a much greater pleasure by means of this poor man. Put a crown-piece, if you have them, in each shoe, and then we will hide ourselves."

The student, luckily, having two crown pieces, did so, and then placed himself, with the professor, behind the bushes hard by, through which they could easily watch the laborer, and see whatever wonder or joy he might express.

The poor man soon finished his work, and came across the field to the path where he had left his coat and shoes. While he put on his coat he slipped one foot into one of his shoes. Feeling something hard he stooped down and found the crown. Astonishment and wonder were upon his countenance. He gazed upon the crown, turned it round, and looked again and again; then he looked around on all sides, but could see no one. Now he put the crown in his pocket, and proceeded to put on the other shoe; but what was his astonishment when he found the other crown! His feelings overcame him. He fell upon his knees, looked up to heaven, and uttered a loud and fervent thanksgiving, in which he spoke of his wife, sick and helpless, and his children, who by some unknown hand would be saved from perishing.

The young man stood there deeply affected, and with tears in his eyes.

"Now," said the professor, "are you not better pleased than if you had played your intended trick?"

"Oh, dear sir," answered the youth, "you have taught me a lesson now that I will never forget. I feel now the truth of the words which I never before understood, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

Advice to Young Ladies.

In marrying, make your own match; do not marry a man to get rid of him, or to oblige him, or to save him. The man who would go to destruction without you, will quite as likely go with you, and perhaps drag you along. Do not marry in haste, lest you repent at leisure. Do not marry for a home and a living. Do not let aunts, fathers and mothers sell you for money or position in bondage, tears and life-long misery, which you must endure. Place not yourself habitually in the hands of any suitor until you have decided the question of marriage; human wills are weak, and people often become bewildered, and do not know their error until it is too late. Go away from their influence, settle your head and make up your mind alone. Do not trust your happiness in the keeping of one who has no heart, no head, no health. Shun the man who ever gets intoxicated. Do not rush thoughtlessly into wedded life, contrary to the counsel of friends. Love can wait; that which cannot wait is of a very different character.

House and Farm.

Chufas.

I will give your readers the benefit of my experience, and what I know of the Chufa. It is not the nut grass although it may be a grass nut, and a very valuable one too. There is no trouble to get rid of it—being easily killed, and pigs will root out every vestige of it in a short while, when they have access to the patch. It is a most wonderful producer, and makes more on poor land than anything you can plant. It will make when peas will fail to make. On good land the Chufa will yield correspondingly a more abundant crop than anything you can plant. Ground peas are a great exhauster of land—chufas are not, and will make with less work than anything you plant. They will make a very fair crop planted between hills of corn without work, save the last plowing of corn. As a feed for hogs, they far excel the ground pea, and make ten times as much—the hog preferring them to the goober or ground pea. I think they fatten faster and make harder flesh and lard than the ground pea, almost equaling corn in their fattening and solid qualities. They possess, too, this advantage: they give a most excellent flavor to the flesh of hogs fattened on them, such as neither the ground pea or corn give. Crows do not infest the chufa patch, as they do the ground pea. Chickens, turkeys and pigs, as well as the human family, are very fond of them. They are more tedious to gather, but you need not gather more than you wish to plant, and the rest will be gathered by your hogs and chickens, which will get fat on them, saving all trouble. They impart to the flesh of poultry their peculiar flavor—like celery—a flavor which every one who eats chickens like. The tops are eaten by mules and cows with apparent relish. On a very small area you can raise enough to plant hundreds of acres, and by planting the poor places in your corn fields that will make nothing else, and, if you wish, between your corn, the problem of raising your own bacon is solved. I cannot say what would be their yield, per acre, on ordinary land, but from my observation, think it would be immense. Very few persons would take the trouble to gather an acre, although it takes but few to plant an acre. I have raised them for two years, and am so much pleased that I shall plant more largely another year. I have saved several bushels for planting, and no doubt could gather several hundred.

Cultivate only your best Land.

It is well to consider that the proper cultivation of small rich farms has many advantages, and is far more profitable than the cultivation of large poor ones, with all the appertaining drawbacks, as keeping up extensive enclosures—slip-shod, shallow and unseasonable plowing and scanty manuring, if any at all—together with the loss of time, wear and tear in sowing, reaping, hauling and housing, with other disadvantages too numerous to mention. Many have persisted in trying to make farms that were poor, and covering large surfaces, pay, and have utterly failed, while no one has ever failed to prosper who devoted all his energies upon a small, rich surface. Take out the best land wherever located, and give it deep plowing during the fall and winter, and then manure it as thoroughly as possible, and just as sure as careful attention and liberal feeding produces fine stock just so sure will good culture and high manuring produce the most profitable crops. Cultivate only your best land, and cultivate it thoroughly, and your profits will be increased.

The more a man denies himself, the more he shall obtain from God.
Horace.

Man is an animal that cannot long be left in safety without occupation; the growth of his fellow nature is apt to run into weeds.

The Important Question.

Of all the loathsome diseases Catarrh stands pre-eminent. It renders its victim as disgusting to himself as to others. And the most humiliating of all is the consciousness that his presence is offensive to those around him. If any disease deserves the name of universal, it is this. Dietetic errors and the follies which Fashion imposes upon us tend to foster and disseminate it. To the pitiful cry of its victims, is there any cure for Catarrh? there is but one answer consistent with Christian reason. God has never sent one evil into the world for which He has not sent the remedy. For the greatest of all spiritual and moral evils, the Great Physician has prescribed a potent and never-failing remedy. He has given explicit rules for the treatment and preservation of the spiritual and moral man, but He is silent in all matters relating to the physical man. It would be an unwarrantable detraction from His beneficent character to suppose that He has afflicted the greater portion of humanity with an incurable disease. The day of plagues is past. The God of Christianity is a God of Love, of Mercy, His message is "good will to all men." The earth and all contained therein was intended by the great Designer to supply man's wants; and surely he has no greater wants than remedies for his infirmities. Science is rapidly proving that the earth is fitted to supply man's uttermost need. New medical plants are constantly being discovered and new properties developed from those already known. For Catarrh, the most potent remedy yet discovered is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its efficacy has been tested in many thousand cases with uniform success. Cases that had been repeatedly pronounced incurable, readily yielded to it. In confirmed or obstinate cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery should be taken in connection with the use of the Catarrh Remedy. Full particulars in Pierce's Memorandum Books. They are given away by druggists.

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

NEW SERIES—VOL. 1—NO. 11. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1877. WHOLE NUMBER [illegible]

[illegible] Christian Advocate, [illegible] by WALDEN & PHILLIPS, [illegible] Methodist Episcopal Church. [illegible]

[illegible] FOR TO-DAY.

[illegible] God has not called him. No one can have any clear views of the fearful responsibility of the ministry and be willing to assume its solemn duties without the clearest testimony that it is his duty to do so. To push his way into the ministerial office, over the protests of some of the best men in the Church, because the young man may have friends in the places of power who can secure the license for him, generally proves his total unfitness for the holy calling. There are men in the ministry who ought never to have received the authority from the Church, as they have never given any evidence that they were moved to preach, by any higher motives than the hope of honor, ease, position and bread. Let the young man be in a hurry to get into the ministry. The tendency of the age is to rush ahead, in church, in State, as well as in the race for wealth. Young men are apt to think that the world cannot get along without them. So, with little preparation, they enter life, and thousands fail in business, in the professions, in the ministry, because they have, with erroneous views of their own powers, and actuated by wrong motives, entered upon a course of life for which they were entirely unfitted. To make this mistake in reference to secular callings is a calamity. Lives are wasted in some positions that might have been eminently useful in others. But to make this mistake in regard to the ministry may be attended with disaster such as would make the stoutest heart shudder to contemplate. The young man can wait, so long as there is no voice speaking from the Church, calling him into the vinyard of the Lord. But let him work in the Sunday-school, prayer-meetings, class-meetings, revival meetings as he may have opportunity, and if he develops no gift that leads any one to suggest that he may be more useful in the ministry, he can generally conclude that God sees that he will be most useful in the Church as a faithful worker in the laity. This will not suit a class of young men that urge their plea to be put into the ministry, and who chafe under the requirements of the Church or grow sulky because their wishes are not gratified at once, and refuse to take any active part in church work because they cannot do so in the pulpit. But the church is generally the gainer by their silence.

If any young man who reads this feels that he is called to preach, let him work in the Sunday-school, in the prayer meeting and other meetings as occasion offers, and let him show a deep interest in the growth of the Church and salvation of souls, and, if his call is from Heaven, he may rest assured that God will give the church some intimation of His will in the case. He need not hurry—only to prepare by working and waiting. J. BRADEN.

Nashville, Tenn., March 1st.

The Mutual Education of the Races.

In the January number of the Methodist Quarterly Review is an able and significant article by Prof. Edward W. Blyden, of Liberia, Africa, entitled "Mohammedanism and Negro Race." The leading the[illegible] of this timely paper is the [illegible] observation of travelers, [illegible] by R. Bosworth Smith [illegible] words:

"Christian travelers, with every wish to think otherwise, have remarked that the negro who accepts Mohammedanism acquires at once a sense of the dignity of human nature, not commonly found even among those who have been brought to accept Christianity."

The writer of the article accepts [illegible]

[illegible] "Christianity came to the negro as a slave, at least as a subject race in a foreign land."

II. "Another reason for the superior manliness and greater progress of negro Mohammedans may be found in the fact that, unlike their christian brethren, they have not been trained under the depressing influences of Aryan art." He maintains, with truth, that the painting and sculpture of the European whites represent the negro in a state of degradation, and therefore discourage and depress him.

III. A third cause of the effect the author finds in "the social and literary pressure which he has undergone. It is not too much to say that the popular literature of the Christian world, since the discovery of America, or at least for the last two hundred years, has been anti-negro."

IV. "Another very important element, which has given the Mohammedan negro the advantage over his Christian brother, is the more complete sympathy which has always existed between him and his foreign teacher."

These are decisive proofs of the proposition stated as we have put it, but not in the form quoted from R. Bosworth Smith; and they are all comprised in the effects of slavery on the white man and the negro.

But the assumption that there is anything in Islamism to give the negro a higher estimate of "the dignity of human nature," than he will derive from Christianity is utterly false. The religion of Mohammed stands and grows on the monstrous claim, that this earth and Heaven, especially the latter, belong only to the followers of "the Prophet" and that "infidels" have no rights that Mussulmen are bound to respect. They are dogs to be devoured by sword and consigned to damnation. The "dignity" of Mussulmen is the contempt and damnation of other men, and these followers of the false prophet are the very demons now plundering and wasting the heart of Africa with the horrors of the slave trade, whom Christian nations are combining to expel.

But the depression of the negro in contact with Christian whites is a stubborn and wicked fact. It must be removed. Christianity demands its eradication, and the Christian world will not rest until it is removed.

A process of reciprocal education has already commenced and will go forward to completion. Forces are at work whereby the white man will be educated out of his caste feeling, and the colored man will be educated out of his servility. The Christian's ideas about the paternity of God, and the equality of men will do this work. The power of this world is in ideas. These Christian ideas, like God himself, are omnipotent. There is no uncertainty in the result. Let the colored man patiently and cheerfully wait God's time.

His welfare will come of humility, not of assumption; of sound character and attainments, not of pretension and bluster; of honest work and self reliance, not of severe criticisms and office seeking. These are Christian qualities, which will assert his true manhood and make him felt for good. There are already among us colored men of this type and their number is increasing. These are the men who will come to the front, when pretenders have failed. G.

Prepare for Your Conference Examinations.

I want to urge upon those young men, who have in immediate view the itinerant work in our Southern Conferences, the imperative necessity for prompt effort in seeking to be prepared in the studies upon which they are required to pass a rigid examination, previous to being admitted. The Church has recently awoke to the humiliating fact that her vital interests have been seriously damaged by introducing into her ministry, an element absolutely unavailable. She is now forced to assert her unalterable decision against admitting any, who, on account of habitual indolence, or constitutional effeminacy, can never rise above mediocrity. Let the aspiring candidate heed this, and determine to subject himself to such judicious discipline as will wholly remove every obstacle in the way of his entrance into the coveted field. He should at the earliest moment endeavor to procure the necessary books, and then grapple with, and as far as practicable, master the contents of each. The temptation to procrastinate this duty should be met with a firm resistance. Yielding to it would be attended with incalculable mischief [illegible] frustrate his plans, and perhaps completely defeat his [illegible] purpose. But aside from a jealous regard for his own reputation, a proper appreciation of the present and future weal of the [illegible] to whom he proposes to minister, should prove [illegible] a powerful incentive to unceasing diligence in the task of preparation. Our people, especially the young, [illegible] an active, inquiring habit, if [illegible] this side of the judgment seat. Let him spurn the idea of packing a bundle of vain excuses up to the committee room, for if he can find an excuse for lack of time for study, he will, after awhile find another for his ignorance, and ultimately, he will find still another for his disgraceful failure, which, of course, follows as an inevitable sequence. Some will find it difficult to prepare thoroughly, owing to the peculiar circumstances which environ them. Let each one do his best, relying at the same time for help upon Him who hath said, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." D. W. HAYS.

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The Unattainable.

We strive ever for what is just beyond us, and we shall die without ever reaching it. We set out light-hearted at first and courageously divide and subdivide the distance between us and our goal.

When the first ardor of our pursuit has cooled a little, we pause to calculate what yet lies before us. Our work which was at first done with boyant confidence, is now performed with the earnestness of one who feels his conflict a doubtful one. This deepens again into the firm energy of despair, and we leave, looking back at the steps already gained, concerning ourselves only with the ever multiplying obstacles in our way.

We value most the unattained; and what charmed us yesterday, to-day we fling behind us as a worthless thing. But our ideal we never reach. We pine for something we do not and cannot possess; and which if we did, could never satisfy us. The intrinsic value of the thing comes not into the reckoning; it is the difficulty of attainment that gives it its value. The girl who risked and lost her life for the flower that grew on the brink of the Niagara, might have had a hundred sweeter and more beautiful, for the price of a single smile.

Did the great Webster dream that it would add lustre to his name to be the President of the greatest republic? He stooped very low to win that distinction, and when it slipped from his grasp, his great heart broke and he died.

And the same may be written of the "good and great Greeley."

Who of us could not tell of some secret longing of this sort, which possesses and urges us? We may wear the seeming of contentment, but the substance is far from us. We all have a hidden fire somewhere, into which we daily sprinkle incense to the unattainable.

Contentment! Poets have sung its praise, orators have spoken its eulogy, and divines commended it, but it would be a sad day for the world if contentment should become the common lot. For it is not more true, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," than that eternal restlessness is the price of progress. Religion itself does not quench, but purifies and lightens it. Indeed, our religion would be a tame thing without this out-streching of the soul after a higher, holier, and truer life.

Contentment in religion would make us sluggards in godliness. But with this restless aspiration toward the unattainable in holiness, such as David felt when he said—"My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God," there is activity, progress, and happiness.

It gives no rest while there is wrong to combat, or suffering to relieve, or souls to save. It makes toil better than repose and privation better than luxury. It makes our life a constant labor, it makes us sleep sweetly at its close, and prepares us for that rest that remaineth for the people of God. OUSMITH.

The Best Way.

The distinguished Rowland Hill has said, "We can do more good by being good than in any other way." Let us remember this. It is not genius that we need, nor intellectual mastership, nor profound learning, nor skill in the use of apparatus, nor tact in communicating truth. These we must not despise. There is little danger of our doing so. But the Bible teaches that our great, deep, imperative, indispensible need is—character.

An Angel's Visit.

A lady on an errand of charity [illegible] healthy, and apparently in very ill health.

He replied to the question, "If you will give me your hand, to help me up, I will show you Mrs. Lane's room. It is at the top of our house. Thank you. I can do almost anything but rise up alone. I help mother a good deal with the children. They are lovely boys—so straight—and they've got red cheeks and curly hair. But mother doesn't love them a bit better than she does me. They are very good to me; they never pull things away from me, nor push me down as bad boys in the street do sometimes. This is my house. Come in and look at them."

And opening a door, he asked, "May this lady just peep in one minute to see the children, mother?"

A pleasant woman appeared, wiping her hands on a towel, and said, smiling, "Poor, dear Allen is so proud of the children, he sometimes seems a little silly. Walk in."

The children were stout, rosy fellows of three and five years, and looked as if they could "push" almost anybody "down," if they tried. The appearance of their weak brother was a token for rejoicing.

"Now isn't this a beautiful home?" the poor child said, looking round proudly on the shining stove, the neat paper, and pictures on the wall.

"Poor, dear boy," said the woman, laying her hand on his head, "he doesn't know much about 'beautiful homes.' Everything is beautiful that he loves. He is so patient, and wise, and careful of me and the children that I don't know how I could have lived without his sympathy after his father's death. He's very feeble, and sometimes I'm afraid that he doesn't get all the care he needs—I have so much to do, and the other boys take so much of my time;" and she patted his thin cheek tenderly.

When the lady was ascending the attic stairs, her little guide, who was hobbling after her, stopped and said:

"I'll tell you a secret. She isn't my truly mother—but she doesn't know it. I mean she wouldn't know it if I hadn't been big enough to be at her wedding! She loves me just as well as Willie and Tom. And oh, she tells such beautiful things about God and heaven. She says that God will change this tired body of mine, and give me one like His own, by-and-by. She washes and irons all the time, but she's always pleasant. I can't go to church or Sunday-school because I'm so easy pushed over in a crowd; but she says our room is my church and Sunday-school and singing school and everything."

As the lady bade her new friend "Good-bye," he said, with the air of a hospitable patron, "You may come here any time you like to see the children. They say their prayers about seven o'clock, and they do look so lovely in their little white nightgowns!"

The lady looked at the boy's happy face and asked, "Do you remember your father?"

"O yes, ma'am," he replied, "it is only two years since that night. This is what he said—mother made me say it over and over, so as never to forget it—'Allen, be good to your mother as long as you live. You can never pay back her love to you. She is doing an angel's work, and your own mother in heaven is blessing her for it, and so will I, forever and ever. Love God and keep close to her.'"

The lady's eyes were filled with tears, and she, too, blessed and resolved to help this woman who was rearing this feeble boy with a love that almost made her forget he was not her own.

If there is one work on God's earth holy above all others, it is her's who takes the children of a dead mother to her heart with a love that almost veils the fact that they are not her own; and who makes them love her as a mother, without forgetting that One whom no child should be allowed to forget.

If the redeemed above get glimpses of earth, and the loved ones they left here, what benisons are hourly falling on those who have taken their places in desolate homes, and made them real homes again.

God smiles on her who, though not "a truly mother," is a mother still.—Ex.

A gentleman had a board put upon a part of his land, on which was written, "I will give this field to any one who is really contented." And when an applicant came he asked, "Are you contented?" The general answer was, "I am," and his reply invariably was, "Then what do you want with my field?"

The North India Conference.

The Conference of the M. E. Church met at Moradabad, India, January [illegible], 1877, Bishop Andrews presiding [illegible] Secretary. [illegible] the preachers and their families and all ate at a common table. It was a happy week for all. There were 37 American men and women; half a dozen lady missionaries, and eight ordained [illegible] brethren.

There had been a good increase during the year. At one point Bishop Andrews baptized 50 adults. It is twenty years since the work in India was organized by Dr. Butler. On Conference Sunday four native preachers were ordained Elders, and two Deacons. The following are the statistics and appointments:

A Near Relative.

A sick officer went to a mineral spring in Germany for the benefit of his health, but the hotel-keepers refused to admit him lest he should die in the house.

At the last hotel a gentleman came forward and said, "This officer is my near relative. He may have my bed, and I will sleep on the sofa."

The landlord consented, and the half-fainting man was carried to the gentleman's room. When he had rested a little, his first question was, "May I ask your name, my kind friend? How are you related to me?"

"Through the Lord Jesus Christ, for I have learned from Him that my neighbor is my brother."

The law will take effect on the first of next September, and compels all children in the State, between eight and fourteen years of age, to attend school at least twelve weeks in each year, not less than six weeks of such attendance to be consecutive.

Grandmotherly old Boston led off with a spelling match about a year ago, and in a few weeks the whole country was spelling down. This time a new custom is to be set at Music Hall—a public singing match. Singing bees are popular in Germany and England, and are vastly more entertaining than spelling matches.

Attention having been drawn to the absence from the seat of government of several of the foreign ministers accredited to Washington, and who persistently reside in New York, it is rumored that the Secretary of State is about to call the attention of their governments to their constant absence, and to request instructions to the ministers to be at their posts, or that others may be appointed who will remain at the seat of government.

A newspaper paragraph states that the Pope has become very much altered. His feet do not carry him any longer. His face, formerly fresh and of a jovial expression, is now shrunk and of a listless aspect. He rarely leaves his bed-room, and receives visitors there between five and seven in the afternoon, more reclining than sitting in an arm chair. He has a large table before him, on which a few candles only are placed; between them there stands a crucifix. His memory is failing him very much in matters of quite recent occurrence, though he remembers well the things of a long time past. Many doubt whether he will complete his eighty-fifth year.

Editorial Correspondence.

Houston, fifty miles north of Galveston, is the railroad center of Texas. It is a city of over twenty thousand people. Its churches, schools, other public buildings, street railroads, etc., are creditable. It rivals and bids fair to surpass any city in Texas in commercial importance. New Orleans is losing immensely in commerce by not having railroad communication with Texas through Houston. It is to be hoped that some of the schemes now on foot to build the railroad from New Orleans to the Texas line will succeed.

We have four churches in Houston. Our German people have recently dedicated a beautiful chapel. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Bruck, is a diligent and earnest worker, and there is every prospect for a rapid increase in his congregation and membership.

Our three other churches are located in different parts of the city and are attended by our people of color. First Church, Rev. J. F. Cozier pastor, is a strong, influential body of people. The Sabbath school enrolls two hundred and seventy scholars, and, under the direction of Mr. Frank Vance as superintendent, is doing good work. On Sunday morning we had a delightful half hour with this school. The Berean lessons are used, a teacher's meeting, under the direction of the pastor, is held weekly, and nearly every teacher takes the SOUTHWESTERN. We met the public congregation of this Church at 3 o'clock on Sabbath, and, after preaching, asked for subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN. The pastor had already made a good beginning, and the list was run up to over sixty. A good portion of these came forward and paid, and the remainder promised the money in a few days. The pastor and brethren propose to put the list to one hundred. Where is the Church, North or South, which will surpass this?

Second Church, Rev. J. S. Whitaker pastor, is not so large but is equally enthusiastic. The Church is engaged in building a plain but commodious edifice, to cost about four thousand dollars. We worshipped with this Church Sunday night in company with Presiding Elder Molloy. On asking for subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN, forty-two came forward and gave their names, and either paid or promised to pay in a few days. Here we met Brother Todd, Lay delegate to the last General Conference, and an earnest worker.

Third Church, Rev. J. N. Breese pastor, has nearly finished a neat church building, capable of seating four hundred people. The pastor has a large school during the week. We met and preached to this church last Friday night. Nearly thirty subscribers were obtained.

Our Church at Harrisburgh, five miles below Houston, is the charge of Rev. Jeremiah Smith, assisted by Rev. Wm. Burley, an efficient co-laborer. We met this church Monday night and, after a lecture on the history and work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, took [illegible] subscribers.

Presiding Elder, Rev. N. A. Craven, invited us to preach at the morning service, which we did, and participated in the communion services which followed. Some years ago this pulpit was refused to Bishop Wiley. It was a delightful service to us, and the fraternal greetings received were heartily enjoyed. Bro. Craven referred to his association, years ago with Dr. Foster (now Bishop) and spoke in highest terms of our honored Superintendent. Bro. Neighbors is one of the rising young men of the Southern Church and we predict for him a brilliant future. God bless the brethren of the Church South in Houston.

Since being here we have enjoyed the hospitality of Rev. S. M. Kingston, Presiding Elder of Trinity District, who, with his wife, has made our stay very pleasant. To-day we go to Brenham, and next Sabbath expect to be at Austin.

Houston, March 7, 1877.

Have Faith in God.

There is no one thing that will add more to human strength than faith in God. The man that links himself with Diety in a holy trust is strong. The nation that trusts in God is made more powerful. There was a time when we were fighting for our independence. For seven long years our forefathers continued the struggle. A few feeble colonies, with three and a half millions of people, with a few raw militia, without money and without prestige, won our liberty—achieved our independence—and drove from our soil the armies of the most powerful nation on the globe at that day. Our forefathers had faith in God; Washington used to retire to the grove to pray. God was with America then, and made her strong. So in the recent war for the national unity. There were many dark days. At one time the clouds were thick around us—our troops were dying off—reverses had followed on many a field, and we were on the very borders of despair. It was at that moment doubtful what the issue would be. A Governor of a Western State telegraphed to our President: "Call out a million of men, and overrun the whole South with armed hands," or something to that effect. President Lincoln telegraphed back these words: "Stand still and see the salvation of God." Here was trust in, and recognition of a power higher than man. Just then God was leading our nation by the pillar of cloud. Then it was that the time had come to blot out our national curse, and it was done. The voice of the people spoke through their President and said to four millions of slave men and women, "Go free." The shackles fell off, the colored man came to the rescue of the nation under whose laws he had groaned, and from that day the smile of Providence was on us, and to-day the "salvation of God is seen" in a disenthralled—a united nation.

Have faith in God. Do you believe in Him? See the marks of design in all his works. The engine made with your hand reflects not half the skill which is seen in all the works of God. Every leaf and twig—every ray of light and every crystal—every thing in the universe tells us of God. And our bodies are "fearfully and wonderfully made." God is in our life—our ways are marked out by Him. He claims the service of our hearts. Let us have faith in him and be stong. In every trial of life, in all the labors of our life, in him we find solace, comfort, strength. Our highest aim should be to be true men. Never was there a better age in which to live than this—never was there a better country in which to live than this. If we have manhood, it has a value now and here. What wealth is now poured forth to be controlled? What activities now stir the heart of the nation? Make your mark on the age and on the world. Be something, do something in your sphere, whatever it may be, and if it be not our lot to have a national fame or rank among the nation's [illegible], if it be not our lot to shine among the scholars, yet we can be strong, and acquit ourselves like men. We honor the great generals who led our conquering armies to victory, but we do not forget the brave men of the rank and file, whose blood has made sacred our soil. So will we not forget the men who with strong arms and noble [illegible] push forward the car of [illegible] wealth, and extend by [illegible] industry the area of a nation's [illegible]

The Precious Gospel.

That which educates man up to the highest point is the Gospel. We must have an ideal. The architect constructs his building according to a plan. Take a piece of beautiful machinery and it was not built up by simply adding one piece to another, here a lever, there an arm, yonder a wheel. But first a plan was made, a nice adjustment of parts, and thus the machinest saw the machine all complete, even before a wheel or arm was made—his plan was his ideal. So in our life, we need an ideal, a pattern to work by. Now where do we find the best pattern? In history? What history? Rome? Greece? England? Surely not. The best man that ever lived was Jesus. Renan says so—Hume admits it, Buonapart said so, yet they were not all Christians, But facts cannot be denied. No such man has ever lived as Jesus. Hence the gospel gives us the best ideal, the best pattern by which to construct our lives. We cannot persuade all to be devout followers of Jesus, but if we could so move you, that you all would make Him the model of your manhood, we know that you would rise to a diviner life. Give your little girl an outline picture of a house or a tree, give her a board and crayon and she will try to imitate it. She will draw many crooked lines and make many mistakes. She will study the pattern instinctively, and her hand will soon follow the lines and angles until she can reproduce the picture. This is what the ideal will do for her. Let a man set Jesus before him—Jesus full of love, Jesus free from passion—meek, gentle, holy, and he will soon find himself desiring to be like Him, and as he desires to be like Him he will grow more and more like Him. It is a law of our very being. Let a man of refined sensibilities go into dens of iniquity and associate with vicious people and he may soon become just like his associates. Hence it is, the gospel is our text book of character, and Jesus is the great example of all the world.

The gospel is radical. It begins inside of a man and works out. The heart moulds the life. The hands on the face of a watch do not move the spring—the spring moves the hands. God does not begin our regeneration at the ends of our fingers, but in the heart. "The axe is laid at the root of the tree." "His fan is in his hand and will thoroughly purge his floor." There are, then, in man two forces—that within himself which assimilates him to his surroundings, and that which comes unto him from above. Thus the gospel, by offering to every man an image of goodness, an ideal set in the horizon of life, avails itself of a law of our nature in lifting us up, and then aids us by the infusion of a spirit that quickens and creates us anew. Jesus meant all this when He said to the Ruler that came to Him by night, "Marvel not, that I said unto thee, 'ye must be born again.'" There must be a radical change in us, else the gospel has not done its work. Christ is a pattern, but He is more than that, He is a Savior, which means that He helps us—works in us by the Spirit and so redeems us from sin.

Immortality.

One of the most extraordinary of the many wonderful phenomena of the insect world is the change of a crawling worm into a beautiful butterfly, organism, functions, appearance all changed, and the catterpillar, after this transformation, goes sporting away on wings of azure and gold. In its worm-state it devoured the substance of the green leaf, but in its butterfly existence it sips the delicate nectar of the flower cup. Take the Libellulida, or Dragonfly, its first existence was beneath the water in the form of a larva—a mere worm, burrowing in the mud and filth, but at a particular period in its existence, by a law of God, it rises and, on brilliant, irradiant wings of gauze, it goes away in the sunlight of Heaven. This does not prove that we are immortal, but it shows that there is a possibility of it. The power that can transform a mere worm into such an object of beauty can transform us—"when this corruptable shall put on incorruption."

The Young Men's Christian Association of Charleston, S. C., are holding open air meetings in all parts of the city. On a recent Sunday one was held in front of the city post-office at the hour when business men were waiting for the opening of the mail.

The Inauguration.

On Monday, March 5th, the eyes of not only this great nation but of the civilized world were centered on the city of Washington. On that day it was estimated that not less than one hundred thousand visitors from nearly all parts of the Union had congregated within the national capital. Railroad trains on all the roads leading thither were crowded with passengers, reminding one of the rush to Philadelphia to behold the wonders of the Centennial.

The curiosity was not to see the brow of some sprig of royalty decorated with a crown, but to participate in the ceremonies which should seal the agreement made by the peoples' representatives, that Rutherford B. Hayes should preside over the destinies of this great Republic during the ensuing four years. Of the great procession, the manner of dress of the foreign embassadors and their wives, the disposition of dignified men and bodies, and of the mere details of such a parade, the Washington newspapers have informed the world.

At about 10½ o'clock the Presidental party moved from the White House toward the capitol. In this procession were many of the most distinguished men of the nation. Pennsylvania Avenue was crowded with people who cheered the new President and Vice-President to the echo as their respective carriages passed along. At the capitol the ceremonies were very impressive. The oath of office was administered to Vice-President Wheeler by Senator Ferry in the Senate Chamber, and to President Hayes by Chief Justice Waite, at the east portico, in the presence of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand people, after which the President delivered his inaugural address in a clear voice and in an animated manner. The address was frequently applauded by the multitude within hearing distance. President Grant, through all the ceremonies, gave his attention to every particular. He cared for it in all of its details as a good mother would care for the marriage of her daughter. Mrs. Grant did not attend the inaugural ceremonies, but remained at the White House superintending the preparation of a collation for the new President, his family and friends. Thus, amid the ringing of bells, the booming of cannon, the music of bands and the surging of the multitude, the new President assumed formally the duties of his high office, thus transforming a private citizen, for he was not even then a Governor, into the ruler of one of the greatest nations of the world.

Let us breathe easier, we have passed the crisis. The ship of State has been steered safely away from the rocks—she rides gallantly on the high seas, with as noble a captain, we believe, as ever trod on a nation's quarter-deck.

Will President Hayes please everybody? No! That would be an impossibility. Let him do his whole duty to the whole nation. Let him take counsel out of the book which he pressed with his lips in front of the capitol with the eyes of forty millions of freemen upon him. Let him be true to the American citizen of whatever color or nationality, and though disappointed politicians may curse him, the people as a whole will sustain him, for the American people have good sense as well as a high appreciation of honor. He takes his position at a time fraught with most imminent perils, but let him be true to right principles and the Author of nations will bless his administration and make it a blessing to the age and to the world.

God save our President!
God save the State!

President Haye's Cabinet.

The Cabinet of President Hayes, as confirmed by the Senate on Saturday last, consists of the following gentlemen:

Secretary of State—Wm. M. Evarts, of New York.
Secretary of the Treasury—John Sherman, of Ohio.
Secretary of the Interior—Carl Schurz, of Missouri.
Postmaster General—Davis M. Key, of Tennessee.
Secretary of War—Chas. Devins, of Massachusetts.
Secretary of Navy—Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana.
Attorney General—George W. McCrary, of Iowa.

Lincoln was the President born of agitation; Grant the President born of revolution; Hayes the President of what we hope may prove the era of restoration.—Inter-Ocean.

Local Option in Texas.

Texas has a law providing that intoxicating drinks cannot be sold in any county, if by an election a majority of the voters in any county vote against it. The temperance people of the State are rallying their forces. Elections are being held nearly every week. Already about thirty counties have voted for prohibition. Thank God for this! Let our preachers and people every where stand firmly with the friends of temperance. The Methodist Episcopal Church is by her laws a total abstinence organization. Any minister or member can be expelled for taking intoxicating drinks except in cases of sickness.

This question of local option is no political question. It is a question of public morals. No minister is fit to preach the Gospel of Christ who will not give his influence and voice actively to help vote out grogshops by which men are protected in their work of damning the bodies and souls of their fellow-men. Vote "For Prohibition," every time.

GENERAL Cyrus Bussey of this city is prominently named for the collectorship of this port. Gen. Bussey served through the recent war on the Union side, where he won distinction. At the close of the war he settled in New Orleans in the cotton business, taking little part in politics. Gen. Bussey has twice been elected President of the Chamber of Commerce, and has the goodwill of all parties. In the judgment of most people in these parts, the President could not appoint a man who would be received with greater enthusiasm, and it is to be hoped that President Hayes will see the matter in this light. We look with much confidence for the appointment to be made.

Gold and silver are drawing so near together in value that it is pretty clear specie payments might have been resumed on the first of March. The premium on gold is now so small, and the fluctuations so little, that the gold brokers and speculators find their occupation unprofitable and the talk is to shut the Gold Room. It is only the gambling sales of speculators that have kept up the premium so long, and when the room closes, the premium will probably disappear or dwindle down to one per cent. or a half per cent. at the brokers' offices. What a history would be that of the Gold Room and its victims all over the continent.

The Young Mens' Christian Association Convention, held lately in Galveston, was a success. Delegates were present from the various parts of Texas, and the discussions were of a high order. Bros. Hall and Cree were present. Among the prominent home workers were Rev. F. von Schluembach, Drs. Shephard, Johns and Bunting, of Galveston. Hon. Wm. E. Dodge, who was in the State looking after his large railroad interests, was present, and spoke on Sunday night.

The young ladies of Ames M. E. Church, in this city, have recently purchased a fine new organ for the Church, taking the old one for the Sunday-school. The instrument was purchased from Mr. Philip Werlein, Baronne street, cornor of Union. Mr. W. sells instruments on very reasonable terms, and guarantees entire satisfaction to his customers. If you wish to purchase give him a call before deciding.

The Michigan Christian Advocate comes to us bright and fresh—it is a credit to the Advocate household, and is one of the very handsomest daughters of that numerous family. May her complexion always be as fresh and bright as now. We learn that, although the paper has only been in existence a couple of years, it has now a paying list of 5000, with a strong upward tendency.

The resignation of Governor Hayes was placed on file in the Governor's office about noon of March 2, and Lieutenant Governor Young notified of it. The resignation is as follows:

"Columbus, Feb. 18, 1877.
I hereby resign the office of Governor of the State of Ohio, my resignation to take effect the 2nd day of March next.
R. B. HAYES."

The state dinner given by President Grant to the members of his cabinet and their families, was the grandest one of the past eight years.

New Orleans University.

THE classes of New Orleans University will be examined Thursday, March 15, beginning at 9 a.m., and continuing until 2 p.m. The public are invited.

The third term will open Monday, March 19, at 9 a.m.

Our building has been thoroughly repaired and is in neat and perfect condition. Our library numbers one thousand volumes of good and choice books. By the liberality of Dr. Rust and of Mr. H. M. Ingham, of Cleveland, Ohio, our library is now excellent and very inviting. Our new organ in the newly furnished chapel is a joy to us in our daily worship. We are now prepared for a large increase of our students and for a prosperous term.

W. D. GODMAN.

March 10, 1877.

Rev. J. Emory Haynes, of Brooklyn, has withdrawn from the Ministry of the M. E. Church. Mr. Haynes had accepted a call to the pastorate of one of the prominent churches in Baltimore, but all of a sudden he withdraws to join the Baptists. Any man has a perfect right to choose where he shall preach and if Mr. Haynes can do more good in the Baptist Church than in the Methodist then let him go there. One thing is certain, notwithstanding we do occasionally lose a man in this way our ranks are quite full. Most of our Eastern Conferences, and many of the Western, though "pressed down and shaken together" are "running over" into other communions. We are sending them the leaven of Methodism. May it work well!

Senator Bruce and Congressman Lynch of Mississippi.

An Inter-Ocean correspondent at Washington, speaks thus of these two representative men of Mississippi:

U. S. Senator Bruce quietly and modestly took his seat in the Senate, and during the last session won the respect and admiration of every one in or out of Congress. He made two speeches—one on the Pinchback case, another on the Mississippi troubles. Both were models, as far as the composition was concerned, but were delivered with such hesitation and timidity as to greatly mar their effect. Mr. Bruce's history and characteristics were described by me in a letter last summer, and need not be repeated. Before he leaves the Senate—when the novelty of his position has worn off, and his timidity has been overcome—I predict that he will make his mark.

Mr. Lynch has proved himself one of the ablest, most conscientious, and active members that his race has ever sent to Congress. He would be a strong man if he was white; being black he is stronger. He was born a slave in Louisiana, but his mother and himself, being purchased from his father's master, were taken to Mississippi and placed on a plantation near Natchez, where they remained until the close of the war. Lynch got good opportunities for learning something, and earning something when the armies were around Natchez, and the first introduction into the mysteries of the alphabet was at a school started by the soldiers in a camp on his master's plantation. He learned rapidly, and after the soldiers left he went into a photograph gallery as man of all work, learned how to take pictures, and saved his money until he was able to buy a camera of his own. He made a good business out of it, and at once rose to prominence among his race, was elected to the City Council, then justice of the peace, then he was sent to the Legislature, and was Speaker of the lower house for two years. In 1872 he was elected to Congress, and in 1874 was re-elected.

VERY BEST PIANOS.—Chickering & Son, Boston and New York, are manufacturing three styles of new scale upright pianos, which they are shipping to Mr. Philip Werlein for his Southern trade. These pianos are regarded as absolutely perfect and the model piano of the world. The Chickerings during the past fifty years have made about 50,000 pianos, and it is no unusual thing to see a Chickerings 25 years in use, and in good playing order. What other piano has such a record for durability?

THE BIBLE.—The book that is older than our fathers, that is truer than tradition, that is more learned than universities, that is more infallible than popes, that is more orthodox than creeds, that is more powerful than ceremonies—the omnipotent Word of God—the wonder of the world, the boon of heaven.—Bishop Janes.

The Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia, persists in their determination not to occupy their new edifice, until it is paid for. The total cost of the building was $469,790. Thus far $390,400 has been raised, toward payment.

About one hundred miles further south the road runs through one of the longest tunnels in America, that of San Fernande, 6,967 feet in length.

Heavenly Treasures.

(The Sabbath-school lesson for March 25th being a Quarterly Review, we give, instead, the following extract of a sermon recently delivered in Boston, by Mr. Moody.)

I want to call your attention this afternoon to a few words that we shall find in the sixth chapter of Matthew and the nineteenth verse: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." Now if we are truly children of God and live as He would have us our treasures are in heaven and not on earth. I think the reason there are so many disappointed people is because they have been laying up treasures here on earth and they have been taking to themselves wings and flying away.

Let us see that our treasures are where Christ tells us to have them and then we shall certainly live for heaven ourselves. A great many are wondering why they don't get on better, why they are spiritually poor. Now, it is not only rich people, but there are many poor people who have their hearts set on things down here. They are not rich towards God. You hear that a man has died worth a million. Why, my dear friends, he was not worth anything when he died. He was worth nothing at all the minute after he died. All he was worth then was what he had up yonder. If a man isn't rich toward God he dies a pauper. If our hearts are set on things down here we don't grow heavenly minded, we don't grow spiritually, and we are dwarfed and crimped as we should not be if we laid up treasures in heaven. I am told that those men who go up in balloons take up sand bags with them, and as they want to go higher they throw out sand. I advise some of those rich men to throw out sand. You have too much sand. Give out your money, if you want to be rich toward God, rich eternally. Don't hold on to it so. We talk about it being more blessed to give than to receive, but how few of us carry it out in our lives. Yet that is the teaching of Scripture, and if men would give more and be willing to do more for others, they would become rich towards God; and then how easy it would be for them to live for heaven.

A friend of mine said he was in Liverpool some time ago and a vessel came up the harbor, up the Mersey, and it was clear down to the water's edge, and he wondered why it didn't sink. He inquired, and found it was loaded with lumber and waterlogged. And at the same time another vessel came steaming up the harbor, with full sail set, without any trouble. And that's the way with a great many men in the church. They are loaded down with lumber and waterlogged. They have so many treasures down here that they cannot live for God, and their minds are not on things above. A lady some time ago lay in bed—she was one of those bed-ridden saints whom God is polishing up for His kingdom—and she observed a bird building its nest near the ground outside her window. And she wanted to speak to the bird and say, "Bird, build higher." But she couldn't make the bird understand, and it went on and built its nest there, and laid its eggs and hatched them, but one morning she observed the feathers were all strewn around, the bird was gone and the nest was broken up. The cat had come and destroyed it. Ah! how many of us build down here too low. Let us build up higher. If we build up yonder we shall not be disappointed in our old age. A great many old people are soured in their old age. What is the trouble? It is because they have been earthly-minded. The heavenly-minded grow sweeter and sweeter, and brighter and brighter till they are ushered into glory. Some men have kept only one corner of their hearts for God, and the result is that in their old age they are not real sunny Christians; they don't glow and brighten. The nearer a Christian gets to the eternal harbor the more he ought to shout for joy.

Now, there is another thing which we find in Paul's epistle to the Hebrews: "There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God." This is not a place of rest. We have as many members of our churches of the resting sort as we want. No, we will work till Jesus comes, and then we'll rest at home. But this is not the place to rest in. Don't go into your church meetings to rest; go in there to work. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they shall rest from their labors and their works shall follow them"—that is one of the treasures of heaven. There "the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary shall be at rest." I know of a man who had great success as a minister at one time. At last he was not so successful, and he wished that he was in heaven. And he had a dream. He dreamt that he had died and was taken to the Eternal City, and there the Savior met him and took him in His chariot to the battlements of Heaven, and said, "Look down yonder." And he said, "Why, I see that dark world I have just escaped from." "Look again." "Why, I see men blindfolded and falling into a bottomless pit." "Now," said the Savior, "will you stay here, or go back and tell those men their condition?" He says he has never wished to be dead since, but to live as long as he can, to tell men of the Savior, and to save them from ruin. Let us work now, friends, all we can, and by and by we shall rest through eternal ages. There is something else we have got in Heaven and that is our reward. Will you turn over, if you have your bibles, to the Epistle of Timothy, the fourth chapter and the eighth verse: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." Then in Peter's first epistle I want to call your attention to one verse, the fourth verse in the first chapter, which says: "To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." Many people are making the mistake of looking for their reward down here. Remember, your reward is yonder. No man is ready to work for God until he is willing to take his reward up yonder. What does Christ say? "When the world persecutes you, rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." And when the Son of God calls it great it must be great indeed. That's what made Paul such a mighty warrior. He was not working for his reward down here. Ah, my friends, I never read that life of St. Paul but I am ashamed of myself and of the Christianity of the nineteenth century.

He didn't have any committee to build him a building like this. Look at him going down to Corinth. He had his bundle under his arm, his tools I suppose, to make tents with. He went down there and found some cheap lodgings on some side street, and then he began to preach, and then the Jews began to put him down; they didn't want him—they cast him out. After he had been preaching eight months they had a committee, but it was more a vigilance committee than one of help, and they took him out of the city and gave him thirty-nine stripes. If a man got one stripe now-a-days what a martyr he would be. He went to another place, and they stoned him and left him for dead, and I don't know but he was, and God raised him. "What are you going to do now, Paul?" they said. "I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling," he said. The devil got his match when he got Paul. On he went and they could't stop him. "Five times I received of the Jews forty stripes save one." But he leaped into the field again and went on preaching the Gospel as before. All the devils in hell could'nt stop him. God said "Preach the Gospel," and he went and preached it. That's what America wants—men who will preach the Gospel in season and out of season. A great cry came to him to go over into Macedonia, and over he goes, and the first thing that happened to him was thirty-nine more stripes. He and Silas were cast into prison, his feet put in the stocks, his hands in chains, and his back black and bleeding. And he and Silas began to sing. If it had been you and I we should have sung "Hark from the tombs a doeful sound." And they had just got through their prayers when God shouted from heaven, Amen, and the prison doors shook and the Philippian jailor was converted, he and all his family. Look at Paul again at Rome. The time of his departure is at hand. He took up his pen and wrote to Timothy: "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course." I don't know what Boston would have done with him. They would certainly have called him a bigot, but he held on to the faith. Now the time had come for him to be executed, and he passed over that highway—they took him two miles out of the city. He went with a firm, proud step. I see him at the gullotine. His head is cut off; the devil can have his head, but God shall have his soul. I see him leap into a chariot and they ring the bells of heaven and there is great joy there as he goes sweeping through the gates and up the shinning way, and you hear them shout, "Well done! Well done!" and as it rolls on to the throne of God I hear Christ say to him, "Well done, Paul, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!" See that no man takes your crown. There will be a great many crownless Christians in heaven. See to it that you do not loose your reward, and remember it is up there, not down here. One more thought before I close. What occasions joy in heaven? You know how excited this country has been about the last election. I don't know that they took any notice of it in heaven at all. But if a man or woman in this assembly should repent to-day there would be joy in heaven. I don't know that it would be noticed in Boston. But in heaven there is joy over one sinner that repenteth.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent, and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, that the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, billious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

WHILE Dr. H. James was attached to the British Medical Staff in the East Indies, his high position enabled him to call about him the best chemists, physicians and scientists of the day, and while experimenting with and among the natives, he accidentally made the discovery that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently CURED. During the many years of his sojourn there he devoted his time to the treatment of Lung Diseases, and upon his retirement he left with us books and papers containing full particulars, showing that every one can be his own physician and prepare his own medicine, and such information as we have received we now offer to the public without price, only asking that each remit a three cent stamp for return postage. SOUTHWESTERN Christian Advocate, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT. 1877.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The Southwestern is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2. The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms.

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the SOUTHWESTERN one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 50 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year.

Chufas.

I will give your readers the benefit of my experience, and what I know of the Chufa. It is not the nut grass although it may be a grass nut, and a very valuable one too. There is no trouble to get rid of it—being easily killed, and pigs will root out every vestige of it in a short while, when they have access to the patch. It is a most wonderful producer, and makes more on poor land than anything you can plant. It will make when peas will fail to make. On good land the Chufa will yield correspondingly a more abundant crop than anything you can plant. Ground peas are a great exhauster of land—chufas are not, and will make with less work than anything you plant. They will make a very fair crop planted between hills of corn without work, save the last plowing of corn. As a feed for hogs, they far excel the ground pea, and make ten times as much—the hog preferring them to the goober or ground pea. I think they fatten faster and make harder flesh and lard than the ground pea, almost equaling corn in their fattening and solid qualities. They possess, too, this advantage: they give a most excellent flavor to the flesh of hogs fattened on them, such as neither the ground pea or corn give. Crows do not infest the chufa patch, as they do the ground pea. Chickens, turkeys and pigs, as well as the human family, are very fond of them. They are more tedious to gather, but you need not gather more than you wish to plant, and the rest will be gathered by your hogs and chickens, which will get fat on them, saving all trouble. They impart to the flesh of poultry their peculiar flavor—like celery—a flavor which every one who eats chickens like. The tops are eaten by mules and cows with apparent relish. On a very small area you can raise enough to plant hundreds of acres, and by planting the poor places in your corn fields that will make nothing else, and, if you wish, between your corn, the problem of raising your own bacon is solved. I cannot say what would be their yield, per acre, on ordinary land, but from my observation think it would be immense. Very few persons would take the trouble to gather an acre, although it takes but few to plant an acre. I have raised them for two years, and am so much pleased that I shall plant more largely another year. I have saved several bushels for planting, and no doubt could gather several hundred. —D. H., in Southern Farmer.

Cultivate only your best Land.

It is well to consider that the proper cultivation of small rich farms has many advantages, and is far more profitable than the cultivation of large poor ones, with all the attending drawbacks, as keeping up extensive enclosures—slip-shod, shallow and unseasonable plowing and [illegible], if any at all, [illegible] loss of time, [illegible] reaping, hauling, [illegible] other disadvantages [illegible] mention. Many [illegible] in trying to make [illegible] poor, and covering [illegible] and have utterly [illegible] has ever failed [illegible] devoted all his energies [illegible] a small, rich surface [illegible] best land wherever located [illegible] give it deep plowing [illegible] the fall and winter, and then [illegible] it as thoroughly as possible, just as sure as careful attention [illegible] feeding produces fine [illegible] so sure will good culture [illegible] produce the [illegible]. Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 13, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition, during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

usefulness before every young man, or which it is lawful to aspire. Every man should aim at being in such a position as to do the greatest amount of good. Such an ambition God will reward.

But whatever may be our notions of human greatness, it has its real foundation in manhood, in merit and not in the mere accidents of birth. Looking at man as such, every man is inherently great. See what he is; see what he accomplishes by the powers of mind with which he is endowed. But why do some men accomplish so much more than others? We do not say that all men have equal talent, some are much more richly gifted than others, but with this admission all men are great. There are many who go through life unpacked, as a chest of tools passes over a railroad. There are powers lodged in every man which when called out will astonish man. There are young men in our shops, and stores and offices, and even walking the streets who are denying their manhood. If they were to stir themselves—do something they would be astonished at their powers. Many a man lives a sluggish life that might have been a life of activity. Many a man passes over the whole route of the world without ever knowing himself, or the world ever knowing him. John Howard, the great philanthropist, at twenty-seven was only a common man. By an accident he was made a prisoner of war in France, where he saw the cruelties of French prison life, and when he obtained his freedom he gave himself up to the mission of reforming the world's prisons. Young men, there is something for you to do—there will be an opportunity for you to do it—you have powers to qualify you for your work; then be in earnest. A great man once wrote "Life is but a walking shadow; a poor player that struts and frets his hour upon the stage, and then is heard no more. It is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." That is not true. Another has said with more truth—

"Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul."

An Encouraging Dream.

I have read of one who dreamed a dream, when in great distress of mind about religion. He thought he stood in the outer court of Heaven, and he saw a glorious host marching up, singing sweet hymns and bearing the banners of victory; and they passed by him through the gate, and when they vanished he heard in the distance sweet strains of music.

"Who are they?" he asked.

"They are the goodly fellowship of the prophets, who have gone to be with God."

And he heaved a deep sigh as he said: "Alas! I am not one of them, and never shall be, and I can not enter there."

By and by there came another band, equally lovely in appearance, and equally triumphant, and robed in white. They passed within the portals, and again were shouts of welcome heard within.

"Who are they?" he asked.

"They are the goodly fellowship of the apostles."

"Alas!" he said, "I belong not to that fellowship, and can not enter there."

He still lingered and waited in the hope that he might yet go in; but the next multitude did not encourage him, for they were the noble army of martyrs. He could not go with them, nor waive their [illegible] branches. He waited, still [illegible] that the next was a company of [illegible] ministers of Christian [illegible] he could not go with [illegible]. At last, as he watched, he [illegible] all the rest, [illegible] marching and singing [illegible]; and in front [illegible] that was a sin[illegible] the thief that died upon [illegible] by the Savior; next [illegible], and saw them such [illegible] the like; and when [illegible] could see who they [illegible] thought [illegible] will be no cheating about [illegible] it seemed [illegible] with seven [illegible] "And [illegible] that are mighty [illegible] mighty grace."

To the Reader.

Our wisest and best men assure us that no more important work demands the energies and contributions of the Church and nation than that of furnishing Christian education for the five millions of freedmen in our land. Heart-rending appeals for help come to us almost daily from this poor people; Christian teachers and missionaries moved by the Holy Spirit offer their services; but the money, necessary to send them to the field, and provide for them the comforts of life in their sacrificing work, is wanting. Will Methodists, for whom Christ has done so much, turn a deaf ear to these appeals? The following questions are commended to your prayerful consideration:

What shall I now do for the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

1. Shall I give a hundred dollars more or less, according to my ability, to sustain the self-sacrificing teachers now in the field, suffering for the want of their overdue salary, with which to pay their board and replenish their wardrobe?

2. Shall I give twenty-five or fifty dollars to keep in school a year a promising young man, called of God to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ to his people, who can not remain in school without aid?

3. Shall I give five hundred dollars to support a Christian lady in mission work among the ignorant and degraded freedwomen in the South?

4. Shall I give ten thousand dollars for the endowment of a professorship in one of these colleges for the education of this poor people, the income of which will sustain a Christian teacher in this work as long as time shall last?

5. Shall I give from five to twenty thousand dollars for the erection of a school building in one of the locations where it is imperatively demanded, in which students may be prepared to preach the Gospel and teach school?

At Greensboro, North Carolina, we have purchased, by the liberality of Lyman Bennett, a beautiful tract of land, overlooking the town, for our Seminary; but, for want of funds, have been compelled to postpone the erection of a school building. Our school is now taught in the basement of the meeting-house, a place utterly unfit for the accommodation of the pupils. Unless a more convenient place can soon be secured, we shall be under the necessity of abandoning this enterprise, so full of promise and so essential to the existence of the North Carolina Conference.

At Holly Springs, Mississippi, an additional building is a necessity. The bricks for it have been paid for, but we have no money to put up the building, and dare not involve the Society still further in debt. The Shaw University has furnished the best preachers for the Mississippi Conference, and the most efficient teachers for the State. Shall it be crippled in its work so essential to the safety of the nation, and the prosperity of the Church, for the want of a few thousand dollars.

At Jacksonville, Florida, five hundred dollars must be paid in a few weeks to the workmen who have just completed a building for the students of Cookman Institute. Its heroic principal can not bear the burden of the debt much longer.

At Marshall, Texas, the seat of the Wiley University, an appropriation of five thousand dollars for school purposes is absolutely necessary. The University can not exert a controlling influence without it.

The Normal Institute at Huntsville, Alabama, suffers for the want of a Home in which the teachers may reside and the students be trained. Three thousand dollars can meet this necessity.

At Little Rock, Arkansas, we are inaugurating a school enterprise which must fail without the assistance of a thousand dollars.

Dear reader, in view of your responsibility to God, and the claims of this suffering people, take your choice of these charities, and forward your gift to L. Hitchcock, Cincinnati, or R. Nelson, New York City, Treasurers of the Freedmen's Aid Society.

I. W. WILEY, Pres't.

R. S. RUST, Corresponding Sec'y.

Money.

Wealth is potent in its own sphere, but impotent beyond it. It can put a telegraph under the sea and cover the land with a network of wires as with a spider's web. It can build railroads and bridge oceans. It can have houses and lands and every material advantage; but here its power stops. It cannot purchase goodness, or justice, or gentleness, or patience, or love, or true friendship. It cannot do anything to make character stronger or life [illegible]. It can say to the minister, I will feed you and clothe you while you are making men better, and to the teacher, I will take care [illegible] while you are making men [illegible]; but it can do nothing without the basis of motives or the heart [illegible]. It can build railroads, [illegible] cannot build men.—Christian [illegible]

Profits of Cattle-Raising in Western Texas.

As these figures will appear large to persons at a distance, we give the name and postoffice address of each party mentioned; the data has been obtained, in every instance, from the parties themselves, or their intimate friends, and great caution have been observed to place the results below rather than above the truth.

The Adams brothers, whose father settled twelve miles west of San Antonio in 1851, commenced with two hundred head of stock cattle. The old gentleman is long since dead, but his sons have steadily followed the business, and now offer their entire stock for sale. They propose to deliver, at their various pens within range, sixty-eight thousand head of cattle, all of their own mark and brand, within ninety days after signing contract, at five dollars specie per head, and give the purchaser all there may be over, which they believe will be fully ten thousand head. This excess they offer as an inducement for some one to buy their cattle. These gentlemen sold eight thousand head of beeves this year at twelve dollars gold per head.

Mr. James Low, Rio Frio, McMullen county, commenced stock-raising in 1856, with ten cows and calves; owned one negro man whom he hired out for one cow and calf per month. Mr. Low attended to stocks of cattle for one-third of the increase, bought stocks upon credit, and paid for them by sales of beeves. He now has fifty thousand head of stock cattle, five thousand head of beeves, and has branded this year fifteen thousand head of calves.

Capt. Richard King has on his ranche at Santa Gertrudes, about thirty-five miles west of Corpus Christi, fifty thousand head of horned cattle, ten thousand head of horses and mules, twenty-two thousand sheep, and eight thousand goats. He branded this year fifteen thousand calves, and sent overland to Kansas this year five thousand head of beeves, all of his own mark and brand. Mr. King came to Texas a poor cabin boy on a vessel. Estimate his wealth.

L. B. Harris, postoffice San Antonio, Texas, commenced stock-raising in 1856 with one hundred and fifty head of cattle. In 1858 he traded a negro man for one hundred and fifty head more. This gentleman invested from the proceeds of his cattle two thousand five hundred dollars in negro property, which was lost by emancipation. He now owns property in the city of San Antonio valued at	$10,000

Real estate in the country...	4,000
A pasture fence which cost...	7,000
Sixty thousand head of cattle, worth $5 per head......	300,000
Two hundred saddle horses, $35 per head............	7,000
Three hundred stock horses, $25 per head............	7,500
Total............	$335,500

Mr. Harris has supported a family of eight children from the proceeds of his cattle, and educated them well. He last year bought a stock of cattle for sixty thousand dollars, on which he owes twenty-five thousand dollars, but has securities on hand with which to meet the debt.

M. S. Culver, postoffice Gussettsville, Nueces county. This young man commenced working with Mr. T. J. James in 1865 for a pro rata of the mavericks instead of regular wages. This gave him the first start in cattle. He then took a stock to attend to for one-third of the increase. Other parties gave him one dollar per head for gathering their beeves, and fifty cents per head for branding their calves. He now has seven thousand head of cattle, eighty saddle horses, a good rancho, well improved, with an enclosed pasture of four hundred acres. He has worked hard, dealt honestly with all men, and richly deserves the splendid fortune he has so rapidly acquired. This statement has been furnished by Mr. Alexander Coker, of Oakville, Live Oak county, an authority that no one in this country can doubt. Mr. Culver is but the type of hundreds I might particularize throughout the country. His property will now be cheap at fifty thousand dollars specie, and, if he lives ten years longer, will probably amount to over three hundred thousand dollars.

Thomas O'Connor, postoffice San Patricio, Texas, was discharged from the army of the Republic of Texas in 1837. His entire earthly possessions then consisted of a Spanish pony, saddle and bridle, two old belt pistols, one of which was broken off at the breech, and one rifle gun, all of which were much the worse for having been in constant use in obtaining our independence.

At this time, 1871, he has eighty thousand head of cattle, worth four hundred thousand dollars; six leagues, or twenty-six thousand six hundred and sixty-four acres of valuable river land, cheap at five dollars per acre, two hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and twenty dollars; five hundred head of saddle and stock horses, all improved, worth twenty thousand dollars; sent one drove of one thousand two hundred and twenty-five beeves to Kansas this year, and was largely interested in three other droves.

We have the data of hundreds of other cases, equally as notable as the above, but think these sufficient. There is no denying the fact, every one who has invested in cattle and given them half attention, has made money, while those who have attended to them strictly are now rich. It is difficult to estimate the profits per cent. I have heard some men declare it would reach thirty-three and one-third per annum, others say a stock of cattle will double themselves every two years; much, of course, depends upon the care taken of them. There is no disease whatever here among our cattle, nor do we prepare any manner of shelter, or one mouthful of food for them the year round.—West Texas Guide.

Mary's Little Lamb.

There is hardly a child in the broad land who has not become familiar with the verses, "Mary had a little Lamb," nor a college student but has sung them to a dozen different tunes. It has been parodied, paraphrased and translated into the dead languages. And yet scarce any one knows who is the author or whether it is fictitious or founded on fact. But it is the true account of an incident that happened in 1814, not fifty miles from Boston. And "Mary," a delightful old lady of threescore and ten, still lives and cherishes the memory of the event. The writer, on a recent visit, craved from her own lips the true story of the affair, and will reproduce it.

"It was when I was nine years old," she said, "and we lived upon the farm. I used to go out every morning with father to see the cows and sheep. They all knew me, and the cows, old Broad and Shorthorn and Brindle, would low a good-morning when I came to their stalls. One cold day we found that during the night twin lambs had been born. You know that sheep will often disown one of twins, and this morning one poor little lamb was pushed out of the pen into the yard. It was almost starved and almost frozen, and father told me I might have it if I could make it live. So I took it into the house, wrapped it in a blanket, and fed it on peppermint and milk all day. When night came I could not bear to leave it for fear it would die, so mother made me up a little bed on the settle and I nursed the poor thing all night, feeding it with a spoon, and by morning it could stand. After this we brought it up by hand until it grew to love me very much, and would stay with me wherever I went unless it was tied. I used before going to school in the morning to see that the lamb was all right and securely fastened for the day. Well, one morning, when my brother Nat and I were all ready, the lamb could not be found, and, supposing that it had gone out to pasture with the cows, we started on. I used to be a great singer, and the lamb would follow the sound of my voice. This morning, after we had gone some distance, I began to sing, and the lamb, hearing me, followed on and overtook us before we got to the school-house. As it happened, we were early, so I went in very quietly, took the lamb into my seat, where it went to sleep, and I covered it up with my shawl. When the teacher came and the rest of the scholars, they did not notice anything amiss, and all was quiet until my spelling class was called. I had hardly taken my place before the pattering of little feet was heard coming down the aisle, and the lamb stood beside me ready for its word. Of course the children all laughed, and the teacher laughed, too, and the poor creature had to be turned out of doors. But it kept coming back, and at last had to be tied in the wood-shed until night. Now, that day, there a young man in school, John Roulston, of Boston, who was on a visit to one of the boys, and came as a spectator. He was very much pleased over what he saw in our school, and a few days after gave us the first three verses of the song. How or when it got into print I don't know."

Thus she ran on, telling of the care she bestowed on her pet until it grew to be a sheep, and she would curl its long wool over a stick. Then she brought out a pair of her little-girl stockings, knitted of yarn spun from the lamb's wool, the heels of which had been raveled out and given away piecemeal, as mementoes. No one can doubt that she whose youth was rendered famous by the love for an unfortunate animal, has lived a life of beneficence and charity. With a heart overflowing with love toward all God's creatures, she has indeed lived to care for the needy and destitute, and to be a mother to the motherless. And now, in a green old age, she is surrounded by those whom her warm heart long since taught to cling to her and follow as the lamb in her youth.—Springfield Republican.

Socrates as a Prophet.

Of all the men of the ancient pagan world Socrates, the Athenian (born B. C. 469), stands pre-eminent as a man possessed of the spirit of prophecy. When we think of his self-denial in the interests of others, the simplicity and purity of his life, the ardor and constancy of his faith in God, the sublime spirituality of his teachings and their general agreement with the New Testament, the practical aim of his thirty years of missionary labor, and finally his death, not unworthy a Christian confessor's, we can not refrain from believing that he was, as he himself said in his last speech, "God's gift to the state," a prophet to the Gentiles in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

Neander says of him, "He appears to us as the forerunner of a higher development of humanity, as the greatest man of the ancient world, one in whom the spirit of that world going beyond itself strove after a more glorious future, whose whole appearance seems invested in a mystery and riddle corresponding to his prophetic character." Grote tells us that he was a "cross-examining missionary," that he spent his life in public apostolic dialectics," that he was habitually actuated by "his persuasion of a special religious mission." His great friend and disciple closes the "Phædo," which Cicero declared he could never read without tears, with these words: "Such was the end of our friend, whom I may truly call the wisest and truest and best of all men whom I have ever known." The points of resemblance between Socrates and the Hebrew prophets are worthy of special notice.—National Repository for April.

The Yellowstone National Park, located in the extreme northwestern corner of Wyoming Territory, is 65 miles long and 55 miles broad, comprising 3,575 square miles. It is probable that no other area of equal dimensions on the globe contains so many objects of wonder. Hot springs, geysers, waterfalls, mountains, and canons abound, while the natural scenery is beyond description. Within this area are more hot springs and geysers than in all the remainder of the globe.

WHEN a smart looking dog deliberately uncurls himself from within the altar rail, stretches, yawns, and with a low remark in his own language, looks up at the preacher who is saying, "And in the sixth place, allow me to remark, beloved brethren," the scene is—well,—extremely touching to say the least of it, and the average dogmatic preacher will do well to give a circumstance so pathetic some consideration.

General News.

President Hayes will be 55 years old on the 4th of next October.

Nearly one thousand people are living in canvass tents near Fort Worth, Texas.

Nineteen young Liberians are in colleges in this country preparing for usefulness in their native land.

It is said that 500,000 freedmen are willing to emigrate to Africa.

Grasshoppers are in large quantities and lively condition in Grimes county, Texas.

A man in Tioga County, Pa., made a snow house 30 feet high, 20 feet long, and 10 feet wide, for his children, and filled it with snow furniture.

It is said one hundred Scotch Presbyterians will settle in Navarro county, Texas.

Dr. Schaff, was, on February 1st, on the Mediterranean, within a day's sail of Alexandria. His route is to go up the Nile, and then across the desert to Sinai, and to Jerusalem. He expects to be in Beyroot in May, and in Edinburgh in July to attend the great Pan-Presbyterian council.

The Neches and Sabine rivers, Texas, are navigable to points which now send 25,000 to 30,000 bales of cotton to market.

Texarkana is situated in two States, and of course in two counties. This is rather amusing, but in course of time may involve perplexing complications.

The Railway Age gives a list of 86 railroads that were either sold under foreclosure, were placed in the hands of receivers, or defaulted in this country in 1876. They had a mileage of 14,179 miles, and represented capital amounting to $612,509,000. This is nearly one-fifth of both the mileage and the capital of the railway interest in the United States.

The whole number of Popes is 257. Of these 104 were Romans, 103 natives of other parts of Italy; 15 Frenchmen, 9 Greeks, 7 Germans, 5 Asiatics, 3 Africans, 3 Spaniards, 2 Dalmatians, 1 Hebrew, 1 Thracian, 1 Dutchman, 1 Portuguese, 1 Candiot, and 1 Englishman. Nine pontiffs have reigned less than one month, 30 less than one year, and 11 more than 20 years. Only 5 have occupied the pontifical chair over 23 years.

An application has been received at the dead-letter office from Mr. Palmer Gardner, of Burlington, Wisconsin, for a letter mailed to him in 1835. The letter contained a certificate of deposit for $360, issued by the Onondago bank of Syracuse, New York, and was sent from that place in October, 1835, by Wm. N. Gardner to his brother, Palmer Gardner, at "Detroit, Michigan Territory." It was not claimed at Detroit, and was sent to the dead-letter office, at Washington, and thence back to the postmaster at Syracuse. The post-master was unable to find the sender and returned it to the dead-letter office, where it has lain among the dusty files until the Centennial exhibition. It was sent to the Centennial exhibition and there chanced to be seen by an acquaintance of Mr. Gardner, who informed him of the fact. Thus, after a lapse of forty years, the letter reaches the party for whom it was intended. The postage on it at the time it was sent was twenty-five cents.

It is announced that the British Museum has recently received another important contribution of Eastern antiquities, being the last collection made by the late George Smith, at Babylon. They are mostly tablets, and embrace about two thousand specimens. They were stored in earthenware jars, which were discovered in a mound near Hillah, the earth having been washed away by the heavy rains of the past two seasons. It is said that the memoranda on the tablets relate to the business of a banking firm, and record the sales of various kinds of property, lands, slaves, etc., the law of money, forms of mortgages, and other matters pertaining to the transactions of such a business. On each is found the date, day, month and year of the reigning king, according to the time when the transactions took place. They are, therefore, very valuable as additions to the chronological history of "Babylon the mighty," and as exemplifying in part the nature of the business of her people. The tablets extend over three reigns, those of Darius, Cyrus and Cambyses. The inscriptions on the tablets reveal other interesting facts. One presents a complete calendar of the Babylonian year, "supposed to be," says the account from which we write, "the office almanac of the firm." The collection also embraces two bronze statues representing deities, with a single exception the only Babylonian bronzes extant. These relics go to show that the civilization of Babylon was of a comparatively high order, peculiar to itself, yet in advance of most of the nations of the earth at the present day.

Austin, Texas.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is fairly rooted in Austin, the capital of Texas. The first Church organized was Wesley Chapel, which has grown to be one of the largest and most intelligent colored congregations in the South. It now owns a valuable property, consisting of a large stone church, capable of seating six hundred people, and a good parsonage. The present pastor, Rev. C. L. Madison, is an earnest and studious Methodist minister. We predict for him a leading position in his Conference many years, should his life be spared. Brother Madison sends to this office a list of seventy-three subscribers, with the cash for a good number, and gives assurance that all will be paid within thirty days. What single fact can more clearly proclaim the permanency and good character of our work among the colored people of the South than their pastors and people taking hold of our Church paper with such a will? Bishop Bowman says we can judge of the character of a Methodist congregation by the number of ADVOCATES taken among its members. By this standard Wesley Chapel, Austin, makes a good showing.

Janes Church was the next organized in our work in Austin. A great mistake was made in its location. The Church was needed, greatly needed. Among the ten thousand people of Austin, five years ago, were many families who were either members of or friendly to the Methodist Episcopal Church. As the population has grown the number has increased. They are not at home in the M. E. Church South, even if their welcome to that Church was cordial. If Janes Chapel had been located in the center of the city, before this it would have been a strong, self-supporting Church. The present building is a beautiful gothic brick, worth, with the lots, $12,000. It is one of the most beautiful church buildings in Texas. The present pastor, Rev. T. C. Reade, is an able minister, lately transferred from Ohio. Could he give his whole time to the Church his success would be insured. At present the society is building a commodious two-story parsonage, which will be a great help in supporting the pastor. Janes Chapel will yet be a leading Church in Austin. The present building would make an excellent place for a German church and school. Property should at once be purchased near the center of the city and the work of looking after the friends of our Church taken hold of in earnest. Here is a problem for Dr. Brush and his co-laborers to solve.

Our German congregation owns a neat, well-finished church and parsonage. The present pastor is Rev. Ferdinand [illegible], and indications are favorable for a strong, vigorous Church. Our Germans [illegible] themselves to stay. Our Southern Methodism may well be [illegible] of our German work in Texas and Louisiana.

Rev. W. M. Brush, Presiding Elder, of Austin District, resides in Austin, and his presence and advice [illegible]. No truer [illegible] are in our Southern work [illegible] and his devoted wife. Rev. [illegible], Presiding Elder, of [illegible] District, and Rev. [illegible], Presiding Elder of Waco [illegible], reside in Austin. Bro. [illegible] and his accomplished wife [illegible] the rough side of itinerant life in the South. She is a worthy representative of Chicago's [illegible] cultured Methodism. Austin is rapidly assuming the character and sentiments of a national city. Her State buildings are creditable, and others projected for still better ones. Her railroad connections are now excellent for the South, East and North, and will soon extend south-west to San Antonio. The surrounding scenery is mountainous, and, of course, picturesque. No city in the South can boast of a better climate. Property steadily advances, and the talk among real estate men reminds one of Chicago before the panic. National sentiments and feelings are coming to rule. The Statesman, one of the best daily papers in the State, while it supported Tilden, now warmly stands by the administration of President Hayes. The same paper supports local prohibition, and gives a good editorial on "Hayes and whisky," to show that while Hayes proposes to deal justly by the South, and calls on good men to help him, Texas should vote out whiskey, as the strongest ally of ruffianism and Ku Kluxism. Northern enterprise and people are filling the city. Only a few bourbons in the different callings want to keep up sectional hate and strife. Political and eclesiastical bourbonism must go to the wall. In this whole South, and one of the chief centers of the new Gospel of free thought, and advance will be Austin.

From Brenham, Texas.

Brenham, Texas, is an enterprising town on the Texas Central Railroad, eighty miles below Austin. It is in the midst of a large and wealthy German population. Rev. E. F. Streeter, has charge of our German Church. He and his wife are cultured and devoted Methodists, and their works do follow them. This brother is hereafter to be known in our Southern Methodism as Professor Streeter, not as a matter of compliment, but because, as the head and chief of Emanuel Institute, he is entitled to that title. Our German Methodists in Texas have located a school at Brenham, and given it that name, and Professor Streeter will have it in charge. As the name indicates, we believe that this school will still further demonstrate that God is with our German workers in Texas.

Our other Church in Brenham is presided over by Rev. L. Woodward. The congregation is a large one and is one of our best in Texas. Near the Church lives Rev. B. O. Watrous one of the old and honored members of the Texas Conference; also Rev. O. Watrous, who, in addition to having charge of Brenham Circuit, teaches in the public school. The SOUTHWESTERN is felt to be a great need to help our work in this city—over twenty subscribe and pay for it.

The public school system of Brenham is a credit to the place, and indicates a very commendable spirit of enterprise. Ample accommodations are provided for all the children to attend school. Something is received from the Peabody Fund, and a small proportion from the State school fund, and the balance is made up by local taxation. Would that this determination to educate the youth of both colored and white people controlled public sentiment in every town and county of Texas.

University Examination.

The term examination at the New Orleans University came off on Thursday 15th inst. A large number of the friends of the School, Patrons and Pastors of the several churches were present, manifesting considerable interest.

Since Dr. Godman's return he has been busying himself in making sundry very desirble, improvements in and around the buildings. The ceilings have been kalsomined, the wood work has been painted, the walls tinted, and we almost came to the conclusion that its perfect home likeness makes it a more attractive place than many another great college with its stiff stateliness and coldness. This is a real home; it is cozy and charming, just the place for strange young men or women coming to the city to feel [illegible] and contented.

The examinations were very satisfactory—some more so than others, [illegible] well. The class in Greek [illegible] of thorough drill. [illegible] Godman are in the [illegible] their culture and [illegible] God and their mission [illegible] with the deep in[illegible] the peculiar [illegible] giving their lives [illegible] to the University hundreds of students. The Colored People and Local Option.

The Temperance people of Texas, without distinction of party or church, are making a grand rally, county by county, to carry local prohibition under what is known as the local option law. In many of the counties the colored people hold the balance of power, and in nearly every county where the law has been defeated it has been because the colored people have largely voted against the law.

We are sorry this is so. No one thing is destroying the colored people of the South more than whiskey. Not many of them have land, but nearly all have a little money each day. They are easily led to imitate the vices of white men. Fashionable drinking in the South is very common. Saloon keepers know well how to entice the colored man into their dens and get his twenty-five or fifty cents. Even the store keepers have their keg of whisky in one corner, and colored men are asked to help themselves to a free drink before they begin to trade. We learned of one case where a man and his wife had raised a bale of cotton, and he brought it in to sell. The merchant first gave him all the whisky he wanted and got him drunk, and then traded with him. After getting through the colored man went to a drug store near by, to get some medicine. He laid his pocket book down and went away, too drunk to remember it. His wife came in search of it, the druggist returned it, and in counting the contents the wife found just $16.00, all that was left of the year's work. When asked what he had bought the man showed a single pail and said that constituted it all. Now under the "local option law" that man could be prosecuted for giving the whisky, and after this was proven he could be sent to the penitentiary for robbing the man of his money. Such cases are happening every day in every town, and at the country stores in Texas, colored men are made to drink and then coaxed into buying at exhorbitant prices. And yet colored men will walk up to the polls and vote against a law for their protection! How foolish.

Another thing. The colored people of Texas, want the friendship of the best people of their State. Here is a chance to give them that friendship. The best people of Texas want this law passed. Nearly all the ministers are working for it, and all the earnest religious people vote for it. On the other hand, the roughs and rowdies and the men who make money by selling whisky, don't want the law. Some few good people do not vote for it, but they are the exception. Now ought every colored man in Texas stand with the best men and people of his State? In Harris County, Texas, the colored people spent $2000 for whisky the day before Christmas. That money had far better have been thrown into the bayou. No one can tell how many unkind words and perhaps murders whisky caused. The other day a company of white men near Hempstead, Texas, were full of whisky and lost their bottle, and wanted more. An old colored man came along and they accused him of stealing their bottle. He said he did not. They said he did, and in a few moments the colored man was shot dead. Whisky did it. The Austin Statesman says that whisky is at the bottom of nearly every murder committed in Texas. We believe it. When whisky goes into a man reason goes out, and the devil takes possession of him, and he is ready to do his share of any mean or wicked thing. The colored people of Texas want protection, and the only way to have it is to stand side by side with the religious, moral and good men of every place and vote with them, in helping to destroy the liquor traffic.

Whisky men tell colored men, that if they vote for prohibition, they are destroying their freedom and taking the first step toward their re-enslavement. What a monstrous lie! The good men of Texas want to close up the saloons, so that instead of colored men spending their money for that which will damn them, they will spend it for something that will do them good. In Lamar county, Texas, last year the colored people spent more for whisky than for schools and churches. Now if there had been no saloons in that county, that money would have been saved and spent in buying homes and making these homes comfortable.

We appeal to the colored ministers of Texas to take a bold stand for temperance. Preach it from the pulpit, and go to the ballot box, and in the name of God and humanity urge everybody to vote to close the saloons.

The Houston and Texas Central Railroad.

This important Railroad extends from Houston, Texas, northward through the entire State. It has a branch road from Hempstead to Austin. It is now operating over five hundred miles of road running through the best portions of the State. This road owns over five millions acres of land in various parts of the State. The lands are surveyed in alternate sections, an equal amount being reserved by the State, and appropriated to the support of her common school system. These lands are sold at from two to five dollars an acre. The northwestern branch is being pushed beyond Waco and will pierce the great mineral regions of Texas. We advise all who think of emigrating to Texas to put themselves in communication with Robert Elgin, Esq., Houston, Texas, who will gladly send all needed information.

We personally commend the officers and employees of this road, for their excellent bearing, as gentlemen and business men.

The following succinct statement of the natural advantages of Texas may be overdrawn in some particulars, but is nevertheless, in the main, correct.

Texas extends from the 26th to the 36th parallel of north latitude, and lies between the 16th and 30th meridians of longitude, west from Washington, and is bounded on the north by Colorado, Kansas, the Indian Territory and Arkansas, on the east by Louisiana, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico, and on the west by the Republic of Mexico and New Mexico. It is the largest State in the Union, has 268,684 square miles, being much larger than England or France, or New York, Pennsylvania, Mississippi and Louisiana combined, and is divided into one hundred counties, eleven of which border on the Gulf of Mexico, and seven on the Rio Grande. Beginning with a level coast, entirely free of rock, the altitude gradually increases through to the northern boundary. The soil is universally characterized as being the most fertile and productive in the known world. Her bottom lands surpass any yet discovered on the globe. She is also possessed of the greatest variety of soils, that of the southern and southeastern sections being composed of black loam (or bottom lands), is better adapted to the production of sugar and cotton, though the latter yields abundantly on the praries and uplands. The fine coffee-colored soil of the praries grow unequalled crops of wheat, barley, corn, oats, and all the cereals, while nature provides sustenance year after year for more than 4,000,000 cattle. The eastern and northwestern portions contain the finest forests of ash, Bois de'arc, oak, cypress, walnut and pine to be found west of the Mississippi River. The average temperature for the year round is about 00 degrees, varying from 50 degrees in the winter to 90 degrees in the summer, thus producing a climate only equalled by Itally.

President Hayes.

The following sketch of our new President is from one who knew him intimately for the past twenty years:

"Born in 1822, in Delaware county, Ohio, Pesident Hayes is fifty-five years of age; but a casual observer would take him to be at least ten years younger. There is not a vestige of gray in his abundant auburn hair and the full beard he has always worn ever since I have known him. Alert and youthful as he was twenty-five years ago, he is a forcible example of the value of an abstemious life. He was never in a bar-room, it is said, in all his years; he is an utter stranger to tobacco in all its forms. Nobody ever saw him take a drink of liquor, or smoke a cigar, or chew tobacco. Nobody ever knew him to sacrifice truth to gain any political or personal end. Living in the full public gaze for twenty years, and coming out of the most exciting Presidential contest in American history, President Hayes is absolutely without blemish.

"More than any man I ever knew he is a man of self-poise. It has been his habit all his life to face responsibilities and uncertainties without the twitching of a muscle. That he is a man of fear is undoubted, because he is a Christian gentleman, and fears to do wrong; that he is a man of nerve is also undoubted, for he never flinched from doing what he believed to be right. Able, cultured, of large experience in public affairs, and having extraordinary nerve, and yet strangely diffident of himself, Rutherford B. Hayes will not only do credit to himself, but the nation, in the Presidential chair."

Chief Justice Moses, of the South Carolina Supreme Court, died on the 6th inst.

Caring for the Poor.

BRETHREN OF THE SOUTHWESTERN:—It seems but a small measure of credit to refer briefly in your columns to the work of Christianity now being done by a few of the Christian women of the First Street M. E. Church of this city. Comparing the results of their efforts with those of more ostentatious organizations certainly a great deal of credit should be given to the good women who, in these times of hardship, raised for the poor within six months one hundred and thirty dollars in cash and seven hundred and ninety-seven pounds of provisions. These contributions were gathered from poor, hardworking people, and are independent of other expenses connected with Church labor. A society has been organized, with Sister E. Gantt as President, having for its object the amelioration of the condition of the suffering poor. Of course the beneficiaries are the members of the Church. The labor of visitation devolves upon a committee, and so well is this committee organized that no case of destitution escapes its vigilance. One member is constantly on duty.

In connection with her other duties Sister Gantt has organized a Temperance Band, and is trying to secure recognition of the great and righteous principles of temperance. In this cause she hopes for the coöperation of the ministers of Christ, and in her efforts for the widows and orphans she asks the prayers of the Church and the assistance of all who are charitably disposed.

Father Green has proved a worthy assistant of these devoted women, and will thankfully receive any contributions for this purpose.

METHODIST.

New Orleans, March, 4, '77.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Thos. Montgomery, Rosedale, La., writes, "When I came to this work I found my congregation very small and everything very discouraging. But I took my Bible and hymn-book and went to look after my membership. I visited from house to house, talking to the people and praying with them, and I thank the Lord that His blessings have been upon us. Our congregations are good and we have organized a good Sunday-school. I have received ten persons into the Church, and many others are now enquiring the way to salvation. On last Sunday night, a Baptist brother from Baton Rouge, Rev. Robert Brooks, visited us and gave us a most excellent sermon.

Rev. B. F. Penney, Bay St. Louis, Miss., says: "We have had eleven recent accessions to our church, and our Sabbath-school is rapidly increasing. We have a good church building which is now being put in good repair; in this work the ladies are taking an active past. I send a list of subscribers, and expect to increase the number during the next week."

Rev. C. Gilbert, Memphis, Tenn., writes: "I have been taking the SOUTHWESTERN for the past few weeks and am so well pleased with it that I will send you some subscribers. I enclose with this five names together with the money."

Rev. D. A. Williams, Grenada, Miss., sends a good list of subscribers, and adds "Our church services are well attended. Whenever our bell rings we are sure of a good congregation. Our Sunday-school is doing well. Two young ladies, Miss Anna Howard and Miss Carrie Segur, superinted it. We have a good, active Temperance organization, also benevolent societies to aid in caring for the poor and afflicted."

Rev. C. L. Crump, Batesville, Miss., makes a remittance and adds: "Many of my people desire to take the paper and will do so soon as they get the money. They are poor, and besides have undertaken to pay for a lot and build a church. We all like the paper; it has done me a great deal of good."

Rev. D. W. Maddox, Shuqualak, Miss., sends a list of subscribers and adds: "Some of my people have taken the SOUTHWESTERN for the past two years, and would not know how to do without it. We like it better than any other paper, and we want it to continue coming to us every week."

Rev. M. Thompson, Biloxi, Miss., writes: "My work is being blessed of the Lord. We have had fifty-six accessions this year. The times are hard, and I get but little salary, but should be willing to suffer, if need be, for Christ's sake."

Rev. Stephen Priestley, Pleasant Plains Chapel, in this city, says: "Our Quarterly Conference was held March 9th. Bro. Dutch was made Superintendent of our Sunday-school. A resolution was unanimously adopted approving the transfer, by Bishop Wiley, of Rev. E. Williams to the Presiding Eldership of North New Orleans District. Bro. Williams preached Sunday night, and administered the sacrament. The Lord blessed the services. We have Bible-readings from four to half-past five o'clock on Friday evenings—all are invited.

Rev. F. V. Schluembach, Galveston, Texas, writes: "On last Sabbath the German M. E. Church on Shady Creek, near Waco, was dedicated, Rev. F. Schuler, Presiding Elder, and Rev. Dosdell, preacher in charge were present. I preached to the congregation in the morning in German, and in the afternoon in English, the house both times being filled, and many listening from the outside. Bros. Schuler and Dosdell read the dedicatory services, and administered the Lord's supper. A good collection was taken up, leaving but fifty dollars yet due upon a property worth seven hundred dollars. Well done for those brethren. No aid form the Church Extension Society will be needed. The new Church is in a fine German neighborhood, and, in the future will be of no little importance. This makes the fourth Church that Rev. Schuler has dedicated in the past twelve months."

General Religious Items.

The Presbyterinn churches of Chicago have received about one thousand new members since the first of November.

It appears from late statistics that the Methodist Church has 66,362 members in New York City, Presbyterians 62,500, Episcopalians 60,000.

The General Executive Committee of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church will hold its eighth annual session in Centenary Church, Minneapolis, Minn., May 10, 1877. The branch corresponding secretaries will meet the day before. Will Christian women pray for the descent of the Holy Spirit upon this convention?

Dr. Hall's church, New York City, has given within a year to Christian objects over $80,000. Its annual collection for Foreign Missions, recently taken, amounts to $34,500. Its collections for Domestic Missions since last September reach over $30,000.

The St. Louis Advocate says: "Our Hymn-book does need revising—needs it badly. And there is no good reason why the same Hymn-book should not be adopted by both (yes, and by all) the divisions of American Methodism, and all in the world as well. Keep the subject before the Church. The people need a revised Hymn-book—a cheaper, or rather a lower-priced Hymn-book, and this is the way to obtain it. And when obtained and used in all the congregations, it will do more to unify Methodism than all the formal resolutions, that may be passed in mass-meetings between this and the approach of the millenium."

A second union meeting of the Methodist preachers of St. Louis was held on Monday morning, the 5th inst., in the First Church, South. About thirty were present. Bishop Bowman expressed his gratification at the occurance of such fraternal meetings, and was confident that good would result from them. He referred in affecting terms to Bishop Marvin, and hoped for his safe return. Dr. Doering, Superintendent of Missions in Germany, gave an interesting and hopeful account of Methodism in the German Empire. Methodism meets with much opposition from the State Church, preachers and people. These meetings are to be held monthly.

If you wish to purchase anything in the way of house furnishing goods be sure to call on Messrs. Heath, Lara & Pippery, 99 Camp street. They have a first-class establishment, embracing a fine assortment of goods—oil-cloth, matting, carpets, window-shades, picture-frames, chromos, wall paper and all other articles in their line. This is an old house, one where you can be suited in prices as well as quality. You will be waited upon by gentlemen who will think it no hardship to show you everything in their store. Before purchasing elsewhere give them a call. The SOUTHWESTERN recommends to its readers the best, always.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

Cried a certain woman. Name not given. The fact was the main thing. That she was a widow of one of "the sons of the prophets" very clearly proves that the students at the schools of the prophets did not live a celibate life. Their life was not one of monkish asceticism and repulsive mortifications, but beautiful with the purity of family ties and the prattle of children.

The creditor is come. His coming to take her two sons as bondsmen gives us an unpleasing glimpse of the relations that then existed between creditor and debtor. He could take the person of the creditor to pay for his debt. Lev. 25: 39; Matt. 18: 25. The right of the creditor, it appears from our lesson, extended so far as to include even [illegible] children of the [illegible] him, when the debtor [illegible] removed by death. [illegible] tive, when exercised, [illegible] with exceeding severity [illegible] a widow left so destitute as to [illegible] upon her own efforts and [illegible] of her sons for support. Why [illegible] to the prophet [illegible] unless she [illegible] of her faith to [illegible] God. It is not [illegible] faith prescribed a [illegible] deliverance, but as [illegible] a representative of [illegible] d in some way help

Her [illegible] his sympa- [illegible] as has been [illegible] belong to a [illegible] to give, yet [illegible] for suffering [illegible] all who need [illegible] to the [illegible] be affected [illegible] woman told, [illegible] halt, and [illegible] doors of [illegible] and [illegible] The ben- [illegible] largely [illegible] church—just [illegible] clergyman, [illegible] to the [illegible] to its [illegible] in time [illegible] I do for [illegible] to her as [illegible] said. more fruitful, the oftener we shut the door, and in sacred privacy seek from the Lord a new replenishment of wisdom and of grace. There ought to be more closet Christians than there are.

So she went. Unhesitatingly obeyed. She was not bothered by any thought of the absurdity of the proceeding. She did not hesitate because of any unbelief. That day she went around to all her neighbors and borrowed all the vessels they would lend her. No doubt she excited wonderment among them. Very likely they began to put their heads together and say: "What do you suppose Widow —— wants of all those jars. She has borrowed just all she can lay her hands on. Vessels enough to hold the oil necessary for the ransom of her two sons must have made quite a number. She poured out. Did the word of the Lord ever fail? And the oil stayed. Not until the vessels were all full—not until she had asked for another and had been told that there was none. It is plain that she might have had more oil if she had had more receptacles for it. We are not straitened in the Lord but in ourselves. How many times have revivals stopped, not because the Lord was unwilling to continue pouring out his Spirit, but because faith had made no more provision for it.

Came and told the man of God. That is one of the most touching things in the lesson. She immediately remembered him who was her benefactor. Few would have thought of that—the first thing! In their joy they would have gone on to do what she afterwards did by the prophet's direction. When Christ healed the ten lepers there was only one that returned to give him thanks. [illegible] not found that returned to give glory to God, save the stranger. She came to him to know what further she could do. Apparently she did not consider the oil was hers until Elisha expressly gave it to her, so conscientious was she. Go sell the oil. Always a ready market for such a staple. And pay thy debt (creditor). There was no pretence but what the claim was a just one. It was unjust only in the manner of enforcing it. One of the first obligations, therefore, was to pay this off. Elisha would have never performed a miracle that would have wronged this creditor. By just so much as the Christian professes to be guided by higher motives, by so much is he, more than others, required promptly to pay his debts, and so "provide things honest in the sight of all men."

Live thou and thy children of the rest. Her empty house had been thought of as well as her creditor. What a pleasant proof have we here of the truth; "For your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

A Family Re-united.

In the SOUTHWESTERN of March 1st, we published in this column a letter from Charity Thompson, of Hawkins, Texas, making inquiry about her family. She last heard of them in Alabama, years ago. The letter, as printed in the paper, was read in the First Church Houston, and as the reading proceeded a well-known member of the Church—Mrs. Dibble—burst into tears and cried out "That is my sister and I have not seen her for thirty-three years." The mother is still living and in a few days the happy family will be once more re-united.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine. O. S. BISLEY,

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2 50 per Bottle, or Three Bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address, CRADDOCK & Co.,

WHILE Dr. H. During the many years of his sojourn there he devoted his time to the treatment of Lung Diseases, and upon his retirement he left with us books and papers containing full particulars, showing that every one can be his own physician and prepare his own medicine, and such information as we have received we now offer to the public without price, only asking that each remit a three cent stamp for return postage. SOUTHWESTERN

Christian Advocate,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

1877.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the [illegible] field of the Church. There is expended the largest proportion of the funds given in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church, and information will explain the results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the controlling and directing power of the press. 2. The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms.

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the SOUTHWESTERN one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year.

House and Farm.

Let idle Ambition her baubles pursue,
While wisdom looks down with disdain,
The home of the farmer has charms ever new,
Where health, peace and competence reign.

Thoughts for the Farmer.

For troubles on a farm there are two remedies—work [illegible] [illegible] farmer who is [illegible] debt [illegible] happy and independent [illegible] of shelter from the storms [illegible] to eat and [illegible] These are [illegible] any farmer can have them.

There is no danger [illegible] of the farmer getting out of fashion. So we can safely keep on producing bread, milk, butter, cheese, pork, beef, mutton, poultry, fruit, potatoes, eggs, etc., without any danger of unfashionable things being left on our hands.

In protecting trees and shrubbery from winter, keep in mind that it is not always the intense cold that kills. But it is the effect of frequent freezing and thawing. A tender tree is much safer on the north than on the south side of the fence. If protection is only given on one side, let that be on the sunny side.

A man is known by his cattle. If he is kind and attentive, and has a gentle word or pat for them, it has a soothing effect and they will stand around, and enjoy his presence, secrete more milk, and take on more fat.

Buy Small Trees.

Nurserymen describe trees on their catalogues as "second class," "medium," "first class" and "extra." The difference in these classes is principally, if not wholly, in the size and height of the trees; and as most farmers desire the best, they suppose that the large "extra" merit that description, and hence order them. The fact is, however, that a small tree will grow faster and (if a fruit tree) come into bearing condition sooner than a large one; and, in a half dozen years the tree that was small when planted will be larger and finer than the other. The larger the tree, the larger the roots which it has, and the larger the roots the less fibres there will be upon them. A tree that has plenty of fibrous roots will grow readily if proper care is used in transportation; but no amount of skill can coax a tree to live and [illegible] [illegible] trees are always more or less mu[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] injury from this source. Dealers in trees assert that experienced men buy small, thrifty trees, while those who are just starting are anxious for the largest to be had. Those who [illegible] trees the coming season will do well to learn from the experience of those who, at considerable loss to themselves, have demonstrated the small trees are the [illegible]

The Newark paper tells of a man [illegible] "dangerously wounded in [illegible] the blow must have struck him just where he lived."

"You call that a trunk, do you?" [illegible] a dejected hotel porter. [illegible] lightning conductor [illegible] like a boarding house."

Washington, July 13, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

THREE BEAUTIFUL KEEPSAKES

FOR EVERY ONE.

SUBSCRIBERS OF THIS PAPER READ.

The London Publishing Company have just issued three beautiful Chromatic works of art in the shape of mottoes, which for beauty and worth are without an equal; these Chromatic paintings comprise the following subjects:

No. 1. GOD BLESS OUR HOME.—In old English type, beautifully embellished with vines and roses running through the entire work; in the center of the letter G a mother is seen teaching her two children to repeat a prayer, while to her right are two larger figures robed in white—angels singing praises to God; the background is a beautiful landscape scene representing Home.

No. 2. THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD.—In old English type, elegantly embellished with the most beautiful vines, ferns and flowers. The central figure is here represented by the Lord as a shepherd carrying in his arms the shepherd's crook and the lost lamb. The effect is strikingly beautiful.

No. 3. PRAISE THE LORD, is similarly embellished as the other two. The group in the center of this motto is three half-grown children representing the angels singing "Praise the Lord." These three paintings combine the most elegant colors and design ever depicted by the artist's brush. The effect is most beautiful and pleasing; they should adorn the walls of every family in the land.

These works of art are given to you upon the following conditions, which please observe closely: The cost of postage, mailing, tubing, wrapping, etc., is 25 cents for each picture when sent singly, or 60 cents for all three when sent to one address. The following order must be cut out and sent with 25 cents for any one picture ordered, or 50 cents for all three. Be sure to draw your pen through the picture you do not want.

ORDER. On receipt of this order, and 25 cents for any one picture, or 50 cents for all three, to one address, the London Publishing Co., hereby agree to return to the sender the pictures so ordered, viz:

Shaw University.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference:

At our meeting in Macon we took a noble step in regard to the cause of education in our State as represented by our University at Holly Springs. Six weeks have passed since our resolutions were faithfully made before God and his people, and now I want to ask you, what have you taken since then; what have you done toward fulfilling the promise then made? How much time and labor have you spent in talking with your people of their great need of education and of their duty to God, their children and themselves, to help in providing for and sustaining an educational institution? There is not a people on this earth more in need of instruction, or, and, and, and, impossible [illegible] the colored people of the South, and there is nothing that can further that connection but mission. Can you not urge them to seek to obtain this? They must have school buildings and teachers, and they cost money. This you must urge them to give. Do not wait for better times, or for a more favorable opportunity, and think to lift up hands at once, for it will do you no good. Do not [illegible] people pay to this cause [illegible] in proportion to [illegible] in meeting our obligations, for it is their christian duty, as [illegible] strength and ability [illegible] God [illegible] the poor, who [illegible] upon us [illegible] of supporting christian education, and encourage the Lord to help them pay him for his work. The Lord is a good paymaster to those who faithfully serve him. There is now a golden opportunity for the people of this Conference to erect an enduring monument to the honor of God and the church, are they going to stand idle and let their friends see them fail to grasp it?

The brick for a new building, such as will meet our wants, for ten or fifteen years, are now on the ground and paid for by the Freedmen's Aid Society, and the Society, through Dr. Haven, or the Doctor with his political friends, agreed to give one-half the eighteen thousand dollars that the building will cost. There [illegible] struggling to keep them [illegible] work [illegible] brick on hand will be used up [illegible] many years before we can have [illegible] buildings and teachers, and [illegible] do the whole work without [illegible]. Think of this, you who are of a faithful, energetic and persistent [illegible] work to secure the object [illegible]. It is very important that the [illegible] up the summer and in order that this may be done work must begin soon; but nothing can be done here until you begin to forward the money, hence the importance of your immediate work. Now, brethren, let us go to help you and push forward. Who will lay down [illegible] the walls that will stand as a monument to the memory [illegible] noble patriots of the Mississippi Conference? [illegible] will be duly recorded in the archives of heaven and remember it [illegible].

Dear Bro. Hartzell: The fourteenth day of February was the saddest day of my life. On that day I saw the colored people of this country march silent to a man to the polls and the highest [illegible] prostration. I have preached [illegible] the law of our Church, [illegible] to remember how [illegible] was disturbing those [illegible] them. During that [illegible] election day [illegible] few [illegible] going home I reflected the [illegible] of my life. The first one [illegible] at the age of six I was [illegible] from my mother. When a little [illegible] was given to my mother's owner's son. When the father [illegible] mother left to her master's mother. The mother went to Choctaw county in Mississippi, and I was left [illegible] at Tuskaloosa. I [illegible] longer on that [illegible] of [illegible] was [illegible] wife. We had [illegible] given [illegible] I felt [illegible] broke [illegible] the hope of [illegible] would [illegible] I [illegible] and [illegible] the first time in [illegible] whipped. They tied me in a fence corner and on my naked body they gave three hundred and fifty lashes. In the agony of my soul I felt that no day could be sadder than that.

But Bro. Hartzell believe me that the fourteenth day of last February was a sadder day than any of these. My stripes are healed, my malice toward my oppressors is gone; the sunlight of freedom shines upon my path and my wife has been restored to me. To see my people so blind to their own good, as to be led by marked men to vote for whisky, is a far greater matter to grieve over than anything that could befall me. Whisky is at the bottom of nearly all the crimes and murders which curse our land. The colored people need the friendship of all good people, and now when so glorious an opportunity is offered for them to vote side by side with the best men of our country, they listen to the words of their enemies and vote with the men who only want their money and care nothing for their souls.

Christ in the Ship.

REV. J. H. McCARTY PREACHES TO THE SEAMEN.

[From the Daily Picayune.]

The anniversary of the New Orleans branch of the American Seamen's Friend Society was held at Ames Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday evening, the 18th inst. The Chaplain, Rev. E. H. Pelton, made a report of the work for the year, after which Rev. J. H. McCarty, D.D., delivered the annual sermon from the words found in Mark, 4th chapter and 51st verse: "And he went up into the ship and the wind ceased."

Great multitudes, said the speaker, hung upon the words and followed in the footsteps of Jesus. In the account from which the text is taken, we are informed that after feeding the multitudes he sent his disciples across the lake or Sea of Galilee into Bethsaida, while he tarried behind to dismiss the people. He then retired into the solitude of the mountain to pray. In the fourth watch of the night, when the winds were contrary, [illegible] would have passed by them. They saw him, and supposing it to be a spirit, "cried out." Jesus calmed their fears, and said, "It is I, be not afraid." Here I lay down the proposition that Jesus was the seamen's friend then, and is no less so now.

He spent much time on the shores of Tiberias, or Galilee; he rode in the ship often, and among his first chosen disciples were men of the sea, fishermen. The sailor belongs to a necessary class. The earth was made to be inhabited in all its parts. Mankind are "dispersed as the hills, but one as the sea." The ocean is rather a bond between the families of earth than a barrier separating them. The miner and sailor are like the spring of the watch, out of sight but essential to all motion. Civilization owes more to the sailor than the soldier, as he is the connecting link between the nations. We can dispense with war but commerce never. When the millennium comes the ocean will be in the zenith of its prosperity. That will be the perfection of industry, science, art and religion. The sailor constitutes a numerous class. Three millions of men traverse the seas, lakes and rivers of the globe. Not less than thirty thousand visit the port of New Orleans annually from all countries of the civilized world. They are a distinct class; away from society they know little and care less about what we call the news of the day. On land the "Bethel" is their spiritual home. They have any such place. He reverts to an isolated class. Most of his life is spent away from home, with its charms and influences of wife, mother and sister. As a class, they have in the past been neglected. "Only a sailor" is a common remark. He has been rated as a mule or ox, and doomed to a life of hardship—an imprisonment with the chance of being drowned, said Dr. Johnson. The times have changed, however. The American Seamen's Friend Society was established forty-nine years ago, and has done much to ameliorate the condition of the sailor. It cares for him temporally and spiritually at home and abroad. Its agencies consist in religious instruction, reading, offering him a home in every sense. Many a rough sailor boy carries in his breast a manly and generous heart, and often comes from a home of refinement and piety. Our interest in the sailor should not be allowed to lag. He is a representative of his nationality. He is a missionary, and as he is good or bad, so the world estimates the country from which he hails. His heritage is much passed alone, and alone in the dangers of the sea, but the moment his foot touches land sinful wretches confront him like greedy cormorants—the rum seller, the harlot and the gambler. The Seamen's Bethel, with its kind chaplain and religious friends, offers him a retreat, a home, and as a result many a ship's company numbers among them as earnest Christians as are found in any of our churches. It is said they are a hard class to reach and win; they are men of "like passions with ourselves." But if the Christian world will do its duty, every ship riding on the high seas may have its Paul on board.

On his labors and exposures depend largely the wealth of the world. The ship bears treasures of gold and silver; treasures of property and life. The man at the masthead or in the forecastle is an important factor in the make up of the world's industrial forces. Our luxuries, as well as our necessities, are often the price of his blood. The storms of passion beat over his soul as over yours; let Jesus go up into the ship and the storm of passion will cease. The hurricane sweeps madly across the ship's course, on the sea, straining the gallant masts and shredding the canvas, and death, grim and awful, stares him in the face, but if Jesus is in the ship he can say, "Peace, be still." Yes, we owe it not so much to commerce as to the man himself for whom Christ died. Give the sailor the Gospel. The sailor sees the stars when all the rest of the world are asleep. He is often a live Christian in the ship's forecastle when we are spiritually asleep in our churches on land. The "Star of Bethlehem" rose as well for him of the sea, daily confronting danger and death, as for us upon the land. Kirk White sang of that "star."

"It was my guide, my light, my all,
It bade my dark forebodings cease,
And through the storm and dangers thrall,
It led me to the port of peace.
Now safely moored, my perils o'er,
I'll sing first in night's diadem,
Forever and forever more,
The Star, the Star of Bethlehem."

The Habit of Prayer.

Some bad boys tried to persuade a good little boy to play truant. "No, no; I cannot," said he.

"Why? now, why?" they asked.

"Why?" answered the little boy; "cause if I do, I shall have to pray it all to God on my mother's knee to-night."

"O, well," they said, "in that case you had better not go."

You see what a bridle the habit of prayer puts on a little child. Prayer acknowledges God's goodness, God's pity, God's authority, God's right to us.

Help one Another.

Dumb animals sometimes set us very good examples. I will tell a true story about two horses.

In the town of Indianapolis there was a blind horse who, one day last summer, wandered into the river, and then did not know how to get back to dry land. Now, there was a good horse, whom the boys called Dick, and who was grazing near by, that saw the blind horse swimming round in a circle in the river, and trying in vain to find the solid shore.

Dick must have thought to himself "That poor horse can't see, or he would not act in that strange way. I will call to him; perhaps he will mind my voice."

So Dick began to neigh as loud as he could, but the blind horse was still at a loss to know which way to turn. Perhaps he was deaf as well as blind; for, although Dick would neigh quite loud, the poor blind horse still could not find his way out of the river.

Then Dick must have thought, "That poor horse will be tired by and by, and sink and drown if I don't help him."

Then Dick went down the river, and swam out to where the blind horse was, and touched noses, as much as to say "Follow me," and then guided the blind horse safely to the shore.

This kind act was seen by a great many people on the shore; and they cheered loudly as Dick came back upon the bank with the blind horse behind him.

I hope you will be as ready to help a friend in need as poor Dick was. We must learn to be kind to one another, for kind acts and kind feelings will make us happy.

The Unpardonable Sin.

Your fear that you have committed the sin against the Holy Ghost is the best evidence that you have not. That fear is a fruit of the Spirit's striving. When finally withdrawn you will have no anxiety on account of your sin, and no foreboding that your day of grace is gone. To be without the Spirit is to be careless of your religious state, and presumptuous in regard to the future. But the very anxiety about our condition, our thoughtfulness as to our spiritual state, the trembling in view of the fate awaiting the finally impenitent, and the personal application we make of the fearful truths of the Gospel, evince our salvable condition.

The suggestion that you have passed the bounds of mercy is evidently a delusion of the devil. The very conviction that you have is employed to deceive or lead you astray. Do not give place to the temptation for a moment. Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Your anxieties are the voices of the Lord calling you to Himself. Arise, and fly to Him who has never said, "Seek ye My face in vain," and who will never turn away the feebleat or worst sinner that comes to Him. His blood avails for you. Trust to virtue! Try it now.—Zion's Herald.

The Preacher's Aim.

Why do you preach the Gospel? Is it because you have a sense of the sinner's danger, or because you love the Gospel? or because you feel a constraining sense of God's love and pity? Or again, is it because you find the pulpit an appropriate field for the display of your talents, or a sphere for the exercise of your ambition? Do you preach for ease or gain?

The effectiveness of your ministrations will depend greatly on the purpose with which they are delivered. The arrow will not go beyond the point for which the bow is bent. In the ministry, as in all else, the results of our labor will not transcend our intention. If our aim be low, we shall have our reward in kind. To make the life of a minister grand there must be an exalted aim and a ceaseless devotion of all its powers to secure its advantages. It is not the field you occupy that will make your life grand; it is the spirit and purpose with which you do your work. The final "well done" will come to a minister in humble sphere, while others in larger or more exalted places may be found wanting in the great day. The possibility of success is in your own hands. Place is in the hands of God; faithfulness is in yours.—Zion's Herald.

What Father Takes.

There is food for thought in the story that is told of a young lad, who, for the first time, accompanied his father to a public dinner. The waiter asked him, "What will you take to drink?" Hesitating for a moment, he replied, "I'll take what father takes." The answer reached his father's ear, and instantly the full responsibility of his position flashed upon him. Quicker than lightning various thoughts passed through his mind, and in a moment his decision was made; and, in tones tremulous with emotion, and to the astonishment of those who knew him, he said, "Waiter, I'll take water."

Believe it Yourself.

"At the late Christian Convention, a minister asked Mr. Moody this question: "How can you make the people believe the truth?" "Believe it yourself," was the blunt answer. That means a great deal. The force and fire of intense conviction will make way into the minds and hearts of the hearers. Faith persuades, wins, conquers, reigns. "Have faith in God," cries bleeding virtue on every hand. Preaching truths like today in mere theory must be a failure; but proclaiming the same truths with the clear utterance of deep conviction gives to every word a ring of supernatural energy, as it rolls on the mind and heart. "We speak that we do know," said those men of primitive power who shook the world with the Gospel of Christ. There is a holy violence in burning enthusiasm that is almost irresistible. The kingdom of evil can never be destroyed by violence. No holiday soldier, no compromiser, no timeserver, no [illegible] can handle the weapons of God's armory with effect. The Chicago of Texas.

In Dallas. Dallas is situated in the central part of Northern Texas, and is a city of eighteen thousand inhabitants, and, in matters of business and enterprise, it is a marvel. It is to Texas, in the matter of public spirit, what Chicago is to the Northwest. The Central Railroad was completed to this point, northward from Houston about five years ago. From that time the real growth of Dallas began. For twenty years before it was only a small country town. The Central Railroad gives direct communication northward to St. Louis, and southward to Galveston and Austin. The Texas and Pacific Railroad, entering the State at the extreme north-east corner, runs westward through Dallas, opening up to civilization the great Western portion of the State, unsurpassed in fertility and possibilities. Two other roads are now building. One piercing the north-west, running from Dallas to the Wichita River and another running south-eastward to Palestine. The public buildings of Dallas are creditable. The court-house cost $100,000. There are four daily papers, six or eight banks, water works and gas works too, cotton compresses, two founderies, a cotton seed oil mill, at least a half a dozen steam flouring mills, three independent lines of street railways, several first-class hotels, thirteen Churches, and an active Young Men's Christian Association. Real estate is high, and has steadily advanced for years. Ordinary city property has doubled in value in three years. The tide of immigration through the city is simply wonderful, about equally divided between the northern States and the eastern southern States.

The Methodist Episcopal Church forms a chief factor in the evangelizing forces of Dallas. Three years ago our Church had nothing here. [illegible] Our work in Dallas is here too "legitimate," as is all our Southern Methodism. We have three churches and a school in Dallas. [illegible] Our German members have a [illegible] society, presided over by Rev. [illegible]. This is the only German Methodist church in the [illegible]. Rev. J. H. [illegible] and his wife [illegible] Tabernacle M. E. Church [illegible]. Three years ago they were transferred to [illegible] and placed at Dallas. They had these things—willing hands, a willing God, and willing [illegible] than a score have been received in the Church this year. The Sunday-school numbers over two hundred and contains a score of Christian men and women [illegible] devotion are very commendable. Dallas, as a city, surprised us, but this Tabernacle Methodist Episcopal Church of Dallas, the growth of three years, surprised us more. It is a better and stronger Church than our denomination can boast of in many cities of equal size throughout the North, and has cost the Church much less. And still some of the official journals of the Methodist Episcopal Church continue to speak with bated breath of the work of their Church among the white people of the South. We wish John Wesley could dictate a few editorials for them.

St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church of Dallas occupied by our colored membership has had a varied history. Two or three years ago a large church was built and for a time the society thrived. But alas, the wicked hand of an incendiary applied the torch and in an hour the building was in ashes. This was about a year ago. It is probable that the deed was prompted by the fact that a school for the education of colored youth was taught in the building. But there were men and women of heroic faith who had given prayer and work to this school and church. In twenty-four hours a temporary structure was erected and not a single service of the church was omitted and the school went right on. Such heroism will not lack of recognition in the day of judgment. The present pastor of this church, Rev. J. G. Webster, has not been able to take charge of his work on account of sickness, since Conference. Bro. Barrows, an efficient local preacher fills his place. Within a stone's throw of our church in one direction is the African Methodist Church, a fine building. The society, we understand, is a very strong one. It was here that Prof. Gillyard preached, who, about a year ago was assassinated while quietly reading his newspaper. He had been arrested for a trivial matter and had thrown himself entirely [illegible]. The Justice of the Peace, instead of releasing him, held him. He plead for a company of colored men to guard him, for he knew the purpose was to kill him. His request was granted, but in the night the guard was coaxed and threatened away, and he was shot through a crack of the livery stable where he was confined. He was shot in the back and killed instantly, the gun being so close that his clothes were set on fire. This fiendish deed was committed in a little town some distance from Dallas, but his body was brought here and buried.

Within a stone's throw in another direction from our church is St. Paul's church, a church of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America. It is a good structure. It is the youngest and weakest, and in our judgment the least necessary organization of Episcopal Methodism in the United States. But, withal, we wish it success.

Our school in Dallas is known as Andrews Institute. It meets in St. Paul's Church and is presided over by Rev. G. W. Richardson and his son, Prof. G. O. Richardson. These brethren came from Wisconsin, are men of culture and piety, and have given themselves fully to their work. They are thorough Methodists and work faithfully in the church. Sunday afternoon is given to a Bible school, in which old and young are gathered and instructed in the Word of God. The daily school is one of the best of its kind in the South. Nearly a hundred attend and many are well advanced. Two rooms have lately been added for recitation rooms. A young lady of fine ability assists in the instruction. [illegible] It is the purpose to make this school permanent. If [illegible] are given to this devoted father and son, the Bishop whose name it bears and the whole church will rejoice in its success and hundreds of young men and women will go forth from its halls blessed with [illegible] training.

A grand Concert, Dialogue and Tableaux Exhibition will be given [illegible] Wesley Chapel, [illegible] Poydras and Perdido streets, on Tuesday, April 10, 1877, [illegible]

Moody in Boston.

The sixth week of the greatest evangelistic effort ever made in this city has passed and its record is [illegible] every Christian heart so long as the memories of this day of great things shall last. For the last three weeks there have been not less than two hundred seekers at each evening service, after which several inquiry meetings are held for the special benefit of such persons. These meetings would be more novel and interesting to your readers, perhaps, than the services in the main room. Let us find our way to the Clarendon street Church where Mr. Moody's inquiry meeting is held at the close of one of the evening meetings. We are accompanied by a large number of men and women of every age and condition of life—the grey haired sinner and the folly-loving maiden, the rich business man and the modern tramp, side by side, a hundred or two with as many earnest Christians who find their way in and sit in perfect quiet, until Mr. Moody steps in from a side door and business begins. After a word of prayer a few personal inquiries are made as to their design in coming, and all seekers and unsaved ones are asked to rise, thus revealing the spiritual condition of each. Practical work now commences. Each Christian is expected to address himself at once to his irreligious neighbor and engage him in conversation concerning his desires and difficulties. The room but a moment ago so quiet now presents a scene of hushed animation. Here and there Mr. Moody is seen bringing a tried worker into contact with some soul laboring under special difficulties; he comes our way, and with a warm pressure of the hand and an earnest look into our face he says "You're a Christian?" his eyes brighten at our answer and, with a familiar nod, he is gone on his hunt for souls, stopping now and then to say a word, but never resting until every [illegible] found a Christian friend to whom he can reveal his wants and difficulties. Very soon we see many kneeling and pleading for the present witness of acceptance, while others are diligently searching the Word for light on some knotty, doubtful or disputed question, but generally speaking, discussion is ignored, and only those who accept the Bible and are honestly seeking light and guidance are labored with. Mr. Moody's instruction to his helpers is to [illegible] them with the Word, and accordingly nearly all the inquiry room workers have their Bibles with them and use them constantly in their efforts to guide the subject at hand. [illegible] The Bible is quoted and used just as though there wasn't a man in America who did not believe it thoroughly. [illegible]

Mr. Moody represents as much crystallized common sense as any man we have ever met. This fact may account in part for his acceptability. He fully believes in an experience vitalized through and through with the Divine presence. Christ is constantly before him and he points men to Him just as Moses pointed them to the serpent, and for the same reason. He talks about what he has seen, and felt, and knows, not about what men and books (save the Bible) say, or what the world does or does not believe. Man a sinner, Christ a Savior—they must touch each other. It is God's plan, it is your necessity, are you willing? This is the Gospel which is preached unto us, and it is a Gospel that has a harvest in it. W.

Boston, March 14, '77.

There is great anxiety in many parts of Texas on the grasshopper question. At this time the pests are hatching and already the ground in many counties is covered with little hoppers. The reports are conflicting. In some places it is said [illegible] have already [illegible]. In others the danger is said to be past. We can only wait, hoping for the best.

Then and Now.

The Methodist Recorder thus speaks of the appointment of Frederick Douglass as Marshal of the District of Columbia:

Here is another marvel in our eyes! Frederick Douglass, once a cringing slave in the District of Columbia, a chattel on the streets, and in the market as a mule, is now the Marshal of the District. President Hayes has appointed him to the honorable position, and the appointment has been confirmed. The office is one of dignity and ample remuneration. It was desired by prominent white men of high standing, culture and influence. This is Republicanism. This is Democracy. Douglass has fought his way up from the lowest stratum, socially, to a place coveted by proud politicians who may scorn his lowly race. For several years Douglass, after having secured his freedom by a reasonable use of his legs, used his brain to good purpose in conducting the North Star, a weekly paper in Northern New York. That paper was a regular visitor to our boyhood's home, and its contents were potent in forming opinions which we hold sacred to this hour. The runaway slave from the Chesapeake is back yonder again; his once shining black hair is as white as wool; his youthful eye has grown somewhat dim, his voice so clear and loud in his prime is tremulous now; but the old man is indeed a man. He has suffered in his body and in his soul. Let him enjoy his well-earned honors. A few fastidious persons may sneer at the venerable "Marshal of Columbia," but that is cheap criticism. No sincere Christian American can for a moment grudge the old man his [illegible]. Even the [illegible] South [illegible] What they cannot [illegible] promotion as the recognition of downright manhood and moral worth.

Our Preachers in Texas and Local Option.

The preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Texas are among the foremost in battling against grog shops.

As a specimen we clip the following from the Austin Statesman:

Rev. Dr. Brush delivered a powerful address in favor of local prohibition in the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday night. He quoted at length from the writings of John Wesley, and from the records of the general and annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, showing that the founder and present authorities of this great body of Christians believe in the necessity and good results of local prohibition. The Doctor also made the point that local prohibition was legislation in favor of temperance, while the license system was legislation in favor of intemperance. As to the point that the license system brought in a revenue by taxation, he showed that if the sale was prohibited the money now invested in the whisky business in the county might be otherwise invested and yield a revenue. If the revenue was not quite as much in taxes, the community would not have to pay for the extra crime and poverty caused by the sale of intoxicating drinks. We are assured that so far as the Methodist Episcopal Church is concerned in the city and county, very few, if any, of its members will vote against the law. After the doctor's address it was reported that a colored man, who had been working among his people to secure votes against the law had repented of his wickedness and wanted the church to pray for him.

Giving out Offices.

It is reported that a man appeared the other day at the Post-office Department with a petition for the appointment as postmaster at Columbia, South Carolina, very numerously signed by persons of prominence in various parts of the State. He was exceedingly aggressive and evidently expected his paper would receive immediate attention and favorable action. When Mr. Key obtained a chance to talk, he asked the man who held the office now. "A colored man," was the reply, "who of course ought to be put out at once."

Mr. Key asked if he mismanaged the office.

The man said he had not heard anything about that. On being questioned more closely, he was obliged to admit that he had heard no complaints on the score of efficiency.

"Then," said Mr. Key, "there are only two ways in which he can be displaced without opposition, from me. One is by the army of the United States, and the other is by an order from the President of the United States."

District Conference.

The District Conference will be held at Enterprize, Miss., May 7th and 8th. All the Traveling and Local Preachers, Exhorters, District Stewards, and First Sunday-school Superintendents of the District, are expected to be present.

Reason.

The chemist that placed in his hands a certain substance [illegible] He may be able to tell just what it is from sight, taste or smell, but the only real and absolute test is in an analysis of the substance. So he uses his retorts and crucibles, and reagents and so to speak, "takes it to pieces"—resolves it, converts it into its original elements. Now just so of that mental process which we call reasoning—it does for our knowledge or belief just what the chemist does for and with the substance, it seeks to find all the elements, as the elements are contained in the substance, so the conclusion must be contained in the premises; find the premises and the conclusion follows, and so we may see, that truth can always be found. A grain of arsenic dropped into a hogshead of water is lost to view, but the chemist can find it. The well established laws of science are irresistable. So of truth when covered up and seemingly lost to view it can be found, and though crushed to the earth will rise again.

Rev. Dr. Wm. Brush, of Austin District, Texas, had a spare Sabbath and gave it to making a special plea for subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN. He went to Waco and spent the day with Rev. A. M. Gregory and his people. The day had been set apart previously for a collection to pay for needed improvements on the church. The collections morning and evening were taken and footed up $67,00 cash, and sixty subscribers were secured for the SOUTHWESTERN. A good share of the money was paid, and the balance is to be paid within thirty days. Good for Waco. The Lord bless Bro. Gregory and his people. The West Texas Conference meets at Waco next fall, and Providence permitting, we shall see them face to face.

We find the following additional particulars concerning the death of Rev. R. C. McDonald, D. D., Presiding Elder of Okolona District, Mississippi Conference, in the Western Christian Advocate:

"He died at the residence of a citizen who resides about sixteen miles from Holly Springs. He came to the house of this gentleman on his way home from his district at dusk on the preceding evening. He was scarcely able to walk into the house, and remarked that he had such a strange headache, and had hoped to reach home that evening, but feared he would never get there. He grew rapidly worse. His wife was sent for, but when she arrived he was not able to recognize her. He died at 8 o'clock in the morning."

Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley and family of New York City, are spending a few weeks in Texas. They were at Dallas, Sabbath, March 18, and the Doctor gave a short address in the M. E. Church at night. Bro. Sims, an Evangelist who is holding a series of meetings in the church, preached. Dr. Buckley is chairman of the Eastern section of the hymn book revising committee, and the labors attending the revision, in addition to the labors of a protracted meeting of several weeks, have made it necessary for him to wait awhile. He is now in San Antonio, and will return home by way of New Orleans.

On his way home Dr. Brush stopped at Calvert, Texas, and found a protracted meeting in progress. Before writing sermons the Doctor called for subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. Fifty came forward and gave their names, and some paid, and the rest are to pay soon. The pastor, Rev. A. Campbell, is a worthy leader of a good church.

Travelers will find the City Hotel, Hempstead, Texas, an excellent place to be entertained. The proprietor is R. H. Jones, Esq.; the clerk of the House, Mr. Charles F. [illegible], and his wife, were formerly residents of this city. Travelers should remember this Hotel when visiting Hempstead.

Rev. J. H. Loggins, of Navasota, Texas, sends a splendid list of subscribers. He is closing up his third year, and hopes to enlarge his church before his year closes. Among his subscribers, he mentions Rev. J. J. Reinhardt, a baptist minister of the place, who is greatly pleased with the SOUTHWESTERN, and who is a leading man among his people.

The Spanish Consul in this city, Don Severino De la Barrera, committed suicide, by taking poison, at his residence on Dauphine street, on Saturday morning last.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. W. H. Mosby, Texana, Texas, says: "Our people at this place are few in numbers, and when I came prospects seemed very discouraging. But we have had four recent accessions to the Church, and an excellent spirit prevails among the members. The Sunday-school too is being built up. I hope soon to send you a good list of subscribers."

Rev. W. Maddox, Shuqualak, Miss., adds concerning a subscriber for whom he renews subscription. "He says that his wife gave him no rest until he subscribed again. She would not do without the paper any longer. She says ever since the SOUTHWESTERN stopped coming she has felt like one of the children was missing."

Rev. B. F. Smith, Hallettsville, Texas, writes: "Our Presiding Elder has just held our first quarterly meetings for this year. The services were all deeply interesting; the love feast and communion services as well as preaching were largely attended.

On Sunday night the Elder preached a sermon specially to the unconverted. After the sermon the altar was crowded with those inquiring the way of salvation, and three were happily converted. Our Sunday-school was organized into a Missionary Society, and it seemed to inspire every little heart with great enthusiasm to know that they belonged to the great Missionary Army. Our people are all wide awake in the missionary cause."

Rev. Jas. Hayward, Donaldsonville, writes: "We have just closed our quarterly meeting. Received during the quarter five, excluded one; baptized infants seven, adults two. Church and Sunday-school doing well. At Woodlawn we had quarterly services on 17th inst. The members there who have for some time been scattered are being re-united. I received ten of them into the Church on Sunday, and others are coming. Bro. Kennedy is well received and beloved by the people, and is doing a good work. A good spirit prevails in both these churches, and the people show a disposition to do a liberal part toward the support of the ministry and the benevolent enterprises of the Church."

Rev. J. M. Vance, pastor of Wesley Chapel in this city, says: "The first Union Meeting held at Wesley Chapel for the purpose of raising funds for the Mother Church was held on the 18th of March. The following named brethren officiated at the different services, Revs. Addison Moore, Christopher Hunt, Marcus Dale and William Murrell. The sermons preached awakened much enthusiasm in the hearts and minds of the congregation. The collection realized amounted to $200 50. Our next union meeting will be held on the third Sabbath in April, during which time there will be a concert given by the Tennessee Jubilee Singers for the same purpose."

Rev. M. Henson, Victoria, Texas, writes: "We are in the midst of a protracted meeting. For a week past the altar has been crowded with seekers every night. May the good Lord direct us in our efforts for the salvation of souls. I am endeavoring to have the SOUTHWESTERN taken by every family in my charge. The people all like it, and the scarcity of money is the only obstacle in my way. I see no way of getting on with our work without our paper. Success to the SOUTHWESTERN, its Editor and Publishers."

Rev. P. Davis, Magnolia, La., writes: "The work on this circuit suffered greatly during the political excitement and our members were scattered. But the good Lord is blessing me in my efforts to again build the walls of Zion. My church services are well attended, and we have organized some good Sunday-schools at my different appointments."

Rev. D. W. Hays, Murfreesboro, Tenn., sends more subscribers and adds: "Hope to send another list next week. The paper is indispensable to our work and must be supported."

The Board of Engineers assigned to examine the foundation of the Washington National monument have made a report to Mr. Corcoran, President of the joint commission, stating that the foundation is sufficient to sustain the weight of the complete structure, and the appropriation of $200,000 has become available.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

We have now for our lesson one of the most tender and touching narratives of Old Testament history. The story is very simple, but very vividly—almost pictorially told. The impression that it leaves is that one has been looking upon a picture of real life. It was no common assurance in the power of God that led this Shunammite woman to put her dead boy in the prophet's chamber, keep from her husband the secret of his death, and rush with all haste to throw herself at the prophet's feet. In whatever light we look at her she was truly great.

The man of God saw her afar off. Mount Carmel, as has been previously stated, gives an excellent view of the Plain of Esdraelon, which she would have to cross. The anxiety [illegible] of the rider, [illegible] ing of the [illegible] would attract [illegible] Run [illegible] to [illegible] he made out who the coming rider was, he [illegible] that there was something amiss, and that the journey was undertaken in order to see him. That he sends Gehazi to meet her on the plain shows in what esteem he had come to hold this woman. But no prophetical gift helps him to the fact. He has to grope for them as ordinary men do.

Caught him by the feet. Always before she had shown her sense of the dignity of his office by keeping at a respectful distance. When he had sent for her to come to the chamber she had had built for him, "she stood in the door," (15) not venturing to cross the threshold while he was in it. But when did such grief ever have respect to ceremony!

Our first introduction to Gehazi is not a very prepossessing one. Who he was, and from whence he came, we are not told. Plainly he had no delicacy [illegible] [illegible] an [illegible] woman away from the [illegible] his master speaks afterward [illegible] a reward from Naaman [illegible] greed [illegible] The [illegible]

Take up thy son. What she felt, none but a mother can interpret who has stood by the dead form of her only child, and who has yearned with longings unutterable to feel the arms of her boy about her neck once more. VERY [illegible]—Chickering & Son, Boston and New York, are manufacturing three styles of new scale upright pianos, which they are shipping to Mr. Philip Werlein for his Southern trade. These pianos are regarded as absolutely perfect and the model piano of the world. The Chickerings during the past fifty years have made about 50,000 pianos, and it is no unusual thing to see a Chickering 25 years in use, and in good playing order. What other piano has such a record for durability?

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am falling into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

O. S. BISLEY,
De Kalb Street, Lawrence, N. Y.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2 50 per Bottle, or Three Botties for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address, CRADDOCK & Co.,

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, Rochester N. Y.

5,000 BOOKS GIVEN AWAY For the Asking.

WHILE Dr. H. James was attached to the British Medical Staff in the East Indies, his high position enabled him to call about him the best chemists, physicians and scientists of the day, and while experimenting with and among the natives, he accidentally made the discovery that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently CURED. During the many years of his sojourn there he devoted his time to the treatment of Lung Diseases, and upon his retirement he left with us books and papers containing full particulars, showing that every one can be his own physician and prepare his own medicine, and such information as we have received we now offer to the public without price, only asking that each remit a three cent stamp for return postage. Address CRADDOCK & CO., 1032 Race st., Phila., Pa., giving name of this paper. [m153m

SOUTHWESTERN

Christian Advocate,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

1877.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in number of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many [illegible] two things are evident. [illegible] this paper is absolute[illegible] ble to maintain the newly [illegible] many respects unsettled [illegible] in the South, without the [illegible] directing power of the paper. The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heavy [illegible] ing expected among our [illegible] Outside help must be [illegible] paper cannot be a [illegible]

House and Farm.

To dress a Sheepskin.

To dress a sheepskin with the wool on, scrape the flesh from the skin and wash in soap and water; then spread the skin, wool downward, and sprinkle thickly over the flesh side a mixture of equal parts of alum and salt, finely powdered. Fold the skin and roll it up tightly and let it lay a week. Then open it and rub it with a piece of chalk and a pumice-stone alternately until it is soft and dry, pulling it and stretching it meanwhile to make it pliable. —N. Y. Times.

What Women Can Do.

The other day I told my better-half that women generally were getting to be trifling, which somewhat aroused her Irish, and as I keep a farm book she made me sit down and see how much she had sold from her poultry yard in the last twelve months, and here it is: Turkeys sold, $18; chickens sold, $23 35; eggs sold, $6 10. Total, $47 45. And the Lord only knows how many we have had for family use. So to compromise the matter I have promised to write to the Farmer all about it. Now Mr. Editor, you see what the wife of a one-horse farmer can do and never miss the time thus employed. In my next I will tell you about my little flock of sheep, the net profits, etc.—Southern Farmer.

It pays to keep accounts. Without accurate accounts it is impossible for the farmer to tell his income from the farm or to know whether he is progressing or retrograding. Besides, the general principle of practical agriculture can never be established until we have more accurate experiments on which to base them. He who makes experiments and keeps accurate accounts thereof, benefits not only himself, but farmers generally. But by farm accounts we mean not only a general account in which the farm is charged with all its expenses, and credited with all its receipts, but a minute record of each crop, charging it with all labor, seed, fertilizers, etc. and crediting it with all that is sold or used in the family. Such a minute record [illegible] a great acquisition, by [illegible]

[illegible] to pay. His reply was worth remembering by those who are quick to take [illegible] and begin a quarrel. He said, "Rather than bring action against him, with its costs and uncertainty, I would give him a receipt in full of all demand; yes, and I would send him five pounds over to cover all possible expenses."

Agricultural Items.

The Bible says, "Be thou diligent to know the success of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds."

With the new year commence [illegible]. In buying, do so according [illegible] means, and pay cash, and [illegible] for such things as can be [illegible]. In this way less will [illegible] at lower rate, and generally a better article.—Ex.

We would rather hear a Ham[illegible] than to hear [illegible] daughter play [illegible]; when her father is in debt for the organ.

If the crown in cattle is high up, [illegible] indication of a mild disposition; if it is low down, it is an indication of a vicious disposition.

[illegible] Trading Horses.

When Abraham Lincoln was a lawyer in Illinois, he and the Judge [illegible] one another about [illegible], and it was agreed [illegible] next morning at 9 o'clock [illegible] a trade, the horses [illegible] up to that hour, and [illegible] backing out, under a forfeiture [illegible] came up, leading the sorriest [illegible] of a horse ever [illegible]. In a few minutes [illegible] was seen approaching [illegible] upon [illegible]. Great were the [illegible] the laughter of the [illegible], and both were greatly in[illegible] Lincoln, on surveying [illegible] animal, sat down [illegible] exclaiming, "Well [illegible] first time I ever [illegible] in a horse trade."

[illegible]

country, the price having fallen from $78 to $54 per ton in currency. Such has been the effect of protection in the manufacture of steel rails in the United States.

The Pardoned Sinner.

He easily looks down from on high on all the empty titles and false images of earthly happiness, and when he is bereaved of them all, yea, and beset on every side with what the world calls misfortunes and afflictions, ceases not to be happy. In sorrow he is joyful, in poverty he is rich, and in chains free; when he seems buried deep so that no one ray of sun can reach him, he is surrounded with radiant lustre; when overwhelmed with ignomy he glories; and in death itself he lives, he conquers, he triumphs. What can be heavy to that man who is eased of the intolerable burden of sin? How animated was that saying of Luther "Smite, Lord, smite, for thou hast absolved me from my sins!" Whose anger would he fear who knows that God is propitious to him, that supreme King whose wrath is indeed the messenger of death, but the light of His countenance is life; who gladdens all by the rays of His favor, and by one smile disperses the darkest clouds, and calms the most turbulent tempest.—Leighton.

"May they always live in peace and harmony," was the way a Yankee marriage should have wound up. But the compositor, who could not read manuscript well, put in type and horrified the happy couple by making it read, "May they always live on peas and hominy."

A little girl said to her mamma, "Mamma, have you heard of the man that go shot?" "No, child, how did he get shot?" asked mamma. "O," said young precocious, "he bought in."

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, that the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, billious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

THE CHASTENED ONE.

Think you that your labor's ended,
Now your hands are lying still,
That for you there is no other
Noble mission to fulfill?
Greatest labor—noblest service,
Patiently to wait His will.

Think you that, that servant's idle,
Who, but standeth by the side
Of his Master—waiting—waiting
For his voice his steps to guide?
Nay, he renders choicest service,
Willing for whate'er betide.

Think you that the Savior kneeling
In the garden all alone,
Less for sinners then was living,
Than when healing stricken ones?
Oh! I trust not for, his pleadings
Show us how the goal is won.

Then when the sore heart is asking
For more active work to do,
Doubt not! In the Master's vineyard
There are silent workers too—
And the prayer, that's oftenest answered
Comes from chastened ones like you.

influence with men. Some people lay stress on blood. We sometimes hear people say they have descended from good families. We always tell them we have not. Our family was very wicked. Our father was a sinner saved by grace. So were our grandfathers clear back to Adam. Education and refinement may gloss over and cover up depravity, but, after all, people in both extremes of society are about alike. The only difference is in the fact, that in one case it is seen more than in another. A poor drunken wretch from the lower walks of life is just as good as a rich drunken gentleman. The people who sin in the higher walks of life are as guilty as those who sin in the lower. All are sinners by nature, and mere ancestry will not save any man. If your father in remote generations was a duke, or a count, or a king, that would not make you a good man.

"The Mutual Education of the Races."

MR. EDITOR.—I read with interest in your issue of March 15th an article under the above caption. A paper in the Methodist Quarterly Review of January 1st, by Professor Blyden, of Liberia, Africa, on Mohammedanism and the Negro race is made the basis of the article. If the writer knew more of Prof. Blyden and his writings he would have known that Blyden is the last man to refute his own positions without knowing it.

The writer evidently does not understand Prof. Blyden, and he therefore misrepresents him. We have read the paper by Professor Blyden carefully, more than once, and fail to find in it any trace of the proposition which this writer pronounces utterly false, namely: that there is something in Islamism that gives the Negro a higher estimate of the dignity of human nature than he will derive from Christianity. Prof. Blyden says no such thing. He simply affirms the statement of R. Bosworth Smith, that Mohammedanism has, as a fact, developed a higher type of Negro manhood, or to use the words of Mr. Smith, "The Negro who accepts Mohammedanism acquires at once a sense of the dignity of human nature not commonly found even among those who have been brought to accept Christianity."

That is the statement to which Prof. Blyden gives affirmation. He does not say that Islamism is capable of giving the Negro a higher estimate of the dignity of human nature than Christianity; he simply affirms the fact that Mohammedanism has developed a higher type of manhood among native Negroes than Christianity has among the same race in Christian lands. Prof. Blyden then proceeds to account for the sad fact by assigning several causes; and the writer of the article of March 15th makes an attempt to quote the causes mentioned by Dr. Blyden, but he strangely passes over unnoticed the prime cause. He quotes Dr. Blyden correctly as saying, "Christianity came to the Negro as a slave, at least as a subject race in a strange land." But why does the writer stop here? Why does he not go on and give us the next sentence? It is as follows: "Along with Christian teaching he and his children receive lessons of their utter and permanent inferiority and submission to their instructors, to whom they stood in the relation of chattels."

Here is the key to the whole situation. This is the secret of the failure of Christianity to do for the Negro in Christian lands what even Mohammedanism has done for native Negroes in Africa.

What Prof. Blyden says of other causes is true, but when compared with this they are as a drop to the ocean. It is a lamentable fact that the Negro in Christian lands has received, and is to-day receiving from his white teacher, along with Christian teaching, as a part of his religious instructions, lessons of his permanent inferiority to the white race. And the blasting influence of this lesson is everywhere visable upon the negro in America. There lies before me at this moment an article in the Weekly Louisianian of March 24th, on the mental and [illegible] training of the Negro, in [illegible] the writer takes the ground [illegible] white people of this country [illegible] as a race, disqualified as teachers of the colored youth, for the [illegible] that they do, with few exce[illegible] teach our people, [illegible] another, lessons of [illegible] permanent inferiority to the [illegible] race. The writer of the [illegible] referred to believe that the [illegible] of colored youth under the [illegible] of white teachers [illegible] in the present [illegible] moral and mental [illegible] He holds [illegible] and [illegible]

Methodism in Liberia.

Cape Palmas District, Liberia Conference, is presided over by Rev. C. W. Harmon, of whom Rev. J. T. Gracey says in the Pittsburgh Advocate: "He is a man of fine physique, and said to have been elected to his place in the government without any desire on his part. We saw him presiding over the Senate, with ease, grace, dignity, and conventional accuracy." This district is rather on the background, caused by the recent war. The seminary day-school progresses slowly from want of books. The number of scholars is sixty, with an average attendance of forty-five.

St. Paul's River District, Liberia Conference, Rev. D. Ware, Presiding Elder, contains five fields of labor. Careysburgh has about gone down. Bensonville and Heddington has forty-nine members and nine probationers. These last were added in a revival last July. There are only six or eight of the membership able to bear the burdens of the charge. This place promises to become the center of great religious influences. There are hundreds of heathen families in the vicinity who may be made to feel its power. Other points on this district report a decline, except St. Paul's River Circuit, where there have been gracious revivals resulting in the accession of thirty or forty souls.

The Sinoe District, Liberia Conference, has for its presiding elder, Rev. J. C. Lowrie, a native African. His face is tatooed. A broad blue mark extending from the roots of the hair down over the forehead and to the end of the nose being the tribal mark, pricked into his flesh in childhood. This district embraces two circuits, Greenville and Louisiana. During the year the Greenville Circuit has had a revival, and thirty-eight converts were received on probation. One day-school and two Sunday-schools on this circuit are doing tolerably well. Louisiana Circuit has just erected, without help from abroad, a church worth $700. The Sunday-school is attended by forty-nine children.

Rev. C. A. Pitman, of the Liberia Conference, is presiding elder of the Monrovia District, and pastor of the Methodist Church in Monrovia. He is a native belonging to the Queah tribe, but was educated in New York City. His district consists of eight fields of labor, only one of which—Monrovia—is self-supporting and has a good Sunday-school. This station has 196 members and 12 probationers. New Georgia, eight miles from Monrovia, has a neat little church, in good repair. Ammonsville, fifteen miles from Monrovia, has 53 members and a Sunday-school numbering 42. Marshall, forty miles from Monrovia, on the sea-board, has enjoyed a revival during the past year. Mt. Olive is a purely native station, fifteen miles from Marshall. We have here a dilapidated mission-house, and a house of worship built after the native style. This station is, in point of interest and efficiency, the first among the aborigines. All in all, this district is prospering.

Bassa District, Liberia Conference, of which Rev. W. P. Kennedy, is presiding elder, lies next south of the Monrovia District on the seaboard, and all except its remoter inland stations were recently visited by Bishop Haven, as were many of the points on the Monrovia District. During the past year the entire district has been visited by the Holy Spirit. Over one hundred have been converted and reclaimed; about seventy-five have been received into our Churches. This district is divided into three circuits. Buchanan Circuit has three preaching places. There are 177 full members, 29 probationers; 3 Sunday-schools; 180 scholars; 20 teachers; 1 day-school with 75 scholars; 6 local preachers; and 1 church, valued $1,200. Edina Circuit has two fine little churches. There are 33 full members; 25 probationers; 2 local preachers; 3 Sunday-schools; 177 Sunday-school scholars; 20 officers and teachers; 1 day-school; and 3 churches worth $600 each. Bexley Circuit has 72 members, 22 probationers, 2 local preachers, 3 Sunday-schools, 78 scholars; and 1 church, valued at $550.

The origin of the free schools of America was singular. In the records of Boston, New England, is the following entry; "The 13th of ye 2nd month, 1635. It was then generally agreed upon yt our brother Philemon Parmount shall be intreated to become schoolmaster for ye teaching and nourtering of all children with us." Upon this slight basis the first American common school was established, to the advantage of which Indians and whites were invited without distinction. The system spread to other towns, and what was at first a local arrangement has become national.

Satan promises what he never gives—lasting pleasure; and gives what he never promises—everlasting pain.

Interesting from India.

Writing under date of January 18th, from Bareilly, India, Dr. D. W. Thomas says: "I have during the past year, completed my Commentary on Genesis, and have a small book on Miracles in the press. I am very anxious to prepare a small work on Systematic Theology, in the Urdoo language, for our seminary and our native Christians. I hope to accomplish it. * * *

"Our North India Conference has just closed a very pleasant, and I trust profitable, session, and we have returned to our work for another year. Dr. Waugh has been appointed to Cawnpore [where the Memorial-school is located, and of which he will have charge.—ED.], and Dr. Scott comes to Bareilly, in charge of the native Church. Bro. John Thoms and myself have the work of the Theological Seminary. I have just completed our new Theological Building, and it was dedicated by Bishop Andrews. The Bishop expressed himself highly pleased, with the building and the school. Brothers Peck and Hillman, of Troy, (New York), have presented a very nice bell. It has arrived, and we are delighted with it, and very thankful."

The Old Preacher.

The old preacher—God bless him! His face is wrinkled, his hair is turning gray, he has lost the fire of youth; and when he preaches he does not storm, and stamp, and make more noise than is necessary, as some young men do. Maybe he did these things once; but that does not matter, he does not do them now. Thirty-five years ago he commenced to preach; then he was only twenty years old. Then he was called a promising young man. The church had great hopes of his becoming a good preacher—one who would be able to fill the most important stations, and travel a district as presiding elder; and those who hoped for most were not disappointed. He met their expectations. He improved fast; and the people among whom he labored sent word to conference to return him another year; and the third year they asked for him, and the fourth; and when he was taken away from them they grieved, and [illegible] and all said: "We hope he may be sent back to us in a few years." As he improved, petitions came to the stationing committees at every conference for him, and he was in demand everywhere. He would have been welcomed to the most important appointments in the conference; and the poor, out-of-the-way circuits sighed as they thought there was no hope of his ever being sent to preach for them. But that was long ago; then he was only about thirty or thirty-five years of age. But now he is old, he is fifty-five. He has fought many a hard battle against sin and the devil and he has gained glorious victories, too. He has had great revivals of religion on his charges, hundreds of sinners have been brought to Christ under his ministry. He has improved in his preaching, too; he is better acquainted with the Scriptures, and there is more Bible in his sermons than there used to be. His sermons are clearer, more comprehensive and thorough than in his younger days; but then he is old—and who wants an old preacher?—Religious Telescope

One Man.

The greatest works that have been done have been done by the ones. The hundreds do not do much. Take any church: there are many in it, but it is some two or three who do the work. Look at the Reformation: there might be many reformers, but there was but one Luther; there might be many teachers but there was but one Calvin. Look upon the preachers of the past age, the mighty preachers who stirred up the Church; there were many helpers with them, but, after all, it was not Whitfield's friends or Wesley's friends, but the men themselves that did it. Individual effort is, after all, the grand thing. A man alone can do more than a man with fifty men at his heels to fetter him. It is said that if Noah's ark had had to be built by a company they would not have laid the keel yet; and it is perhaps true. There is scarcely anything done by a body, it almost always fails, because what is many men's business is just nobody's business at all. Just the same with religion the grand things must be done by the ones, the great works of God must be accomplished by single men. Look back through all history. Who delivered Israel from the Philistines? It was solitary Sampson. Who was it gathered the people together to route the Midianites? It was one Gideon, who cried, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." Separate men—David with his sling and stones—have done more than armies could accomplish.—The Morning.

LITHOGRAPHIC PLAN, NO. 1.

[Plans, detailed drawings, specifications and form of contract, all complete, ready for the builder, sent by mail on receipt of $5. Address all communications to Rev. A. J. Kynett, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, Church Extension Rooms, No. 1020 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

This is a neat, plain frame church, 30x50 feet, 14 feet posts, raised ceiling, giving 20 feet 6 inches in the center; gallery across the front end, with vestibule in the center, and class-room at each side, communicating with the audience room by sliding sash-doors, making all the room available, and giving good accommodations for the Sunday-school.

It is built in cheap but substantial style, and may be with or without the belfry.

Among the places building by this plan is New Derry, Pa. They report concerning it as follows:

"We did the excavating and delivered the stone ourselves, then contracted for $1,800, which included belfry and heater. We followed the plans in all the particulars, and are very much pleased with the church. We have very beautiful glass in the windows."

In the South, and elsewhere where lumber and labor are cheap, it would cost still less.

The Need of Plans.

We have long been persuaded that no church, better than one of the old-fashioned log houses of the frontier, should ever be built without first procuring plans showing in detail how all the work is to be done, from foundation to turret, so that the end may be clearly seen from the beginning. Such plans can be prepared only by a competent architect, and, if possible, one should be found who has experience in Church building, and who knows something of the special wants of a Methodist Church and a well organized Sunday-school, and is familiar [illegible] providing for them. We know right well how hard it is to convince pastors, building committees and trustees—all of whom must always be consulted—of these things, but we declare our convictions, founded in the uniform experience of church builders, as we have learned it, and give all an opportunity to profit thereby.

We recall an instance, in which a was proposed to build a church in it small town, at a cost of about $8,000. An architect was consulted, and offered to furnish plans, all complete, for $160. They thought the price too high, and the carpenter who desired to do the work, and who did it, encouraged this view, and proposed to furnish his own plans without charge. He had put up a great many buildings, and knew how to do it, and could, they thought, do it well enough. They employed him. Frequent changes had to be made, as the work progressed. The building was of brick. The walls were a plain surface, without pilasters; the windows Gothic pointed. The front was perfectly plain, with a low narrow door in the centre, the roof about the pitch of that of an ordinary barn, and upon it was saddled what was intended to represent a spire, with no support from the foundation. The interior was a regular oblong, with level ceiling, and the pews were for the punishment of the victimized people. At the end of all, the good carpenter who had furnished his own plans without charge, came in with a "bill of extras," amounting to over $800; and, within five years, they spent over $2,000 in remodeling their church, which when done, was still unsightly and inconvenient.

In another case, a plain country church was to be built. Of course plans were unnecessary for that, for it was to be as plain and cheap as possible; so they agreed with a carpenter, and he figured out a bill of material; and they sent their committee to purchase it. They made inquiries of the lumber merchants, and, before purchasing, called, at the suggestion of the pastor, upon a friend, an architect, and asked his opinion. He looked at their bill and asked what size their church was to be. They answered 30x40, twelve feet posts. "The proportions are bad," said the architect; "why don't you make it longer and higher?" "Can't afford it," was the reply. "You can save enough on your framing timbers alone," said he, "to cover the difference." "What size should it be?" inquired the committee. "30x50, with posts 16 feet high, if the ceiling is to be level." "Give us a bill of quanties, and let us see," said the committee. This was done, and they were surprised to find that, by reducing the needless thickness of sills, and posts, and plates, and joists, etc., etc., they could build the larger size and better proportions suggested, and save over $200 on the lumber bill.

To make any approach toward perfection in building, the model must exist in somebody's mind before it can be put into outward form, and he must be capable of comprehending the want to be supplied, and of seeing the building in detail, as it is to rise into the necessity to be filled by it, and to put it on paper, in pictures and words, describing its various parts, so that every one, who has any part of the work to do, shall see clearly how it is to be done, in order that every part shall fit in its place, and all conspire together to realize the perfect model which existed in his mind, while as yet the stone was in the quarry and the timber in the forest. Such [illegible] is determined by his ability to devise a perfect model, and to describe it clearly and accurately.

When God, through Moses, said to Israel, "Make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them," he gave particular directions about every part of it, and charged him repeatedly, "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount." The pattern showed to Moses in the mount was the perfect model devised by the Infinite Architect for that holy place.—Church Extension Annual.

It is to be a "crown octavo," of over 500 pages, full, large, open type, fine paper, and binding neat and attractive. Mr. Daniels' well-known literary ability, his long acquaintance with Mr. Moody, and the fact that he received the most of his information concerning the life of Mr. Moody from the mother and other relatives of the latter, and has heard him preach in Europe and America a great number of times, give him superior facilities for making a good book. The book will be exceedingly attractive in every respect. It will be sold only by subscription. It will, no doubt, have a large circulation. Orders are already coming in—one being received for 1,000 copies. Persons desiring agencies should address Nelson & Phillips, New York, or Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Chicago, or St. Louis.

Wiley University.

This institution, located near Marshall, Texas, is one of the several schools controlled and supported in the South by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. At its beginning five years ago, two serious mistakes were made. The institution was located too far away from the city, and scholars were admitted without being required to pay any incidental fee. The first mistake made it impossible to draw students from the city, and the second, left the school without any contingent fund to pay incidental expenses, and at the same time did the worst thing in making the impression among its patrons, that their children could be educated without any expense to them. The last mistake has been remedied, and an incidental fee is now charged, but the new regime has driven some away and kept others from starting. Doing for a people what they could have done for themselves, injures them, and in the end lessens their respect for their benefactors.

The first and greater mistake is to be remedied also. Bishop Wiley and Dr. Rust, President and Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society visited Marshall a few weeks since and determined to buy property within the city, and at once to erect a new and commodious buildings and remove the institution into them. Ten acres of ground have been bought and paid for by Dr. Rust, on which are some buildings which can be utilized for dwelling houses. It is proposed to build one building to cost $5000, to begin with.

It must not be thought that Wiley University has not been doing any good work. It is a blessed fact that God uses imperfect instrumentalities, or the best of us would be cast aside. So it is in managing great church enterprises. Mistakes will lessen the degree of success, but nevertheless there is success. For three years this school, under the management of Rev. F. C. Moore and his wife, gave instruction to nearly a hundred students. Some of these are now in the ministry: some are teaching school, and some are yet in the school continuing for a full course of instruction. The present principal, Rev. W. [illegible] and his assistant, Miss Perkins of Kenosha, Wis., are doing good work. The average attendance is about fifty and among these is a good class studying for the ministry. We lately spent a day in the school and speak from what we saw and heard.

The original property of the school consisted of a farm of one hundred and ninety acres. Of this some few acres have been sold. The remainder can be sold in small parcels and the original purchase money saved with good interest. The buildings can be disposed of or utilized on the new grounds. No labor that is really good is ever lost.

On Monday night March 26th, a meeting was held in our church at Marshall, to see what could be done toward raising money to start the new building. It was an enthusiastic gathering, presided over by Prof. Davis, who led off, after the religious exercises, with a telling speech. He was followed by Hon. S. R. Roberts who has worthily represented his District in the Texas Legislature for several years. He spoke and was followed by Col. Russell of Marshall. Prof. Davis had done some canvassing beforehand, and read his report, after which subscriptions were called for. Mr. Roberts put down $150 or 25,000 brick, whichever was preferred. Col. Russell quietly stated to the Secretary that whenever it was needed he would contribute $100 cash. So the work went on. We publish a list of subscriptions elsewhere. The amount subscribed was $2,198,00. This is certainly a grand result to begin with. Col. Russell thought $500 could be raised among a few leading citizens, and many others who were not present will contribute. We feel sure that $2500 cash can be counted on for the new building in [illegible] stone. On this basis we were requested to prepare an appeal to Dr. Rust for $2500. That appeal [illegible] forward and is followed [illegible] of hundreds. There [illegible] but it will be granted, [illegible] gives the money, [illegible] the church to [illegible] of the Freedmen's [illegible] help. Its work in [illegible] now, needs to be [illegible] strongly pushed, [illegible] imperative.

A Good Town to Live In.

One of the marvels of new countries is the rapidity with which towns and cities spring up. The story has been told over and over again in the history of every Western State, in fact of all the States in the Union. Just now the eyes of thousands are fixed on Texas. From the central and eastern South, and from the North and north-west, from one to two hundred thousand people are yearly pouring into the Lone Star State. Towns and cities are springing up as by magic. To follow these thronging multitudes with the gospel is the work of the church, and God holds the Methodist Episcopal Church responsible for her share of this great undertaking.

Lawrence, on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, thirty miles east of Dallas, is an illustration in point. This town was laid out three years ago. To day there are six hundred people in the place, and almost daily others are coming. It started first as a colony. The colony idea has been outgrown, and now we talk about town councils and the like. The Lawrence Times is published by Messrs Jones and Goddard. The former was for years a leading Methodist in Cincinnati, and the latter is a graduate of Yale, and a Congregationalist in church government and a Methodist in religious enthusiasm. A large cotton gin and grain elevator is being erected. The Presbyterians have a good church. The Baptists have a pastor waiting for a congregation to come, and in the mean time he is making a farm. He will not have to wait long. A railroad of which J. Burwell, Esq. is president, is projected from Sabine Pass, on the Gulf, to Sherman, two hundred and fifty miles, and is to cross the Pacific at Lawrence. Sixty-five miles have been graded, and will soon be running. It goes through one hundred and fifty miles of fine timber land and has State subsidies. Sabine harbor is the finest harbor on the north Gulf coast. This road will cross the Houston and New Orleans road near the Louisiana line and will be of immense importance to the Crescent City. If New Orleans would subscribe for two or three years what she spends in the pompous and foolish displays of carnival week, to building railroads towards and through Texas, she would give evidence of better business sense.

Rev. Jesse Grant is pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Lawrence. He was transferred last fall from the Southern Illinois Conference. We want a dozen just such men as he is, and enough missionary money to help support them for a year or two, in our work among the white people of Texas. The Bishop who will secure half that number and transfer them and secure the needed money, will do that for which he will always be blest. Our Lawrence church building was blown down, but the faith of the brethren failed not. A parsonage has been erected, and a cheap structure put up to worship in. In that church gather as devoted a band of christian workers as can be found on the continent. The membership numbers sixty-five and the congregation one hundred and fifty. On the 18th inst. one hundred and eleven were in the Sabbath-school. Two children and five adults were baptized. Of the latter one was by sprinkling and four by immersion. Nine probationers were received into full connection. Twenty-three have been received into the church since January. Lawrence is the first place in the South we have seen where a saloon does not thrive. The one there has failed several times. Usually saloons ruin the people, but in this case the tables are turned, and the people are so temperate that the saloon dies. Would to God it were so everywhere.

"Jasper and Gold," a choice collection of song-gems for sunday-schools, social meetings and times of refreshing, by E. C. O'Kane, has been placed on our table. It is a work of 160 pages, and, we think, a most desirable one. The plan seems to have been to avoid that which is merely sensational in Sunday-school music, and give place to that which is substantial and good. We find such pieces as "Ninety and Nine" and "The Gate Ajar," and in the latter part of the book a number of those standard old Church tunes which Christians will love and sing until they exchange them for the "new song" of the redeemed in Heaven. The Texas and Pacific Railroad.

The Texas and Pacific Railroad now operates about four hundred miles of road. Starting at Shreveport it runs westward to Fort Worth. The first seventy-five miles runs through an immense timber region, and there the road strikes the magnificent rolling praries of northern Texas. Towns and citi s are springing up along its line, and the surrounding country at each important point is rapidly settling up. From Shreveport to Fort Worth it is one hundred and seventy-five miles. At Marshall, forty miles west of Shreveport, the Texas Pacific has a road running northward seventy-five miles to Texarkana. All the travel of the International Road from southern and central Texas passes by this section, to St. Louis, and Memphis. Over this route pours one continued stream of immigration with the Lone Star State. Starting from Texarkana, westward it what was formerly the Transcontinental railroad. This too is now owned and controlled by the Texas and Pacific company. This division runs westward, parallel with the Shreveport and Fort Worth division, and seventy-five miles to the north, to Sherman. It is hereafter to be built to Fort Worth. These two divisions uniting at Fort Worth are to form the Southern Pacific. Congressional legislation and aid were expected to help out the great national work, at the last session, but the Presidential contest took precedence. This is distined to be the most popular highway to the Pacific coast. The distance for half the East is no more than by the Central Pacific, and then there will be no snow blockades, or bitter cold weather to check trade or travel.

The importance of this route to Louisiana and especially to New Orleans can scarcely be estimated. The Crescent City would receive millions of trade yearly from the Texas and Pacific if a railroad was completed from Shreveport to New Orleans.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Marshall, Texas, is a large and earnest body of christian people. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Brown, is a progressive and hard working Methodist minister. He believes in giving his people every means of self improvement. He makes the SOUTHWESTERN a specialty, and sends a good list of subscribers, accompanying the order with $26.75 cash, with a promise of more in a few days.

Monument for Dr. McDonald.

President W. W. Hooper, of Shaw University, Holly Springs, Miss., writes that a meeting of the members and friends of the M. E. Church was held at that place to take into consideration the erection of a monument to the memory of the late Rev. A. C. McDonald, D. D. An organization was formed and a numerous committee appointed, including the five Presiding Elders of Mississippi Conference, to raise funds and superintend the work.

President Hooper adds: "I hope that all the Presiding Elders and ministers of the Mississippi Conference will place the subject at once before the people and receive what they are willing to give to this most commendable enterprise. We are sure that the many friends of the deceased will be glad of the opportunity to pay this last tribute of respect to one who gave his best labors in their behalf. Send moneys at once by post-office order, express or registered letter to F. P. Hill or Robt. Cunningham, Holly Springs, Miss."

Analogy.

Induction may transcend the bounds of observation and experience. We may infer with safety existence of laws from the repetition of phenomena. Universal truths may be ascertained from the aggregation of particular facts. Hence analogy may enable us to infer where observation and experience do not reach. Analogy does not prove much but it does establish probability. If I was searching in a field for a certain kind of plant and should find it in three acres out of four my natural inference would be that it exists in the fourth also, yet it might not, and hence we see that analogy is not the highest kind of certainty. Its province is to guide us in searching for truth and that is worth much to an enquiring mind.

Mrs. President Hayes and Her Schoolmates.

The following, from the correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is of more than local interest:

It so happened that six of her school-mates were living in Washington the day of the inauguration. These old class-mates still possessed their school badge, the design of which is novel and pretty. The ladies met and conferred with each other. The result of the conference was an order to a florist for a copy of the badge in buds and blossoms. This tribute they sent Tuesday to Mrs. Hayes, with the card of each. Mrs. Hayes quickly recognized the old school badge in the floral tribute and wrote a note of thanks to each one of the ladies, and an invitation to call and see her the next morning. The invitation was accepted, and the re-union was full of interest and pleasure to each one.

Rev. Smith Pratt of Jefferson, Texas, sends to this office a splended list of subscribers—fifty in all. Jefferson is a city of perhaps five thousand inhabitants, and is a hundred miles by water northwest of Shreveport, and sixteen miles north of Marshall on the Texas and Pacific Rail-road. Formerly it controlled an immense trade, shipping some years nearly a hundred thousand bales of cotton. But the building of railroads, especially the Texas Central, has almost ruined the place. Several enterprising gentlemen have united to build a narrow guage road from Jefferson westward; with a view of regaining trade.

In a letter to the New York Advocate, Bishop Haven says of some of the men he met:

Dr. Blyden is the well-known scholar and writer, who has been a contributor to our Quarterly, as to other American and European magazines. He was born in the West Indies. His mother was a Methodist; he was educated in Liberia, and is now head teacher in the Alexander High School, a Presbyterian institute, formerly at Monrovia, now located up the St. Paul's. He has a fine eye, cultivated manner, easy address, and shows breeding both of school and society. Mr. Pitman is a native, educated in our schools here and in America, and is held in very high esteem among all our brethren, and in the whole community. His wife is a lady from Charleston. Mr. Ware is a native of Liberia, though of American parentage. He is a popular speaker, and was elected to the last General Conference, as was Brother Pitman to the one previous.

Miss Kimberly, a music teacher of Newark, N. J., was the author of the hymn commencing, "I want to be an angel."

The conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas were the first to incorporate in their reports on Fraternity the unequivocal statement that the Cape May agreement guaranteed to the Methodist Episcopal Church, the unquestioned right to prosecute her work in every part of the South. The Virginia conference follows on this line. We quote two of its resolutions:

"It is clear that the commission recognized the Methodist Episcopal Church as a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States; therefore, that Church has full and equal rights with the M. E. Church South in all of the States and territories of the Union by agreement of both Churches represented by the commission; and any effort to impress our people with the idea that the Methodist Episcopal Church is bound to disband within, or withdraw from Southern territory is in violation of the agreement of the commissioners.

The recommendation to both Churches to compose their difficulties by the union of weak societies, applies only in cases where both parties are contending for the same church-house. Were it a general rule, embracing all weak societies in both Churches, its enforcement would require the M. E. Church South in many places to disband and unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church not only in Virginia and West Virginia, but more especially in Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, the whole West, on the Pacific coast, and also in Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama."

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. R. L. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., says: "Our work is in good condition. Here we have a good Sunday-school, and on the circuit we have an attendance of five hundred and fifty Sunday-school scholars. We have one new church building in process of erection."

Rev. W. H. Malloy, Houston, Texas, writes: "Our first District Conference will be held at Richmond, commencing on Wednesday, April 25th. All the brethren of the District are requested to be present at the opening. Our new church at Galveston will be dedicated April 8th. We expect Rev. L. H. Carhart of Dallas, and Rev. Buckley of New York to be present. I expect soon a supply of Bibles, Hymn Books, Disciplines, Stationery etc, etc, from Book Concern in New York. Preachers of the District are requested to send orders to me at Houston. We want to put a family Bible into every home of our people."

Rev. P. Harris, Pass Christian, Miss., says. "We have a protracted meeting in progress; thirteen conversions up to this time, and the interest is unabated. Our Sunday-school has doubled in numbers this year, and in spiritual matters all seems encouraging. Money is so very scarce on this coast that we have been slow in sending our list of subscribers. But do not give me up. We expect to get in by the eleventh hour any way."

Rev. J. H. Weaver, Lillard Mill Tenn., says: "Our quarterly meeting proved to be a time of great blessing to us. Presiding Elder Pickett preached for us three times, church members were greatly encouraged, and four persons were at the altar as seekers of salvation. Our benevolent collections were good. This has been called the poor circuit of the District, but it will do its part."

Camp Parapet Quarterly Conference of this city, Rev. R. W. Overton, Pastor, was held on March 18th by Rev. Joseph Gould. The church was reported by the Pastor as in a prosperous condition. There are two Sunday-schools connected with the work; the average attendance of scholars is thirty. Owing to hardness of the times collections have not been so good as had been hoped.

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a protracted meeting. There were eight conversions and sixteen accessions to the Church. We have a large and flourishing Sunday-school. The faculty of Shaw University and of the State Normal School give us their aid as teachers."

Rev. A. Campbell, Calvert, Texas, says: "We are engaged in a protracted meeting. There have been so far five conversions and nine accessions to the Church. With the help of the Lord the good work shall go forward."

Rev. John W. Walker, West Point, Miss., writes: "Our quarterly meeting was held by Presiding Elder Adams. The services were largely attended and we had a good meeting. We hope that the Lord will soon send us a good Shepherd; we feel that we lost a good one in death of Bro. McDonald, and we hope to meet him in Heaven. We have received fifteen members into the Church this year. There are four Sunday-schools on the work, all doing well."

Rev. H. Johns, Marion Circuit, Texas, writes that he has three churches on his work. Since conference eight have joined the Church. Good Sunday-schools are in each church.

F. E. P., of San Antonio, Texas, asks us certain questions. Our rule is to throw all communications not having the writer's name into the waste basket, but we will answer this in a general way. We want news from any and all of the churches, whether sent us by preacher, Sunday-school scholar,—any one, whether church member or not. But it must be news. A preacher, for instance, will write us that he preached a certain time, state when the sacrament, love-feast and quarterly conference were held, and close with "please publish." Those are the ordinary church services; we all know that they are being held in every church all over the land. Again we have before us a big paper containing preamble, resolutions and names of committees and telling of a great work the brethren are going to do. Well, when the work is done, if they will write to us our readers shall know all about it. If you are not a Christian it is your own fault; get converted, then go tell your neighbor of a Savior's love. If your church is out of repair, put it in repair; if you have no church build one. Do something, Methodism is said to be Christianity in earnest. Our Southern Methodism must be no exception. See to it that the borders of Zion in your vicinity are enlarged—that her walls are built up, and that God's Israel are making spiritual progress, and then tell the SOUTHWESTERN, that the hearts of Christians elsewhere may be made glad. If your church members have no spiritual life do not complain that your pastor has nothing to write.

Religious Items.

Major Penn, a Baptist evangelist, is having great success in Texas. At Waco there were 700 converts, at Paris 100, at Dallas 260, and at Galveston up to the present there have been 60.

Messrs. Harvey and Johnston, missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church, will be enabled to return to their field in Egypt through the generous donation $1,000 by a young Presbyterian lady of Pittsburg.

The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly will meet in the First Presbyterian Church of this city, May 17th next, at which time the retiring Moderator, Dr B. M. Smith, is expected to preach. The Northern Assembly adjourned to meet at the same time, in the Second Presbyterian Church of Chicago—Moderator Henry J. Van Dyke, D. D., to preach.

Protestant Christianity is making rapid progress in Mexico. There are now in that country 125 Protestants congregations, 11 churches and 99 halls of worship. There are free day schools and 28 night schools, 50 orphanages, and 2 theological seminaries. Six presses are employed in the publication of religious literature.

Toplady, the author of "Rock of Ages"—possibly the best of all hymns—wrote thus of his own conversion: "Strange that I, who so long sat under the means of grace in England, should be brought nigh to God in an obscure part of Ireland, amidst a handful of God's people met together in a barn, and under the ministry of one who could hardly spell his name! Surely it was the Lord's doing!"

For the accommodation of this great multitude of members there are 15,634 churches, valued at little less than $70,000,000; for the use of the preachers there are 5,077 parsonages, of the value of $9,500,000. The increase of the churches in the past ten years has been 5,172; the increase in the number of parsonages, 1,763. An increase of but one church was reported for 1876. In prosperous years the number of new churches built is about one a day.

Dr. Monfort in a letter to the Herald and Presbyter from Rome says: The Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States is doing a successful work in Italy. Rev. L. M. Vernon, formerly of St. Louis, is superintendent, with headquarters in Rome. He began the work five years ago, and there are now twelve churches, two in Rome, and one each in Naples, Florence, Venice, Milan and other places of less note, and fifteen preachers, most of them converts from Rome. Their only house of worship is in Rome. In other places halls are rented for public worship and schools. The members of the Church now number over 800. I regard Mr. Vernon as very highly qualified for such superintendency. He is a man of good address, of great energy and industry, and of the knowledge and culture needed in such a work."

The statistics of the Methodist Episcopal Church for 1876 show no serious diminution of its rapid growth. The total number of members at the close of the year was 1,386,809; the total of probationers was 226,758—making a grand total of 1,613,[illegible]. The net increase of members and probationers for the year is [illegible]; the net increase of the [illegible] past ten years is [illegible]. The preachers are either [illegible] or local. The former are pastors; the latter preach as they have opportunity, and without compensation. The present number of itinerants is 11,361, and of local preachers 12,509. The total increase of preachers, travelling and local, in ten years has been 7,692. The travelling preachers are distributed into eighty-eight annual conferences and receive their appointments from eleven bishops. The Methodist episcopacy is not diocesan; the bishops have equal authority in all of the conferences. To each is assigned every year a certain number of conferences by the vote of the Episcopal Board.

The Southern Methodist Episcopal Church has 3,271 travelling preachers, 5,482 local preachers, and 715,951 members. Tweed is soon to be liberated on condition that he will turn over to the city of New York the remnant of his property, which is probably about $250,000. The suit against Sweeney, for $7,000,000, is postponed to June 1.

The Niagara suspension bridge, which has been closed two weeks for examination is pronounced safe. Out of 1,450 wires constituting the four large cables, only ten of the minor ones were found corroded, and they have been replaced by new ones.

In proof of the revival of business, it is stated that all the cotton mills of Rhode Island are now running, and the productions of seven-eighths of them to April 1st, and some to July 1st, are already contracted for.

Four distinguished descendants of Roger Sherman occupy high positions in Washington, viz.: Gen. Wm. T. Sherman; Hon. John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury; Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, Secretary of State; and the Massachusetts Senator, Hon. Geo. F. Hoar.

Few cities in the South have recovered more rapidly from the ravages of the war than Richmond, Va. The late annual message of Mayor Carrington state the population has increased from 58,000 in 1870 to 75,000 at the close of 1876.

Michigan has passed an act prohibiting in that State the publication of advertisements, in any form, or notice of any kind, to aid in procuring a divorce in that State or elsewhere. The penalty for violating the law is a thousand dollars fine and imprisonment.

In the next House of Representatives the number of Democrats will be 151, Republicans 140. This includes entering two Democrats from Florida, Louisiana and South Carolina, and leaving off one Republican each in Missouri and California, where certificates have not been issued.

Mr. Nathan Appleton, one of the persons who has charge of the preparations for the representations of the United States at the Paris exhibition of 1878, estimates that $300,000 is the least sum with which a proper display can be made, on the supposition that the goods will be received at New York in government warehouses and shipped to Havre in United States government vessels. He believes, however, that $500,000 should be appropriated to do the country full credit at Paris.

The Friends have charge of about twenty thousand Indians. Their Executive Committee reports that at Roseville, Kansas, the Pottawattomies have ninety-five farms, a boarding school and a school farm. Many of the children are advancing in arithmetic, grammar and history. The Modocs have 200 acres enclosed, have log-houses built by themselves, and are well disposed. The Friends are confident that the Indians can be both civilized and Christianized, and this is the conviction of the Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church, according to the report made at its recent session in Philadelphia.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

The remedy sugested (1–4).—Naaman was a soldier who had so distinguished himself by bravery as to become the commander-in-chief of all the king's forces.

The Syrians had gone out by companies. These "companies" were marauding bands. One of their trophies was a little maid, and, as she waited on Naaman's wife it is rather probable that he had given his sanction to the expedition that had torn her away from her home. Poor little captive! How little there is in the narrative that indicates how heavy were her misfortunes or how acute was her anguish! We do not know even, that she was rewarded for the results of her suggestion. We see only her humility, her up-lifting faith in the God of Israel and her pitying desire to bless them that had despitefully used her. And yet that is enough to make her stand out as one of the radiant characters of Old Testament history. One cannot read about her unselfish devotion without a certain tenderness and warmth of heart as well as of reverence. "Would God my Lord were with the prophet." The little maid represented the true religion in a heathen land. Her mouth was not closed now that she was a captive. In the presence of idolatry she kept not silence. She made mention of the name of her God in the very family of her master, but in such a way as to show how much she desired to benefit him.

The remedy sought (5–7).—"A word spoken in due season, how good is it!" There is no telling what may come of it. The little maid had not thought of the result of her artless faith. She did not dream that it would carry conviction to the heart of her master, interest even the king himself, and cause an expedition to be fitted out to test the truth of her declaration. Go to—equivalent to "come now." And I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. The immediate interest that the king took in the matter indicates the great favor in which he held Naaman.

The remedy promised (8–10.—The errand was not to fail of its object simply because of the ignorance of Jehoram. God was guiding in this matter, and hence there could be no miscarriage. When Elisha, the man of God, had heard Naaman's coming had caused a sensation. His splendid retinue had attracted everybody's attention.

Not a doubt in his mind that he would find the prophet all obsequiousness. So pride comes into the presence of God. Has no doubt of its exceptance. Its prayer is the prayer of the Pharisee and not of the publican. It has no doubts—but its faith is presumption and not true faith at all. Go and wash. Simple thing to do. "Believe and be saved" is equally simple. The very simplicity of the gospel is a cause of stumbling to many. It requires nothing difficult of any one. If it did it might be beyond the reach of many. And thou shalt be clean. The promise was positive. There was no condition about it except the simple one of washing. The thing promised was just what he wanted—just what he had come such a long way to secure. The gospel promises with equal explicitness that those who wash in the blood of Christ shall be cleansed from all sin. To be cleansed from all sin is what thousands desire—but how few there are that plunge into the fountain and become clean! The remedy refused (11–12).—But Naaman was wroth. His pride was wounded. He had not been treated with any more respect than as if he were a beggar instead of a wealthy and celebrated general. Behold I thought, etc. Naaman is not the only man that has attempted to dictate the method of his cure. Thousands there are who have supposed that they had to be converted after the example of some others whose experiences they have heard. But every one, however, has to come to the Lord in his own way, and, in the majority of cases, a very common sort of way. Naaman had it all fixed up in his mind. It was to be quite dramatic. The prophet was to come out with great but deferential dignity, call on the name of his God, strike his hand upon the place, and recover the leper. That would have been worth telling in Damascus. How many there are that want to be converted in that dramatic sort of a way—that desire a thrilling experience in order that they may be the wonder and admiration of prayer meetings and revivals! Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better? No!—A thousand times no! For it is not clear and limpid water that Naaman wants to bathe in, but waters that have healing in them. The waters of Jordan are discolored but if he washes in them he will be cleansed of his leprosy. The fountain opened for sin and uncleanness is also discolored—reddened with the blood of the Son of God. Men may prefer other means of cleansing—but this is the only one that is ever known to cure. Morality, philosophy, pantheism—rivers of Damascus, all of them—can never cleanse the leprosy of the soul. Went away in a rage. Men convicted of sin are often in a rage. They rage about the very thing that will end all that trouble and give them peace. Naaman raged against the nonsense, when he came to be cured of leprosy, of sending him to take a bath!

Had bid thee to do some great thing. Of course he would have done it. If men now could only earn salvation by the accomplishment of some great deed there would be manyfold more attempting to get in the kingdom than now. Severe penalties and mortifications of the flesh, long and painful journeys, protracted vigils—nothing would be too great to be undertaken. But salvation is "not of works lest any man should boast." How much rather, then,—wash and be clean. How much rather! Take salvation as a gift and all is done. There is no possible failure. The cure is immediate and complete.

Then went he down. Came to his better judgment. Gave up his false pride. Consented to do what appeared to be a very insensate thing. Willing to appear ridiculous if need be—anything to be cured. When a sinner is willing to accept salvation with that sort of a spirit his leprosy will also soon be healed. Dipped seven times. Followed the exact directions of the word of the man of God. When one says he has tried, and does not believe there is anything in the idea of a new birth, it will always be found that in some essential matters he has failed to follow out the directions given in the Word. His flesh came again like unto the flesh of a child. Marvelous transformation! The hard, white, leprous skin, the mark of bondage to a loathsome disease, disappeared and in its place came the soft, and beautiful flesh of a little child—evidence of health. A new birth, as it were, had taken place in those dippings in Jordan—a new birth is experienced by him who is cleansed in the blood of Christ. He becomes as it were a little child, newly born in the kingdom of God. "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

LOST FRIENDS.

Note.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the Southwestern. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any cases where friends are brought together by means of letters in the Southwestern.

Information is wanted concerning Willis Carnes, supposed to live in Tennessee in vicinity of Memphis. Address Rev. J. R. Carnes, Giddings, Texas.

Jerrah Oliver, Hempstead, Waller county, Texas, desires information of the following named persons, his cousins, viz.: Nanny, Margaret, Lou, and Saclia. Their master's name was Vaughn or Vaughner, and lived in Columbia, Caldwell Parish, Louisiana.

Green Haynes, Hempstead, Waller county, Texas, desires information of his uncle, Ephraim Thompson, whose master's name was William McDow; and of his cousin, Howard Harrison, son of Jeff. Harrison and Tilyia Harrison. Howard is about 22 or 23 years old, and Ephraim Thompson is about 43 or 44 years old.

I wish to enquire concerning my two brothers, Allen and Marion, who were carried from Baton Rouge during the war. I was told that Allen was brought to Texas by Mr. Morgan. Marion, who formerly belonged to Henry Lusk, was taken to Virginia, by a Mr. Smith. I formerly belonged to Mrs. Mary Allen. My mother's name was Eliza Lusk, and I had two sisters, Ellen and Charlotte. Information concerning my kindred will be most thankfully received. Direct letters in care of Rev. P. Douglass, Galveston, Texas.

I want to find my children. Their mother's name was Mary McDoniels. The oldest girl was named Harriet and two boys named Henry and Wesley. She was the mother of six children, three being dead. She lived in Dangerfield, Titus, (now Morris) county, Texas, and belonged to Mr. McDaniels, a grocery keeper. I went by the name of Fayette Loftridge. If the children are alive the oldest is about sixteen. We were separated in 1861 by a division of the estate. Any information will be thankfully received. Address me, at Jefferson Texas.

Encouragement for the Feeble.

Debility, whether it be inherent, or caused by overtaxed strength, or protracted illness, has a most depressing influence upon the mind, breeding an abject melancholy nearly akin to despair, and enforcing the abandonment of cherished projects and high hopes. Happily, the enfeebled system, even in extreme cases, is susceptible of invigoration. It is proved by incontrovertible evidence that Hostetters Stomach Bitters is an unfailing strengthener of the weak, and that in addition to vitalizing the physical organization, it establishes regularly among those organs upon whose efficient discharge of the duties imposed on them by nature, continued vigor and health depend. Thousands of instances might be cited to show the regenerating influence of this health-giving agent in cases of debility, liver disease, dyspepsia, nervous ailments, constipation, intermittent fever, urinary and uterine troubles, gout and rheumatism, and other maladies.

"By their Works Ye Shall Know Them."

The Irishman who thought the druggist stingy because the emetic was so small, is only surpassed in his parsimonious drollery by those who persistently adhere to the use of those nauseating, disgustingly large and drastic pills, while Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, which are sugar-coated and little larger than mustard seeds, will, by their steady and gentle action on the liver, correct all torpidity, thus permanently overcoming constipation. In South America they have almost entirely superseded all other pills, and are relied on fully by the people, and often used as a preventive of the the various affections of the stomach, liver, and bowels, so prevalent in that climate. Pierce's Pocket Memorandum Books are given away at drug stores.

Smyrna, Aroostook Co., Me., Nov. 6, '76.
Dr. R. V. Pierce, M. D.:

Dear Sir—I write to inform you that I have used your Pellets for some time, and find them to be the best medicine that I ever used. I have also used your Favorite Prescription in my family with entire satisfaction. I have seen your People's Common Sense Medical Adviser and I think it is the best thing I have ever seen. Yours truly,

O. Sherman.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am failing into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine.

O. S. Bisley,
De Kalb Street, Lawrence, N. Y.
January 8, 1877.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2 50 per Bottle, or Three Bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address, Craddock & Co., 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, Dr. W. C. Stevens, 126 Power's Block, RochesteN. Y.

SOUTHWESTERN
Christian Advocate,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.,

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.
1877.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The Southwestern is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There, is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2 The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms,

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the Southwestern one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year.

Send for a specimen copy. Address,

UNKIND WORDS IN THE MORNING.

If I had known in the morning
How wearily all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble my mind,
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex "our own"
With look and tone,
We may never take back again!

For though in the quiet evening
You may give me the kiss of peace,
Yet it might be
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go forth in the morning
That never come back at night!
And hearts have broken
For harsh words spoken
That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for "our own"
The bitter tone,
Though we love "our own" the best.
Ah! lips with curves impatient!
Ah! brow with that look of scorn!
'Twere a cruel fate
Were the night too late
To undo the work of the morning.

How to be a Gentleman.

We want a few private words with the boys. The truth is we have a great idea of boys. We used to think men were made of boys. We begin to think now that those were old fashioned notions, but they are all out of date. We look around and see a great many persons grown up, with men's [illegible] on, who are all called men. [illegible] they act and behave so that we feel certain that they were never made of boys. If they had been, they would know how to behave [illegible]. Where they came from we [illegible] know. But what we wish to [illegible] the ears of the boys is [illegible] gentleman. In this country every boy may grow up to be a gentleman if he will. It is not [illegible] that he should become [illegible] most boys think it is [illegible] that he should [illegible] scholar, nor that he [illegible] a distinguished man. [illegible] impatient ones are asking [illegible] we become gentlemen? How can a boy go about [illegible] himself one? Can he work [illegible] Yes, he can. And [illegible] in the right [illegible] study for it. Yes, he [illegible] study with his eyes [illegible] reading books and [illegible] enough. He [illegible] well as speak [illegible] No, he [illegible] a great [illegible] will not buy [illegible] a shop [illegible] hat, coat, [illegible] a fop, and [illegible] come [illegible] how many dogs [illegible] think it will take [illegible] gentleman? Let no [illegible] he is [illegible] the clothes [illegible] riding the [illegible] that trots [illegible] he lives in, or [illegible] Not one or [illegible] do it—and yet [illegible] gentleman. He [illegible] cheap clothes, [illegible] poor house, [illegible] money, and [illegible] How? [illegible] honorable [illegible] and [illegible] civil and [illegible] himself. By doing [illegible] how? [illegible] fearing God [illegible]

[illegible] riding [illegible] read [illegible]

House and Farm.

Science of Washing.

There is a proper way of doing everything that is to be done, and the London Agricultural Gazette has the following suggestions in regard to the washing of cups, and pots and brazen vessels:

Such pans and goblets as are in every day use, after being thoroughly washed, may be simply dried out with a linen dish-cloth; but soup pans and fish kettles that may be put away for a week or so at a time, should be dried at the fire before being hung up, which will prevent iron pans from getting mouldy or musty, and tin pans from rusting, however long they may be out of use. And it is not only the pot or pan that must receive attention, for if that be ever so clean, and the lid left unwiped, then the savor of whatever may have gathered on it during the last process of cooking, set free by the steam of the next operation, inevitably falls down on the new material, and a most incongruous compound may be the result. This is also the case with dish covers, which are too often hung up with all the steam of the last joint, fish, or pudding on them, at the risk of its dropping down on the next article covered, and the certainty of the meal inside becoming in time black and stained. Brass pans should be cleaned inside with vinegar and brick, then rinsed, thoroughly dried at the fire, and finished off by wiping out with a clean cloth. White enameled pans only want a little soda and warm water to keep them pure and sweet, and free from the grease which would be so disadvantageous to the finer kinds of made dishes that these pans are principally used for. Soda is the most useful for rinsing out a mixing dish before making a cake or light pudding, as the grease from an ill kept dish-cloth is quite sufficient to account for what, to many, is so mysterious, namely, that the sponge cake or pudding, which should have been light as snow, turns out heavy and tough.

Earthenware moulds—the best and easiest dept of all kinds, whether for boiling, baking, or simply shaping—should also be rinsed out with a little soda in the water, which in its turn should be well rinsed off, as in its way it is just as objectionable in taste and smell as anything that can be named.

For dinner dishes soap is better than soda, as it gives them a clean, glossy look, and thoroughly cleanses them at the same time. A brush for handles of tureens, etc., should be provided, and plates should [illegible] half [illegible] from the hot water, but spread out or ranged in the plate rack to cool and dry, before being put away.

Wives, Daughters and Chickens.

The poultry yard is the department of the farm pets. The chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks, and the multiplied forms of feathered animals, are all of the order of life that seems to require a different course of management and care. They are all of a nature that seems to demand and expect closer attention than the other members of the great family of living creatures, and what is more fitting than that the gentlest of the human family should become their guardians? There is no arduous work required in their care. After the houses and coops are prepared, and the time required will not be so great that the average woman on the farm can not find intervals in her daily work, when she will not only be able to give the poultry yard a few minutes, and in doing so, vary the monotony of her duties.

The breeding and raising of poultry is a profitable occupation, and on most farms the wife, or wife and daughters, could prepare each season a liberal quantity of their feathered friends for the market. It is [illegible], also, and would put color into many a pale cheek as well as money into the purses of the owner. Try it, mothers and sisters; select a good breed, and let your poultry yard be a boast; make it a feature on the farm, and when your friends call, show them your poultry family, and what woman can do.—Factory and Farm.

The Sunday-school cannot take the place of family instruction. Nothing can supply the neglect of a mother's teaching at home; no example is so forcible as a [illegible]'s consistent life.

DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 18, 1874.

Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

JNO. P. BENTLY,
Chief of Public Debt Division, 1st Auditor's office, Treasury Dep't Washington, D. C.

National Hotel, Washington, Dec. 2, '74.
Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

GENTS.—I very cheerfully state that I have used Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, prepared by you, with decided benefit, and although yet somewhat troubled with rheumatism, I am in much better condition than I was some months ago, which improvement I alone attribute to this remedy.

Yours, truly, ALEX. H. STEPHENS,

OUT OF WORK.

Out of work! out of work!
Where shall I go?
Wandering the city through,
Seeking some work to do,
Backward and fro!
Knowing not where to gain
Work for my hand or mind,
Wearied and pained in brain,
Where shall I labor and?
Is there no friend of kind
Who will to hearken?
To bring Death from my door?
Generously blessed here and scant,
Where plenty and want,
I know not that I know—
Where, where can I go?

Out of work! out of work!
Looking with care;
Gloomy as heavy cloud,
Cold as a shroud,
Hopeless!
Day by day through,
Seeking to do,

White Work of the M. E. Church in Texas.

The Germans of the M. E. Church of Texas succeed because they go at their work in a good, business common-sense way. The Presiding Elders cut off all retreats, identify themselves with the people, and intend, God permitting, to labor, for, live and die with the people among whom they are laboring. They are men wise in counsel and untiring in labors. They did not come to Texas to find success; it has been a life-long experience with them.

The ministers are forever one with the people among whom they labor. They are men of first-class talents and piety, and would succeed in any part of the Union. They are not afraid of hard work and small support. Men willing to clear the ground and dig the roots out before they plant the seed, and then stay long enough after that to gather the first fruits of the coming harvest.

Our White English work needs founding at all the great centers where the thousands of white immigrants are settling, but it needs a little money and just the right kind of men to do it. We need men with first-class talents, culture and piety.

Among the Texas immigrants are graduates of different colleges, and families who have been under the preaching of Storrs, Chapin, Beecher, Hatfield, Newman, etc., drilled by old veterans, and do not propose to be led by new recruits. We want preachers who will come and care for and stay with the people who are now settling this State. The people will not bind themselves to transient churches. Our work might be blasted and money squandered by men who would come "to try it awhile," mere spiritual adventurers, who would come to seek success. We would suggest that the Bishops require every transfer to take the oath of allegiance and continuance to the M. E. Church work in Texas. We do not expect to rear an oak in a day, and we want men like our German brethren who will to do hard work, go where there is nothing and build churches and parsonages, and wait for the work to grow with the growth of the population. We do not want ministerial invalids, who only want the Church to support them out of Missionary funds in a warmer climate for a time, and who generally, at the time they are most needed, go back to where they came from, leaving the people to think how much they had been deceived, and the Church to spend thousands of dollars to regain confidence in its permanency, and work back to a starting point, and perhaps for the same thing to be repeated. We do not want men who only wish to travel over the State, preach in churches of other denominations, and not establish our Church at any particular point. We have no objection to our preachers preaching for other denominations if they support them, but we do object to have the time, strength and money that is intended to build up the M. E. Church used in any such way, and then have failure written over our doors.

The above will answer many letters of inquiry.

F. CARSON MOORE.

Austin, Texas.

The Light Shineth.

All things crave the light, and turn to it, save only the natural heart of man. The plant turns its leaves to the light and grows toward it. The babe's first conscious independent effort is to turn its eyes to the light, whether it be that of a tiny taper, or God's glorious sunlight streaming in through the casement. All things animate grow strong in the light, and whatsoever one, see at all sees the clearer for the light. Ever since God issued the supreme command, "Let there be light," ever since the elements hastened joyously to obey the creative fiat and "there was light," creation has rejoiced in the light, has grown, been strengthened, and blessed by it.

Man, blinded by sin, or error or unbelief fails to come to the light, turns away from it, refuses to be blest by it. Though God gives a light to lighten the natural world, just as He has given light in the firmament to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night, and though He has designated to govern moral and spiritual growth as these others were ordained for physical growth and development, man closes his eyes against the light that has been given him, and light to our world, he turns his face from Him who is the light, turns a lamp upon his path, but puts the light behind him, and goes stumbling along in the darkness, and then charges God with the darkness in which he gropes, and the consequences of his own folly and sin. Man, who

Behind Time.

A man that is behind time is always in a hurry. It is now nine months since the General Conference closed its last session. During the session a resolution was offered to the effect that the white brethren in the several annual conferences be allowed to organize themselves into a separate body whenever a majority of them thought it requisite, but, Rev. C. H. Fowler, D. D., the coming man in the Methodist Episcopal Church, amended it so that the colored brethren might have a voice in determining the matter. We now come running with hat in hand to express our gratitude to the Doctor for his wise plan, and we trust he will not refuse it, though we arrive nine months behind time. I hope no one will think I am trying to agitate the color-line as I have long since surrendered the issue. I see from the President's inaugural that he intends striking it a severe blow, and I hope he may succeed in the attempt, to blot it out. Our District was assessed one hundred and ten dollars for the Bishop's claim, to be paid by the first of January last. In this we are somewhat behind time. We have only been able to raise seventy-five dollars of the amount reported as follows:

Nashville Circuit, Rev. M. C. Young	$5 00
Stone River Ct., Rev. H. Robertson	5 00
Lebanon, J. Pickett	5 00
Lewisburg Ct., R. Turner	5 00
Murfreesboro	5 00
Murfreesboro Ct., Thomas Ward	5 00
Mill Creek Ct., P. Martin	5 00
Gallatin, R. Provine	5 00
Alexandria Ct., Wm. Leswood	5 00
McMinnville, A. Martin	5 00
McMinnville Ct., B. Anderson	5 00
Woodbury Ct., W. Lillard	5 00
Shelbyville Ct., S. J. Harris	5 00
Mitchellville Ct., L. Chatman	5 00
North Lebanon Ct., H. Bowers	5 00
Total	$75 00

I will say that the amount could have been carried up to eighty dollars if I had taken five dollars worth of raccoon hides, which were offered in lien of the greenbacks, while I was out upon Raccoon Ridge. The Stewards having no license to trade in furs we were compelled to decline the offer and defer the matter for further consideration. We regret not being able to raise the entire sum by the time specified, but we propose to secure the remainder in a short while, even if we have to take the hides as part pay. The District undertakes to raise, for all purposes, this conference year, the sum of eighteen thousand dollars. Rev. C. S. Smith, of Clark Chapel, says his congregation will foot up two thousand, having already collected one-half of that amount.

The preachers are all living on their work, with but four exceptions, so it turns out that somebody is about five months behind time. The District embraces a large territory, bordering upon some twenty-five counties. While passing over it one sees and hears a great many odd things. For instance, I remember going down Walker's Creek to the month of Hannah's branch, where I stopped and made some inquiry about the country. I found that the hills, valleys, rivers, creeks, and branches around had been given queer names. Our churches often receive their names from the locality where they are built, hence we have three Hickory Groves, two Beach and one Whith Oak; one Poplar Ridge, one Friendship Hill; there are two Cane Forks and one Cumberland River; one Snow Creek; one Bowldings Branch, one Horse-Shoe Bend, and one Burnt Hill. We have one partnership church where you are served one Sunday with fire, the next with water, and then the next you hear of predestination, and the next you hear that the general resurrection is passed already. If the last doctrine be true we, as Methodists, are behind time, for we had hoped to have part in the first resurrection.

The District Conference has adopted the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE as the official organ of the District. We have set our figures down for five hundred subscribers, and we do not intend to stop until the number is sent up. We are, I fear, behind time in the list of subscribers thus far but we are moving forward.

I now leave for the northern part of the District which borders upon the Kentucky line. This will bring me near Monkey River, and as I am behind time I must hurry to the train.

C. PICKETT,

Fox Camp, Tenn., March 27, 1877.

"Are you a Christian?" said Mr. Moody to a gentleman whose appearance was much too cheerful for the inquiry-room if he were a penitent. "O, yes, sir;" the man partly answered. "Do you believe in the Bible?" "O, no! no! I don't believe any such stuff as that." "Do you believe Webster's Dictionary?" "O Yes." "The Unabridged?" O, yes, I believe that." "Well, my friend," said the devoted but quick-witted evangelist, "Webster says an infidel is one that does not believe in the Bible. You had better read it more faithfully and call yourself by your right name."

If you want enemies, excel others; if you want friends, let others excel you.

To the Pastors.

Dear Brother: The Executive Committee of the Missionary Board send greeting, and wish you to join in the advanced movement. Conference is just now upon you. By a strong, prayerful, believing effort your charge may yet be lifted into the honorable company of those who have heard the cry of the unsaved, and have advanced their missionary contributions over last year. So far there is evidence of renewed activity in the Church. Many charges heard from have advanced, some grandly. We have reports from some where all reasons combined to reduce their last year's contributions, but, under the guidance of the Spirit, they have not only held their own, but have advanced from twenty to seventy-five per cent., over their last year's contributions and over their appointments. This spirit is of God, and gives us great hops for his cause.

The cause is in a critical time. It must advance or greatly embarrass the Church in her work. It is the very cause of Christianity itself. It is the strong helping the weak. It is the saved rescuing the lost. It is the spirit of Him who came to seek and to save that which was lost. It has both the spirit and the authority of God. He commands and we must "go." The dying cry for help, and we must hear and answer. If our resources are lessened, we must add superior courage. A Spartan complained that his sword was too short, when his mother said," My son, then advance one step." Our mother, the Church, asks us with our shortened ability to advance one step.

You can, with great certainty, advance your contributions by the use of the means. Put the cause upon the thought and heart of your people. Give them opportunity to pray for the success of the missionary collection. Pray yourself at home for guidance and help. Select careful helpers, and by personal effort thoroughly canvass the congregation. With these put the work on the heart of your official men. Visit from house to house on this subject. Then go to the congregation and Church for a generous advance, and you will not be disappointed. You are leader. All depends upon you. May God bless you!

What a Fly Did.

Near by a church lived a very wicked man, a rumseller, by the way, who seemed not to fear God or regard man. He despised all good things, and loved to do wrong rather than right. It happened that the church near him was remodeled, an organ was put in, and there was to be some good playing on it, and excellent music by the choir on the "re-opening" of the church. This man wanted to hear the music, but he did not want to hear the sermon. He was puzzled for the time, but finally hit upon this plan: he would go into the church, take a seat in an obscure corner and listen to the music, but stop his ears with his fingers when there was any praying, preaching or talking. So he went in and enjoyed the singing and sound of the organ, but when the minister prayed, he stopped his ears as tightly as possible. When prayer was over, and singing commenced, he took his fingers from his ears, but stopped them again as soon as the minister began reading a chapter in the Bible. While he sat thus, self made deaf, a fly lit on his nose and began to run round, and occasionally it stopped and thrust down its bill as if to take a bite from the skin. The man bore it as long as he could, and then involuntarily brushed the fly off with his hand, leaving one ear unstopped while he did so. Just at that instant the minister read the verse. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." The word struck him with peculiar force; he thought a moment, unstopped his other ear, and listened to the rest of the chapter and to the sermon following. He went from the church with a changed purpose, became a good man, and lived many years, trying all the time to do all the good he could to others, and to repair the mischief done by his former conduct. The improvement in the church, the organ, the attractive exercises, were all instrumental in drawing this man in where a good seed might be dropped into the soil of his mind, but that little fly was necessary to unstop his ears.—Selected.

Youth is of no long duration, and in maturer age, when the enchantments of fancy shall cease, and the phantoms of delight dance no more about us, we shall have no comforts but the esteem of wise men, and the means of doing good. Let us, therefore stop, whilst to stop is in our power. Let us live as men who are sometime to grow old, and to whom it will be the most dreadful of all evils to count their past years by follies, and to be reminded of their former luxuriance of health only by the maladies which riot has produced.

LITHOGRAPHIC PLAN, NO. 2.

[Plans, detailed drawings, specifications and form of contract, all complete, ready for the builder, sent by mail on receipt of $5. Address all communications to Rev. A. J. Kynett, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, Church Extension Rooms, No. 1020 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

A general description of this church is given in the Annual of 1875, page 63. The dimensions are 30½x48½ feet, with a recess for the pulpit, 6x13 feet, and a porch on front 3½x12 feet, all outside measurements. The vestibule, including porch, is 7x11. The auditorium will seat comfortably 250 persons. The ceiling is to be finished in oiled wood, and the whole built in the most substantial manner. The height of the building to the apex of the roof is a trifle over 32 feet, and to the top of the belfry 52 feet. The whole would cost, in Philadelphia, about $3,500, but the cost could be reduced materially by reducing the size of some of the framing timbers, and covering with shingles instead of slate. Of course, in other parts of the country, where lumber and labor are cheaper, the cost would be still less.

Tears.

The following suggestive and beautiful remarks we clip from the Northern:

Spurgeon calls tears the diamonds of Heaven. They have a strange and yet blessed mission. We know not all the purposes of God in the ordeal of sorrow to which we are liable. We learn some things of nature. Sunshine and calm are not the continued conditions of growth and beauty. Cloud and storm are a part of the plan. This life is a discipline. Tears have much to do with moral and spiritual growth and beauty. We now only look on the dark side of sorrow. It has a bright side. Joy is not all measured by smiles. Gayety is not true pleasure. If there were no minor tones in music, it would fail of its highest office. The heart is a wonderful realm. It does not lie like a garden in the sunlight. It has profound depths like the dark caverns of earth. There are deep springs there. The murmur of those fountains is all the more musical for the solitude and the darkness. Tears even have a mission of gladness. They are the language of affection.

The weepers of earth are beautiful messengers of blessed and holy things. Tears withdraw us from the realm of the sensual and vain to the emotions of the pure and the heavenly. The prophets were weepers. Jesus wept. O, the wealth of his tears. He wept to make us glad. He went forth weeping that He might return bringing His sheaves with Him. What trophies those tears will bring. What everlasting songs shall come of His grief.

Tears of childhood, how beautiful. What would a tearless childhood be here! Tears of innocence! How we grasp little grief-torn hearts to our own! The tears of a mother, how remembered in after days. How many have been shed over us when we have never seen them flow. Manly tears. We have seen strong men weep;—weep for sin, weep with regret. Let them flow; Heaven loves them; they water the moral desert of this waste world.

The weeping time will end. Out of this land of tears the mourners will go. But the victory will remain. The joy of the morning will abide. Tears have no atoning merit, yet they are blessed. Treasured in memory they shall live. Because of them our love has been deeper, our cup of joy has been sweeter. Joyful tears! In Heaven, no doubt, their memory will shine more beautiful than all earthly bliss. Be ours only tears of pity, of penitence, of love, not of remorse and despair.

The President's Daughter.

Miss Fannie Hayes, the daughter of President Hayes, who will occupy such a prominent place in Washington society for the next four years, is said to be a very pretty brunette, of medium height, and a very fine figure, and about nineteen years of age. She is very bright and intelligent, a good conversationalist, and will make a decided sensation in society.

Gratitude is a very beautiful thing, but it differs from a Mississippi River steamboat in that it isn't usually run on the high pressure principle.

"Wild Oats."

"In all the wide range of accepted British maxims there is none," says Thos. Hughes, "more thoroughly abominable than this one, 'A young fellow must sow his 'Wild Oats.' Look at it on what side you will, and you can make nothing but a devil's maxim of it. What a man—be he young, old or middle-aged—sows, that, and nothing else shall he reap. The one only thing to do with Wild Oats is to put them carefully into the hottest part of the fire, and get them burnt to dust every seed of them. If you sow them, no matter in what ground, up they will come, with long tough roots like couch-grass, and luxuriant stalks and leaves, as sure as there is a sun in Heaven—a crop which it turns one's heart sick to think of. The devil, too, whose special crop they are, will see that they thrive, and you, and nobody else, will have to reap them, and no common reaping will get them out of the soil, which must be dug down deep again and again. Well for you, if with all your care, you can make the ground sweet again by your dying day. 'Boys will be boys' is not much better, but that has a true side to it; but this encouragement to the sowing of Wild Oats is simply devilish, for it means that the young man is to give way to the temptations and follow the lusts of his age. What are we to do with the Wild Oats of manhood and old age, with ambition, over-reaching the false weights, hardness, suspicion, avarice, if the Wild Oats of youth are to be sown and not burnt? What possible distinction can we draw between them? If ye may sow one why not the other?"

Barnum Humbugged by a Texan.

Mr. S. W. Summers, of Sulphur Springs, caught a full grown mule-ear rabbit, and, for his amusement, wrote to Barnum of its capture, giving a glowing description of its fleetness, the difficulty of its capture, its habits, general appearance, etc., without giving the name of the beast. The great showman promptly replied, requesting Mr. Summers to forward his prize by express, and he would send a check in return for $25. The rabbit was forwarded, and true to his promise, the great showman sent the amount, and his agent wrote to Mr. Summers, offering him a free ticket to Barnum's show saying:

"I am anxious to see you, for you are the only man living who ever humbugged Barnum. The rabbit is worth, here, and can be purchased in the markets for seventy-five cents each."

A child will infer from the spirit which pervades a household whether the kingdom of Heaven is a fact or fiction. If it concludes it to be a fiction, how must the soul suffer. If it feels and knows it to be a glorious and joyous truth that Heaven is near and above us how will the spirit be drawn upward and onward.

What a new world we should live in, if we would only allow every kind thought that comes to us to blossom into words and deeds.

Symmetry of Christian character should be aimed at and cultivated.

The Philadelphia evening Express says: "The experiment of steam cars in our streets, introduced by Mr. John S. Morton, of the Market Street Passenger Railway Co., promises to be successful. The cars run smoothly, make but little noise, do not, as was feared by some, frighten horses along the line of the route, and are readily stopped and quite as speedily as horse cars. They have already become popular and are much patronized."

A Basel edition of the Bible of 1540, in good condition, and which belonged to Martin Luther, was recently bought at a sale of the effects of Dr. Lutze, in Kothen, a famous book collector.—On the title page in Luther's own handwriting, is the following: "Martin Luther, D. 1542." The Old Testament, in many places, and the New Testament, in several hundred, are interlined and foot-noted with observations by the great reformer. This precious edition of the Bible was purchased by the Markisch Museum, of Berlin, for 9,000 marks.

The colored men of St. Louis have petitioned the board of public schools to place none but colored teachers in colored schools, complaining that employment is given white teachers over blacks possessing equal qualifications, and insisting that such a preference is an unjust discrimination, which has a tendency to check development. The petitioners claim that the prejudices of a large proportion of white citizens of St. Louis are so great that, as a rule, the white teachers who are best qualified will not engage to teach a colored school, on account of the social stigma attached to such a position.

Church Extension Annual.

The Church Extension Annual for 1876 is at hand and will be received by all our ministers. It contains one hundred one thirty-five pages, and is in every respect a credit to the great Society it represents. Our ministers should read every word it contains, and restate its valuable facts to their people. Would that the whole Church could for once be brought to understand just what this Society is doing, and to know how many urgent appeals for help cannot be responded to for lack of means! Dr. Kynett does his duty in collecting the necessary facts in these annuals with which to stir the Church. The responsibility now rests with the ministry.

First of all we have a map of the United States, dotted with crosses showing in each State and Territory, how many churches have been helped by donations [illegible] ly two hundred and fifty Churches have been [illegible] don[illegible] half [illegible] the [illegible] States.

Dr. McCabe shows what the Church would do for our benevolent causes, if only one penny a day could be given. If 2,000,000 communicants would give a penny a day each, in one year they would give $7,300,000, and this would more than double the contributions to our benevolent societies, and leave a large surplus in the treasury each year.

Dr. Matlack gives in good style the Missionary Angel speech of Rev. Scott Chinn, made in this city some years since. It serves the double purpose of illustrating that native eloquence is not uncommon among our colored ministry, and of exhibiting to the Church the earnest missionary zeal that pervades the people to whom they minister.

Bishop Peck's late articles on "Texas for Homes" are published. Dr. Brush, of Austin, Texas, gives an article on Church Extension in that State. These two articles on Texas should be read from every Methodist pulpit in the land.

Dr. Fuller gives a more general survey of the Southern field, and makes a strong plea for increased aid in church buildings to all our people of the South. He rightly says, "The Methodist Episcopal Church has a mission here, and among both races," also, that "the idea that fraternity should exclude us from the South is absurd." He also rightly claims that the presence of our own Methodism in the South leads to no necessary collision with the M. E. Church South. He says, "In the whole State of Georgia I know of but two instances where the two denominations have houses of worship near enough to each other to interfere with public service."

From the pens of Revs. Thomas Harwood and John Steele we have an account of Church Extension work in New Mexico. We have four churches in that Territory, at these places, Peralta, La Junta, Elizabethtown and Ciruelita. These are valued at $30,000. An earnest plea is made for help at six more places. The Mexican people, when converted, make earnest Christians. Bro. Steele did much of the carpenter work on his church at Peralta himself, and his wife did the painting. The building is an excellent one, standing on the plaza, and gives room for both Sabbath worship and day school. The congregation numbers 100 Mexicans, sixty of whom attend the Sunday-school.

The subjects of "Church Debt," "Church Extension in other Churches," "Ventilation," and Church Architecture," are all discussed at length and well.

In 1875, out of 9,222 pastoral charges 3,220 took no Church Extension collections, and 4,965 reported collections less than $10. In 1876 the showing is still worse, the number of places taking no collection being increased by seventy, and the number taking less than $10 is increased by 260. The [illegible] lies in culpable neglect among the [illegible] in not presenting the [illegible] to the people. If one minister would simply carry out the [illegible] Discipline the re[illegible] 1876, and ap[illegible] the Western [illegible] during the [illegible] Extension. [illegible] to raise [illegible] raised [illegible] the Conference can receive $2,000. Mississippi is asked to raise $500, and if this is raised can receive $1500 during the year. Texas is asked to raise $200, and may receive $2000. West Texas is to raise $200, and may receive $1,500. The Southern German is asked to raise $300 and may receive $2000, Tennessee is to raise $800, and may receive $1500.

Dr. Kynett reports that during the eleven years the Board of Church Extension had been at work, $1,052,9[illegible] 54 have been received and disbursed. In all 1,897 churches have been assisted in the various States and Territories.

Shreveport to New Orleans.

Shreveport is the second city of Louisiana, and is located in the extreme north-west corner of the State. It has about 15,000 inhabitants, and is the present eastern terminus of the Texas and Pacific Railroad, which is the eastern section of the Southern Pacific. To reach New Orleans from Shreveport you can go an all rail route, by way of Marshall, Texarkana and Memphis and then down the Jackson (Miss.) route; or you can go by Marshall, Longview, then to Houston and Galveston, Texas, and across the gulf by a Morgan's steamer to Morgan City, Louisiana, and home. The third route is by boat down Red River, five hundred miles to the Mississippi, and then two hundred more to New Orleans. This route is as short as any and the cheapest, and if the boat does not have to make too many landings on the way, and does not get stuck on a sand-bar (an occurrence which is frequent during three months of the year) is as quick a route as any. There is still another route; ninety miles by stage to Monroe, then by rail to Vicksburg and down the Mississippi. If any one is not satisfied with any of these routes he can follow the Irishman's advice and "trudge it on foot." Lines of travel through a country are like lines of thought, from premise to conclusion in logic. When it takes so long to tell how to go from one city to another, it is quite evident that communication is not direct; and so the longer it takes the logician to lead you from premise to conclusion, the more evident it is that he himself has not mastered the way.

There ought to be a railroad from Shreveport to New Orleans direct, and the distance would be lessened from seven hundred to three hundred and fifty miles. The New Orleans & Pacific Railroad Company, presided over by Mr. Whelock, proposes to build this road. Several hundred men are at work grading between Alexandria, the midway point, and Shreveport. We say success to the enterprise for several reasons. It is a New Orleans enterprise, begun and controlled by men of this Metropolis, and in would be such a blessed thing to have New Orleans plan and actually carry out some great public work. Her reputation now for splendid parades and fancy dress balls during carnival week is unequaled, but now that millions of dollars worth of trade are being carried away from her door every year, to enrich neighboring and rival cities, simply because those cities build railroads, it would be a real comfort to see the $100,000 spent annually in street pageants and midnight revels put into a railroad, by which New Orleans would get her share of the vast trade of Texas—either by way of Shreveport or Houston. Our faith, however, is not very strong. We remember how bravely this city fought the Jetties; even her Cotton Exchange denounced the thing as a swindle. But the decree of Congress, dictated and executed by Capt. Eads, a St. Louis carpet-bagger, has done the thing, and now the great highway to the sea is a fixed fact. It is not always that such foreign genius and such irresistible power as the American Congress, can be commanded to put through great works for the benefit of New Orleans, in spite of the whims and selfishness of the few who, in things great and small, seem to controll this great city. And the worst thing is, that it makes but little difference whether their better judgment or their whims or their selfishness or politics rules them; their control of the city seems as absolute, in the one case as the other. They have but to pipe and the masses follow. But we hope for the best, and trust that nothing will come up to defeat the New Orleans & Pacific Railroad.

We made the trip by river on the good steamer Texas. Capt. Rae and his fellow-officers spare no pains to make their boat attractive. They set a good table and their staterooms are comfortable. Three days and four nights were occupied on the trip. There was one delay of eight hours, caused by an accident.

We are glad the proposition to change the ratio of representation in the General Conference is being defeated by the Annual Conferences. The present ratio is one in forty-five and it is proposed to change it to one in ninety-nine—or rather to give the General Conference authority to change it to that number. So far as the South is concerned it would increase its influence in the General Conference because most of its Conferences are small, and the decrease in representation would fall almost entirely on the large Conferences. But the objections to the change are two fold. 1st. The tendency toward centralization in all great bodies, national and ecclesiastical, is developing itself quite rapidly enough in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Reduce the ministerial representation one-half, and then remember that General Conference officers and those who are especially influential in the two or three great centers of the Church are almost invariably members of the General Conference; and it is plain that the legislation of the Church would be in the hands of a very few men. 2d. The proposed change would make the representation of ministers and laymen about equal in the General Conference—a thing that the Church will hesitate a long time before doing.

The growth of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India has steadily increased each year since 1864. At that time there were 209 communicants, and in 1875 there were 1923, that is, about ten times as many. In 1859 there were two schools and forty-one scholars, and in 1875 there were 227 schools and 8,631 scholars. The people living in India have themselves contributed enough money to pay the salaries of all the Missionaries sent out by the Church from the beginning until now, and in addition to paying all this directly into the treasury for the Missionary Society; over $50,000 have been raised for church purposes at home. This does not include what was raised for Bible and Tract Society work in India. We now have two Conferences in India, in which are 1,174 probationers, 2460 members, 169 Sunday-schools, 541 officers and teachers and 8,190 scholars. Surely these facts, with equally encouraging ones which could be stated concerning the work of other Churches, indicate that Christ is to reign in India.

We have two churches in Shreveport. Rev. S. E. H. Morant is the pastor of St. Paul's, and Rev. T. O. Abbott is pastor of St. James.

In St. Paul a revival of remarkable power is now in progress. Presiding Elder Davage has charge of the meeting. In a week's time fifty-nine have joined the Church. Bro. Morant is well received among his people. Bro. Davage has entered upon his District work with many indications of God's blessing. At every point revivals attend the quarterly services. We are promised a full statement concerning his District work at each point.

Bro. Abbott and the brethren at St. James have been greatly pressed in building their new church. The building is 35x65 feet and well located. Nearly $300 have been raised on the debts, and about $600 will soon be due. Our Shreveport churches are in good hands, and, with the Master's blessing, will increase.

The General Assembly of the Reformed Dutch Church of South Africa met at Villersdorp last December for its regular quadrennial meeting. The Assembly was in session nearly five weeks. Many of the members have to travel from 500 to 700 miles to attend the Assembly, which would meet oftener if the means of getting to the place of meeting were more convenient. The Assembly elected the moderator, the Rev. Andrew Murray, as delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance. It resolved to erect a normal training school, which is regarded as a very important movement for the Church, which is in great need for properly trained teachers. The Assembly also resolved "that the mission work of our Church be extended to the people of Israel." A converted Jew is convener of the committee which is charged with reporting a plan for this proposed mission.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. B. Bradford, Friendship, Tenn., sends a list of subscribers and adds: "I like the SOUTHWESTERN better than any other paper I have ever taken. My family are delighted with it, and are waiting and watching for it when it comes each week. I am now hard at work for it among old and young, and intend that it shall find its way into the homes of many of our people."

F. T. Dantzler, Ex-Prairie Circuit, Mississippi, says: "Since our pastor, Rev. J. W. Johnson, has been on this circuit he has reorganized our Sunday-school, and it is doing well. We now have ninety scholars enrolled, and an average attendance of over fifty. We have no library as yet, but we are at work collecting money into our treasury and expect to be able to supply ourselves with good books very soon. We all like our pastor very much."

Rev. Dr. H. R. Revels, writes from Vicksburg, Miss.: "I am encouraged to believe that, by the blessing of God, we shall soon succeed in an effort to complete a beautiful and substantial brick church in this, the largest city of the State. It has been a general regret that the M. E. Church in this place has not been able to accommodate her members and friends with a desirable and suitable place of worship. The appointment of Rev. John Gaston to this charge was a fortunate one. He is certainly the man for the place. Love and confidence are mutual between himself and his people. Already God has signally blessed his labors here in a revival which is still in progress. Souls have been converted, and the number of seekers for salvation still at the altar of prayer justifies the belief that the present number of converts will be much increased before the meeting closes. Our members and friends number largely now, but I think, from present prospects, that the day is not far distant when they will be much more numerous."

Rev. John Wright, Seguin, Texas, says: "We have been having a great struggle in these hard times to secure a house of worship of our own. We have now bought and paid for a suitable lot, and have some liberal subscriptions toward the building. Our church is to be thirty-five by forty-five feet in dimensions. May the Lord direct us in our efforts."

Rev. L. B. Brown, Koscinsko, Miss., says: "In both spiritual and temporal matters my work is in a very encouraging condition. On last Sabbath I baptized seven children and one adult. Part of the lumber for our new church is on the ground, and the money for the remainder is in the bank, ready to be paid on delivery. I often visit and pray with four unfortunate persons in jail here who are to be hung on the fourth of May. Our Sunday-school numbers one hundred and ten, and the attendance is quite regular."

Under date of April 2, Rev. J. F. Cozier and wife send us the following sad notes. They have our sincerest sympathy:

On Friday, March 30th, death entered our home at the parsonage of our Church and touched our youngest child, Alexander F. Cozier; born April 21, 1876, died March 30, 1876, aged eleven months and ten days. We are sincerely grateful to the Daughters of Conference for their manifestation of love and sympathy for myself and family during the time of his sickness and also after his death. They not only spoke, but they acted. They cared for and watched over him while life lasted, and, after death, placed him away in a new tomb, on Saturday evening at 3 o'clock. Myself and wife beg that you will present our sincere thanks to the daughters of Conference belonging to First Methodist Episcopal Church, Houston, Texas, through the columns of the SOUTHWESTERN.

Yours, in sorrow,
J. F. COZIER,
MRS. A. B COZIER.

The Talmud has a suggestive saying on the effect upon Adam's mind of the curse, pronounced after his trangression. When God said to him, "Thorns, also thistles, shall it (the earth) bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field," Adam wept and as the tears flowed from his eyes, said, "O Lord, shall I and the ass eat from the same trough?" But when God added, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," Adam was more reconciled to his fate, Labor would maintain and develop his manhood.

Courtesy well becomes the followers of Him who pleased not Himself.

The Fruits of Mormanism.

The lengthy and circumstantial confession of John D. Lee, one of the leaders in the Mountain Meadows, Utah, Massacre in 1857, leaves no doubt as to the responsibility and commission of that horrible crime. The terrible story related with so much gusto by this Mormon bishop and missionary, just previous to his execution, only confirms what has been known with more or less accuracy by United States officials for nearly a score of years. That the murder of these one hundred and thirty American citizens has remained so long unavenged is a disgraceful fact in the history of this nation. For it was not until the Mormons had cast off Lee and determined that he should be made a scapegoat for their leaders that he was brought to trial and punished.

The crime was deliberately planned by Mormons at Salt Lake City and remorselessly executed by Mormons at Mountain Meadows. Brigham Young, according to the confession of Lee, and his testimony is fully corroborated by Klingen Smith and by the constitution of the Mormon hierarchy—approved, if he did not directly order the murder of the emigrants; and after the deed was done visited the spot and openly told his followers that the slain people had been justly put to death. At Cedar City he said that the emigrants were relatives of the men "who killed the saints in Jack-[illegible] Co., Mo., and assassinated the prophet (Smith) in Carthage jail," and deserved their fate.

At this same place, in a sermon delivered shortly after the massacre, he said: "I have been told there are many brethren who are [illegible] those who did the thing. I hope there is no truth in the rumor. I hope no such per[illegible] lives. If there is, I tell you what your fate will be. Unless you repent at once, keep secret all you know and protect each other, you will die a dog's death. You will go to hell as damned, lost devils. Let me hear no more of this among my people. Any man who have proved traitor there should have met the destroying angel at once." It was by the [illegible] such threats and the frequent execution of them that the secret of the massacre was kept from the Mormons. Young's reference to the "destroying angels," whatever as they are also called, is significant. These were a band of secret assassins sworn to execute any order from the Church authorities without a question. The character is indicated by the history of Scripture from which they took their name—"Dan shall be a serpent in the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse's heels, so that his rider shall fall backward." For his services at the massacre he was made a Bishop; promoted a celestial crown; and until within four years Young has treated him "with the friendship of a father."

Mormonism had its legitimate outcome at Mountain Meadows. Its perpetrators had been for years under the teaching of bloodthirsty and [illegible] priests, until it became tolerable. [illegible] his enemies and [illegible] over their dead bodies," and [illegible] would [illegible] of blood from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic Ocean." One of his [illegible] declared that opposition must be destroyed, and that collision would bring a "war of extermination." And the leaders in this delusion have their hold upon their people by a system of bloody crime, impotent and [illegible] that would shame [illegible] Lee's confession [illegible] and will be, if [illegible] a death blow to the [illegible] of lust, fanaticism [illegible] which has [illegible] the death of Lee, [illegible] leaders, is [illegible] an atonement. [illegible] Young be tried next.

The Louisiana Commission.

[illegible] Commission is [illegible]: Gen. John [illegible], chairman; [illegible] of Pennsylvania; [illegible] J. O. [illegible] in New [illegible]. Their letters [illegible] President [illegible]

2. Which is the legal judiciary.

3. Do domestic violence and insurrection prevail within the meaning of section 4, article 4 of the constitution of the United States?

On the first of these points the instructions say: "The service desired of and entrusted to this commission does not include any examination into or report upon the facts of the recent State election, or of the canvass of the votes cast at that election." This inhibits the commission from all enquiry as to who are entitled to the office of governor and lieutenant governor by virtue of the late election and canvass of the votes by the general assembly, and also as to who were elected to the other disputed State offices. It is my desire that searching and satisfactory investigation should be made upon this important point. I believe the nation will judge of my claim according to whether it be a fact that I was elected. I am constrained to think that your excellency is in doubt upon this point, as repeated requests for the recognition of my government have not yet been responded to; and I confess that having received several hundred more votes than some of the Pesidential electors I did not anticipate that my title would thus be put in question.

It further seems to me that in considering the situation of affairs in this State it is of material importance to ascertain whether the Supreme Court appointed in obedience to the constitution, by my predecessor, Governor Kellogg, is the legal court. If it be so determined by the commission, the ascertainment of that fact will probably prove of assistance in the solution of the existing difficulties. If the opposing Nicholls court be found, as stated by General Grant, to be entitled to "no more recognition than any other equal number of lawyers convened on the call of any other citizen of the State," the nation will surely justify the commission in so declaring.

By investigation on these two points, your excellency will ascertain the lawful executive and judical branches of the State government. The legislative branch will adjust itself, when you determine who is the executive of the State.

The fact as to which goverment was elected being once established, the commission will probably find little difficulty in coming to a conclusion on the third point, whether or not there exists such domestic violence and insurrection against that government as contemplated by section 4 article 4 of the constitution of the United States, and sections 5297, 5298 and 5299 of the United States revised statutes.

The honorable Secretary of State differing from Chief Justice Taney and the United States Supreme Court, in the well-known case of "Luther vs. Borden," holds, if I correctly understand his letter of instructions, that neither the constitutional provision nor the acts of Congress were framed with the design of giving the President the power to decide between contesting claimants to a State government. In the case referred to Chief Justice Taney, as the organ of the court said:

"By this act the power of deciding whether the exigency had arisen upon which the government of the United States is bound to interfere, is given to the President. He is to act upon the application of the legislature or of the executive, and consequently he must determine what body of men constitute the legislature, or who is governor, before he can act. The fact that both parties claim the right to the government cannot alter the case, for both cannot be entitled to it. If there is an armed conflict, like the one of which we are speaking, it is a domestic violence, and one of the parties must be in insurrection against the lawful government. And the President must, of necessity, decide which is the government, and which party is unlawfully arrayed against it, before he can [illegible] the duty imposed upon him by the act of Congress."

May I not expect this decision, coupled with precedents from your predecessors, will be taken as a safe guide for your action?

The distinguished gentleman by whom the instructions to the commission were prepared, is understood to favor the line of policy toward this State which has been foreshadowed by the Hon. Stanley Matthews. The nature of that [illegible] is disclosed in a statement of [illegible] Phillips, the most [illegible] pardon—the next may be the one in which to receive sentence.

Thy servant went no whither. Lie upon lies. One lie is always the mother of a brood of lies. An evil act ever must be screened by a network of falsehoods. And how industriously at work does the danger of detection keep one in weaving them! Having uttered one lie there is no telling when the devil will allow one to stop. Went not mine heart with thee? To prove that this was no idle assertion, Elisha mentions the fact that Naaman turns back from his chariot to meet Gehazi. Then Gehazi for the first time realized that he had been attempting to deceive one whose eyes were anointed with divine power. He saw, all at once, that every step of his guilty journey had been open to the prophet's as he sat in his chamber.

In the center of Central Park, New York City there is a large camera obscura which throws upon a table a miniature reproduction of any part of the Park. Seated at this table one can see everything that is going on in any part of the grounds, and even can recognize the faces of any acquaintances. Here mothers have found their children when they were lost, and officers without stirring from the chair have been enabled to detect and capture thieves and pick-pockets. Criminals, when they supposed they were entirely screened from observation, have been surprised to learn by how simple an expedient every act of theirs was visible. Elijah's brain was the camera on which God reproduced the whole of that scene of duplicity and cunning. God shall bring to light all "the hidden things of darkness." What sinner will be able to stand that day of revelations? Is this a time, in his thought, to receive money, when to ask for it would be to lower the name of Jehovah in the eyes of Naaman, and, perhaps, close the mouth of one who might be a powerful witness in a heathen land for the God of Israel? The discovery of mercenary designs in carrying on a camp-meeting or any other religious enterprize will instantly kill a revival no matter how fervent it has become. If Naaman suspected that Gehazi's request was only a shrewd dodge of the prophet to obtain some of the money he had so ostentatiously refused, he went away despising him for his trickery, and ceasing to have any regard for his religion.

The leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee. This was poetic justice. Naaman had left both his disease and his money behind him. He who took the one should have the other. He came a leper but went away a disciple—he found Gehazi a disciple and left him a leper. The two had changed places. Naaman was cured by reason of his faith—Gehazi was punished for disobedience to the faith.

He went out from his presence a leper as white as snow. No more a servant of Elisha. All that is further known of him is found in chap. 8:4, 5. His sin had been secret but his punishment was public. Everywhere he went he carried with him, so that all might read it, the record of his crime. How often would he have exchanged that ill-gotten wealth and those changes of garments for the innocence and the purity he had lost! How often did he wish he were back in his old place, poor in this world's goods, but free from his repulsive disease, respected by men and beloved by Elisha! Ah, that all might take warning from the example of Gehazi! "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say: I have no pleasure in them.

LOST FRIENDS.

We make no charge for publishing these letters, STRICTLY CONDITIONED TO THE SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notice. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

I desire to know the whereabouts of my mother and sister. The name of my sister was Betty Jane Smith, and my mother was named Clara Smith and my name was Sarah Jane Smith and we belonged to Billy Smith and we lived near a large cave in Kentucky in Rockcastle county. She was sold from me when I was between six and seven years old, and my name now, is Mrs. Sarah Mason. Any one learning of her will please send me word in care of C. L. Madison, Austin, Texas.

SARAH MASON.

I desire information concerning my kindred. My mother was named Rebecca, two brothers named Daniel and Luke, and sister named Nelly. They lived in Alabama, then in Georgia for eleven years, then were taken to Louisiana by Dr. George Maddox, and they had that name, Maddox. I have heard that one of my brothers was afterward on Red River known as Luke Wilson. I will be thankful for any information concerning them, Address,

The Eggleston Truss, which will be found advertised in our columns this week, presents some features which are well worth the attention of all afflicted with Hernia. This truss is meeting with great success and its manufacturer reports large sales.

Humility is indispensable as one of the elements of true greatness.

Thousands of Affidavits.

Many having used "patent" and prepared medicines and failed in finding the relief promised, are thereby prejudiced against all medicines. Is this right? Would you condemn all physicians because one failed in giving the relief promised? Some go to California in search of gold, and after working hard for months and finding none return home and say there is no gold there. Does that prove it? Many suffering with Catarrh and pulmonary afflictions have used the worthless preparations that crowd the market, and in their disappointment say there is no cure for Catarrh. Does that prove it? Does it not rather prove that they have failed to employ the proper remedy? There are thousands of people in the United States who can make an affidavit that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery have effected their entire cure. Many had lost all sense of smell for months, and pieces of bone had repeatedly been removed from the nasal cavities.

A Ten Thousand Dollar Nose.

At a recent temperance meeting a reformed drunkard arose to make a few remarks. He possessed a remarkable nose—remarkable for being bulbous and of a brilliant crimson—and it attracted considerable attention as he stepped to the front and stated:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am not here to make a speech; no, I am not much of a speaker—in fact, I never made a speech in my life. I have, however, been a hard drinker, which you will probably infer from a casual glance at my nose; but" (here the audience began to titter, whereupon the speaker, feeling the organ in question tenderly resumed) —"but I assure you, ladies and gentlemen, although it may strike you as being very funny, it is no laughing matter. To bring my nose to this state of blooming perfection has cost me, at least calculation, ten thousand dollars."

Hereupon there was a perfect howl and the new recruit stepped down and gave place to the next speaker.

Mrs. Hayes undoubtedly deserves the thanks of every true woman for the stand which she has taken against extravagance in dress. She has carried to the White House the same quiet dignity and ladylike simplicity for which, according to all accounts, she was distinguished at home, and her dress on public occasions, while invariably handsome and becoming the wife of the President, has also been invariably unostentatious.

Never too Late to Mend.

Twenty-one years ago I was dying with consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, and get East India Hemp, which finely and fully cured me.

I now write to ask if you are still in business; or if I can obtain that same remedy. I am failing into poor health again, and for the first time since then feel the need of such a medicine. O. S. BISLEY.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. WHILE Dr. H. James was attached to the British Medical Staff in the East Indies, his high position enabled him to call about him the best chemists, physicians and scientists of the day, and while experimenting with and among the natives, he accidentally made the discovery that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently CURED. During the many years of his sojourn there he devoted his time to the treatment of Lung Diseases, and upon his retirement he left with us books and papers containing full particulars, showing that every one can be his own physician and prepare his own medicine, and such information as we have received we now offer to the public without price, only asking that each result a three cent stamp for return postage. SOUTHWESTERN

Christian Advocate,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT. 1877.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE published at New Orleans is an official Journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is a four paged paper containing twenty-eight columns of matter. It is printed on excellent paper with large, clear type.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a Southern paper, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The publishers appeal to the whole Church to help sustain this paper.

I. Our ministers and people in the North want information as to our Southern work. The South is the great home missionary field of the Church. There, is expended the largest proportion of the funds spent in America from the treasuries of the great benevolent societies of the Church. Such information will explain the reasons and results of these large outlays.

II. As our Southern work is largely a missionary work, scattered over a vast domain, comprising nearly a fourth in numbers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, surrounded by many hostile influences, two things are evident. 1. The necessity for this paper is absolute. It is simply impossible to marshal the newly organized, and in many respects untrained hosts of our Church in the South, without the centralizing and directing power of the press. 2. The difficulty of sustaining a paper in such a field is very great. Our people are poor. The heroic age of Methodism is being repeated among our Southern ministry. Outside help must be given liberally or the paper cannot be a success financially.

Our Terms.

$2 00 cash in advance pays for the SOUTHWESTERN one year, postage included.

All travelling ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are authorized agents, and to them the paper will be sent for $1 00 a year cash in advance.

Club Rates. To any person sending us four subscribers and $8 00 we will send the paper free for one year.

Send for specimen copy. Address,

A place for everything and everything in its place, is a most excellent motto, and, although busy people can hardly expect to keep everything in its place always, if there are many hands to disarrange things, yet 'tis the greatest comfort to know just where everything ought to be, and if one knows that, 'tis easy putting things in place, and finding them when needed.—Son of the Soil.

House and Farm.

Farming the Highest Calling of Man.

Brother farmer, have you ever, when you have returned from your days labor in the field, tired and sore from overwork, consoled and brightened your flagging spirits by the reflection that though tired and weary you have been engaged in the highest and most ennobling calling of man. I have: and the reflection has safely carried me through many a trying hour. And if you will bear with me for a few moments, I will, in a feeble way, endeavor to give you a few of my thoughts at such times. And oftimes my thoughts will take the shape that the farmer is the true instrument of God to beautify the earth and keep his fellow-man alive; and, for illustration, it is well known by all intelligent men, whether farmers or merchants, that corn and wheat would soon run out if it was not for the tillage the farmer gives it. And we all, as farmers, know what that tillage is.

And now, to illustrate, we first prepare our ground, and then we plant the corn, and in a few days it springs up, a living vegetable. Oh, how we watch and nourish the growing plant, and with true husbandman's skill, we plough and hoe, until the stalk and tassel appear; then we rest from our labor and look with pride upon our own production. We behold the silken ear; how we watch it through all its gradations until it has performed its mission and dies. And though the stalk is dead, it has left in the ear a living element, an element capable by the high cultivation of man, of producing superior ears to the one it has itself developed. And yet the living element of grain does not stop here, but extends to man himself, and is the principal ingredient of life. Feed man or beast on material that contains no living element and he will soon die. But give them the produce of the husbandman and they live and thrive. Yes, brother farmers, you and I are engaged in the noblest work that God allotted unto man. We are his chosen instruments, to perform the great and noble work of producing food to keep our fellowmen alive. And being the chosen instruments of God, let us strive to so perform our duty, that when we come to lay our plows and reapers by, when we have finished the work that the Master has given us to do, may we, like the stalk of corn or wheat, leave a living element behind that our sons and daughters, neighbors and friends may take and improve, and so hasten the time, which is surely coming, when the farmer will be looked upon as the noblest and most respected of men.—B. F. Straughen, in Farmer's Friend.

The Way Out of Debt.

Farmers must bear in mind there is no way but a hard one out of debt. Sighing and wishing to be out of debt will never get one out. If a man is in a mire he will remain there till he dies, unless he struggles to get on hard soil. To get out of debt, one must sell more than he buys. He must make his income greater than his out-goes. He must earn more money than he spends. He must receive more than he pays out. He must so manage as to lessen his indebtedness somewhat every year. He must be economical and not extravagant. He must certainly know at the end of the year what his receipts and expenses have been. He can tell [illegible] the future prospects will be of [illegible] a free man. A man who is [illegible] is not a free man. He is a slave. He belongs to his creditors, and the deeper his indebtedness, the worse his slavery. He is not a happy man. His mind is harassed to [illegible] obligations. If he fails to [illegible] indescribable misery. [illegible] be on the safe side. [illegible] to get out of debt. Keep [illegible] Save. Economise. Market [illegible] you can when it is in its [illegible] state for market. Sell [illegible] more than you buy.—Rural [illegible]

DURANG'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY.

Will most positively cure any case of rheumatism or rheumatic gout, no matter how long standing, on the face of the earth. Being an inward application it does the work quickly, thoroughly and permanently, leaving the system strong and healthy. Write to any prominent person in Washington city, and you will learn that the above statement is true in every particular.

Washington, July 13, 1874.
Messrs. Helpenstine & Bentley:

I suffered for more than thirty years from chronic rheumatism, at times in a helpless condition; during which time I employed the best medical skill, but finding no relief, bought a bottle of Durang's Rheumatic Remedy, and when I had taken it all (sixteen doses) was a well man, and as I write this certificate am perfectly free from pain, all owing to taking the above medicine. I regard it as the only preparation ever gotten up that will effectually cure rheumatism.

NEW SERIES—VOL. 1—NO. 16. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1877. WHOLE NUMBER [illegible] anti-caste. Other journals may have other reasons for their origination. This lives and moves and has its being in this principle. Though first and last a Church journal, it is none the less, first and last, a journal of the Church devoted to this truth.

The Church, with that wise balancing, which is said to become well ordered States, while it allows a present evil, and, in some of its enactments, seems to endorse it, also prepares by other actions for its extermination. It, with one hand permits indulgence of a wrong because of the present hardness of its people's hearts, as Moses permitted a semi-legalized polygamy and divorce, with the other it creates a force that will abolish it. One of the chief forces it has created is the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Fortunately is it located. Nowhere in the land does the battle rage more hotly. There the opprobrious color has been mingling with the choicest blood of different European nations, for almost three hundred years. French, Spanish, English, have contributed to its achievement and social elevation. Heiresses of beauty have held their father's names, heirs of culture their father's estates. Some of the wealthiest of her citizens are of this amalgam. Americans have driven this tendency to its completion. So that no ladies in the country can exceed those of this mixed origin. They are indistinguishable by their own kin.

I know of one such New Orleans lady teaching in the North. Her name was mentioned in the hearing of a family visiting in that vicinity [illegible]. They [illegible] a carriage, rode out to the school-room, and called for her. She appeared [illegible]

[illegible] cut at last, "Thou art a [illegible]. Thou shalt own thyself [illegible]. Thou art a man" [illegible] my brother." A negro [illegible]

[illegible] among these places, shall be the first in honor and success. Such is the greeting from Africa. The oldest of continents and peoples salutes the youngest of [illegible] and bids it God speed in [illegible] work [illegible].

Our Conference was cheered with the presence of one of your late ministers, Rev. Chas. W. Bryant. He is full of energy and hope. His excellent lady and her sister remembered fondly dear old New Orleans and their many friends there. Inquiries were made about Bro. Cole, Dr. Daily and others. The Doctor is remembered in one of their boys. So he has reached Liberia in a young and probably long enduring shape. May he be as famous and useful in the person of Wm. Daily Bryant in Africa as he has been without that suffix in America. The Conference is small, the continent is large. How can they group and possess it? They look to America for reinforcements. A few here will go a great ways. Whether they ought to come or not is for them to determine. They seem to be greatly needed there. But there are not twenty thousand Americans here; there are five to six millions in America from whom they expect to make up their deficiences.

Another of your New Orleans gentlemen was my fellow passenger, Mr. Dorsey. He has attended service often at Ames; heard Dr. Dashiel there last winter and also a lecture on woman suffrage. He is very intelligent, had a good business, that of carpenter, and was earning good wages. I met him [illegible] at the Receptacle, or building where they receive [illegible]. He was blessed with [illegible] minister who was [illegible] fishing for men. If [illegible] Mr. Dorsey he will have a good [illegible], though when he is converted, I reckon he will find his home among those whose preaching he used to attend. He was quite [illegible] at first, but will probably [illegible] when he gets on the [illegible] on a big coffee or sugar plantation, for such, I feel sure, he will yet possess.

They have some privileges here in these respects above their brethren in America. These are able to [illegible] (or make them afraid) at least about Monrovia. At Cape Palmas the natives tremble there. They have [illegible] and hate them. They are masters of multitudes of natives, too many and too servile. But, on the other hand, the stimulus of winning respect of all men where all men are is gone. They are by [illegible] a colored state, like a colored church. Only by abiding among those who reject them can they conquer and convert their rejectors. We want no black nations. Santo Domingo was providentially created if it was meant to be a place for departing our fellow citizens, and the creation of an exclusively black commonwealth. All races are one, is the only law for America. The climate here is not unlike New Orleans. It is midsummer now, the hottest season. It is sultry and oppressive in the morning when the land [illegible] prevails. By noon the ocean breeze sets in, and is exceedingly delicious and stimulating. I have never been in a more charming climate for the after part of the day.

My days on this vessel, or nights, rather, have now been eighty five. How many more they will be, ere I exchange its slowly heaving bulk for swifter craft I know not. They have not been without enjoyment. The Captain and officers are courteous. My fellow passengers, coming and going, have been agreeable. A music box, a kitten and other retreats have been appreciated. The swinging motion has almost become second nature. How odd it must be to sleep in a bed that never moves! It will be weeks before that novelty is enjoyed.

Steamer Ethiopia, Jan. 26.

P. S.—A postscript to a letter that [illegible] finished. The steamer [illegible] and gone, and I am moving [illegible]ward. The next morning [illegible] I was awakened by [illegible] "Bound [illegible] North." It was a [illegible] disappointing, for I had set my mind somewhat on going south [illegible] could not leave the vessel till [illegible] came. I got aboard and found that the one I wished to [illegible] would not be along for two or three weeks. So I reluctantly [illegible] that trip. It is well, for [illegible] given but little chance for [illegible]. It dies by, is hardly [illegible] four. Besides it runs far [illegible] and gives danger [illegible] cannot be made useful [illegible] of observation. The [illegible] the coast is by [illegible] command. A steam [illegible] be the perfection of [illegible]. I gave my long [illegible] a cordial farewell, [illegible] have been after [illegible] northward to cold. [illegible]

Bishop Haven's Return.

The New York Sun gives the following additional on the return of Bishop Haven:

Bishop Gilbert Haven, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, arrived in New York yesterday from an official tour among the mission stations in Africa. The Bishop, accompanied by the Rev. J. T. Gracey, sailed from this port for Africa on the 1st of November last. On the 18th of November he attended the African Methodist Conference in Liberia. The President of the Liberian Republic was present and took a deep interest in the proceedings. The official returns made to the conferences showed that there were forty-four local preachers and forty-three churches, with two thousand communicants.

Cape Mount is considered by Bishop Haven one of the most important strategic points in the Conference among the natives. It has 300 inhabitants. A remarkable religious revival has occurred in the Monrovia district. The Rev. C. H. Harman, who is Vice-President of the Liberia Republic, is also presiding elder of the Cape Palmas district. The Grebo war has greatly interfered with missionary work in this section. The Philadelphia, Jacksonville and other settlements have been destroyed in the war.

The marriage laws are being more strictly observed in Liberia than heretofore. Formerly, according to Bishop Haven, "divorce in Liberia, as a fashion, changed every season, without any regard to God's law." Conference expelled the Rev. S. J. Campbell, who had married unlawfully.

The native tribe called the Veys have invented an alphabet of their own, and are taking a great interest in missionary work. Bishop Haven traveled along the whole extent of the Liberian coast, and went into the exterior as far as civilized settlements extend. He was kindly received by several of the native African kings and princes, who came to see him, and asked him to send them teachers to teach their children the English language.

An income of $100,000 a year is now received by the Liberian Government from tariffs. Bishop Haven [illegible] the political, business and religious condition of Liberia is destined to improve rapidly within the next few years.

Romanism and the Bible.

Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, summarizes the position of the Romanists in regard to the Bible, as follows:

1. Several popes before and even after the Reformation, especially Innocent III. (ca. 1216) and Clement XI. in the Bulla Unigenitus (1713), have not, indeed, absolutely prohibited, but at least restricted and discouraged the reading of the Bible in the vernacular tongues.

2. Pius VII (1816), Leo XII (1824), Gregory XVI (1832), and Pius IX have anathematized the Protestant Bible societies and denounced the spread of Protestant Bibles. The Papal Syllabus of 1864 (§ iv) classes Bible Societies (Societates Biblicæ) with socialism, communism, secret societies, and calls them "pests," which had often been most severely reproved in papal encyclicals.

3. The "Index Librorum Prohibitorum," as issued by Pius IV, allows the use of the (Catholic) translations only on condition of a special permission of the priest.

4. It is perfectly consistent with the Romish view on the obscurity of the Scriptures, as with the hierarchical spirit, to place very little value on the reading of the Bible and to refer the laity to the living teaching of the priesthood. The reading of the Bible is not regarded as necessary by the Roman Church; but only as useful within certain limits, and as positively hurtful if left free to all.

5. The wholesale destruction of Protestant translations of the Bible was an essential and prominent part of the Jesuitical counter-reformation in Bohemia, Poland, Hungary, and other countries. Bohemian and Polish Bibles were burned by the thousands during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, so that copies are very rare. Das Jesuit (Koniash, died about 1617), boasted that he burned over 60,000 Bohemian books. The whole Czech and Polish literature was destroyed by the Jesuits.

There have been placed on exhibition in the Western Hall of the Smithsonian building the finest of the works of art presented to the United States by foreign governments in connection with the Centennial. These are the terra-cotta copy of the group "America" upon the Albert monument in London, two magnificent vases, inscribed respectively "1776" and "1876" and adorned to illustrate these two eras in American history, an octagonal vase in terra-cotta, with [illegible] from the life of the Redeemer, and two terra-cotta baptismal fonts of classical and artistic workmanship.

LITHOGRAPHIC PLAN, No. 8.

[Plans, detailed drawings, specifications and form of contract, all complete, ready for the builder, sent by mail on receipt of $5. Address all communications to Rev. A. J. Kynett, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, Church Extension Rooms, No. 1020 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

This is for a small country Church. The dimensions are 30x[illegible] feet exclusive of pulpit recess on the rear, 5x12 feet. The general outlines are similar to No. 2, but, as will be seen, without belfry. The walls are 12 feet high, and the centre of the ceiling rises to 16 feet 9 inches. The whole is to be built in a most substantial manner, and would cost, in Philadelphia, about $3,000. The cost could be reduced considerably by reducing the size of some of the framing timbers, and covering with shingles instead of slate.

The First Dollar.

The following story is true, and must please as well as counsel our young readers:

"Many years ago, a gentleman from the town of Methuen, Mass., while on a visit to a prominent merchant in Boston, was asked by the merchant if he knew a boy in Methuen that he could recommend to work in his store. At first the merchant could think of no one, for he knew none but a faithful, honest boy would suit the thrifty merchant. At length, however, he called to mind a boy of excellent character in his neighborhood, but he feared he would hardly do, as his parents were very poor, and he had no education or other advantages to fit him for such a position.

But the description of the boy's habits pleased the merchant so much that he handed the gentleman a dollar with which to pay the boy's fare to Boston by stage, and requested him to send the lad to the city, and if, on personal interview, he should not prove satisfactory, he would pay his fare back home again. The gentleman, as requested, visited the boy's parents, and stating the merchant's proposal, advised them to send the boy for trial. He then gave him the dollar which was to pay his fare to Boston, and departed.

Under similar circumstances, ninety-nine out of every hundred boys would have said, 'Now for a good time! I never saw a city, and never rode in the stage. Oh, there will be so much to see, and it will be such a long ride, and here is money sent to pay my fare!' Not so with this boy. Putting the money carefully in his pocket, he said to himself—

'This is the first dollar I ever had. How I wish I could save it! It is only twenty-five miles to Boston. I can walk there in a day. I'll do it and save my dollar.'

His mother patched up his clothes as well as she could, and early next morning the little fellow parted with his parents at the door of their humble home, and set out on his long tramp to the great city, which he reached, tired and dusty, a little before sunset. He found the merchant, who sternly asked—

'Where have you been all day? The stage came in hours ago!'

The boy thought he had displeased the merchant at the outset, and, with downcast eyes and tremulous voice, he answered—

'I did not come on the stage, sir.'

'Did not come on the stage! What do you mean? Didn't I send you money to pay your way?'

The boy thought it was all up with him, sure, and amid gathering tears he managed to reply—

'I am very sorry, sir! I did not mean to offend you. I thought I would walk and save the dollar. I never had one before.'

Placing his hand gently upon the boy's head, the merchant replied, 'My little man, you did exactly right. Come home with me and get some supper.'

Then turning to a bystander, he remarked, 'I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for this boy to-day.'

That boy has grown to manhood, and has since become widely known in business circles. He is now owner of the extensive mills at Methuen, the Pemberton Mills at Lawrence, a banking house in Boston, and one of the finest farms in Massachusetts.—Phren. Journal.

To speak gay, bright, inspiring words, to do kind acts in a kind way, to let your life be, to all who feel its force, what the river is to the trees on its banks, and the sparkling rill to the meadow it threads, will be to take a long step upward in the vocation of winning souls.

A Strange Thing.

By many it is confidently said that there is no hell except in this world, and that all men at death go immediately to heaven. Were it so, I could rejoice in the happiness of my fellow-creatures; but it is a doctrine involving several strange things, which I will briefly suggest.

It is strange that the sinners of the antediluvian world, that the guilty Sodomites, and heaven-daring Pharaoh with his host, were speedily translated to heaven, by fire and flood, as a reward of their wickedness; while Noah, Lot, and Moses, with the Israelites, as a judgment on their piety, were doomed to a continuance of their trials in this world of sorrow.

It is strange that the apostles, knowing that no man's soul is in danger, should have felt such solicitude and make such painful exertions for the salvation of men.

It is strange that the persons whom they addressed were often so deeply alarmed under the soothing doctrines of universal salvation.

It is strange, that if Christ and the apostles held such doctrines, they should have employed language such as the preachers of future punishment would choose to employ to express their sentiments—language which has actually led seven-eighths of all who ever read the New Testament to believe that they taught the future eternal damnation of all who die without conversion.

It is strange that a just God should make so little distinction between the righteous and the wicked in this life, if he intends to make none in eternity.

It is strange that the man who dies in the very act of iniquity, as the suicide, should have no punishment either in this world or the next.

It is strange that all who believe in Universalism, when involved in distress, do not make their escape by self-destruction, and enter at once upon the joys of heaven.

It is strange that a system of religion, designed by its Author to promote the reformation and holiness of men, should tend to loosen their obligations and relax their morals and piety, as Universalism is known to do.

These are some of the strange things involved in the doctrine of universal salvation. Having attentively considered them, will you not deem it a strange thing that any man, having the Bible in his hand, reason in his head, or grace in his heart, should be a Universalist?

Bible Terms.

Readers of the Bible will be interested in the following explanation of expressions frequently met with in the Holy Scriptures. They are believed to be entirely correct:

A day's journey was 33 and 1-5 miles. A Sabbath day's journey was about one English mile. Ezekiel's reed was 11 feet, nearly. A cubit is 22 inches, nearly. A finger's breadth is equal to one inch. A shekel was about 50 cents. A shekel of gold was $8.09. A talent of silver was $1,519.32. A talent of gold was $23,309. A piece of silver, or a penny, was 13 cents. A farthing was three cents. A gerah was 2 cents. A mite was one and one-half cents. A homer contained 75 gallons and 5 pints. An ephah, or bath, contained 7 gallons and 4 pints. A hin was 1 gallon 2 pints. A firkin was 7 pints. An omer was 6 pints. A cab was 3 pints. A log was one-half pint.

Faith is the root of all blessings, believe, and ye shall be saved; believe and you must need be sanctified; believe, and you cannot choose but be comforted.—Jeremy Taylor.

The Man Christ as Related to God.

Christ is called the Son of God. Herein is taught his Divine Sonship which He had with the Father before the world was. This is His essential character, by which he is known as the second person in the Trinity. Thus Peter declares: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Christ is also called the "Son of Man." Herein is expressed his manhood—as the Son of Mary. This human nature was accidental; assumed for a specific purpose.

In these two titles "Son of God," and "Son of Man," we have clearly stated the great doctrines of the Divine and human natures of Christ. If there are two natures then they are separate, the one from the other. Still we are taught that they are one, being united in a single person. Two natures, each perfect, [illegible] a mystery [illegible] solve; it must be accepted as a fact of revelation. Both natures were perfect. The Divine are not marred, nor are the human destroyed by the union. Because of this twofold nature, Christ is related to God in a twofold sense. First, as the eternal Son, equal with the Father, by whom all things are created and through whose power all things are sustained. To this relation of Divine character man cannot aspire, for he is but finite. But, secondly, Christ is related to God as a man. It is upon the plane of Christ's manhood that Divine and human relations mingle: down to it the Heavens bend, and up to it the earth is brought. It is here that the sinner loses his guilt and is robed in righteousness.

As a man Christ had a human will, and that will had the power of contrary choice; if not, then He could not be our perfect example, [illegible] could not be tempted in all points as we are. But that human will was completely subjected to the Divine will, and here lies the secret of His triumph. Whenever there was a duty or trial to be met—the prayer was "not my will but Thine be done." Following [illegible] the human [illegible] the constant support of the Divine nature.

life, and be made fit for mansions on high.

Herein is the Christian's great privilege. It is simply a question of obedience. We have proneness to sin as Christ had not, but He has promised to give us a new heart that shall be washed clean in the blood of the Lamb. We have not a Divine nature such as He had, yet the Holy Spirit is in the world and will enter our hearts and be to us what Christ's Divine nature was to Him.

Wishing to be Appreciated.

The desire to be appreciated by our fellow men is a good one, if properly guarded. But it is difficult to distinguish always between a proper wish for praise, and an undue longing for the plaudits of men. The following, from the Western states this distinction well:

"Men wish to be praised for what they do, or intend to do. It is a sort of pay. It would be difficult to estimate the [illegible] excellent [illegible] because they shall not get due credit for their efforts. And it would be equally difficult to number the men who have over-toiled and well-nigh destroyed themselves because they felt they were appreciated, and tried unceasingly to keep the favor of the public.

It is natural to desire recognition and praise. Yes, very natural; a part of the 'natural man.' But it is above nature manfully, quietly, perseveringly to go on doing true work which is not appreciated by many but, on the contrary, is scornfully deprecated. For very often, sad to say, self-sacrificing efforts are coolly received—treated as a mere matter of course. The selfish recipients are too dull-eyed to note or too hard-hearted to acknowledge the benefits received. They do not seem to care for the time and strength and anxiety that were expended in the work they so freely avail themselves of. But, nevertheless, it is foolish and wrong to hang back in the midst of the world's work, or of home duties, because one is afraid one's achievements or sacrifices will not receive due recognition. If we wait for encouraging pats on the back, or for cheap wordy plaudits from patronizing lookers-on, we ought to seriously suspect the motives of our heart, and searchingly ask, 'am I desirous of vain glory?' Am I not seeking honor of men and not the honor that comes from God only?

Let us remember this: If we do a good thing in order to be praised, and then receive that praise, we have our reward. The bill is paid. Men have flatteringly noticed our efforts. We, therefore, need not expect that the vain glorious work will merit another reward in heaven. But if we do the right thing because it is right, and receive indifference or open reproach, we may still rejoice, for our reward in heaven will be sure. The Lord always appreciates and never forgets. He will surely reward every man according to his work.

There is much well-doing that is not justly estimated in this world. Toiling, faithful teachers may feel that their efforts for others are not appreciated. Pupils are rude, indifferent in many cases. But if the teacher's work is done in love's true spirit, the result will be blessed, the harvest joyous. The pastor may think his efforts are coldly received, and his example and exhortations may seem to bear little fruit. But if he labors in all things 'heartily as to the Lord and not unto men,' he will find in due time that his labor was 'not in vain in the Lord.'

Parents may not think their children ungrateful, careless, unappreciative. But some day, if love and patience fail not, their long-suffering toil and faithful firmness will find recompense. Children may feel that their parents are hard to please, prompt to rebuke all youthful short-comings, slow to praise any successful efforts to do well. But let them not grow weary in well-doing. Let them faithfully obey their parents in the Lord, for this is right. After while the reward will come in many ways.

Bishop Foster Speaks Plainly and Well.

On the seventh day of the session of the Philadelphia Conference, Bishop Foster stated that a point had been reached when he desired to be heard. In all his experience of five years' administration he had met with no such embarrassment as during the sessions of this conference. The public deliberations have been beautiful, and the conference had been a joy to him. He had rejoiced in seeing that there had been no imprudence in the addresses. His embarrassments related to the adjustment of the work, and he had been laboring earnestly to reach the result which in the end would be the right one; but he was afraid he could not reach this result, as his work had been so interferred with by the people and the preachers. He did not mean to censure any one, and he was conscious of only one feeling to every member of a desire to do all that he could. No committee will question that he has been calm and loving all through, but he was crushed. The Bishop concluding, said that no Church or any preacher had furnished him a single fact that was not known to him in his cabinet. God, in his providence, had called him to the office, and, by the help of God, he must be untrammeled in the performance of his duties. He wished no more committees at his room, and that meant preachers, too.

Mohammedanism in West Africa.

Rev. J. T. Gracey in the New York Advocate, gives an interesting article on Mohammedanism in West Africa. He gives good testimony proving that the Mohammedans of that region are of a liberal type and really receive the bible gladly. Whether this is a matter of special encouragement to Christian Missionaries, Mr. Gracey does not feel sure. The chief point of interest in the article is the evidence it gives of the wonderful growth of Mohammedanism in Africa.

We quote the following:

The Koran is studied at towns seventy-five to three hundred miles from Monrovia, and by the Mandingos and Veis much nearer. At Boporo, Handing, etc, the cry of the muezzin calling the people to prayers is heard regularly five times a day. It is said that there is scarcely an important town along this seaboard from Senegal to Lagos, a distance of 2,000 miles, without its Mohammedan mosque, and its representative of Islamism. One must not imagine fine specimens of Moorish architecture, like the great edifice of St. Sophia, or the "Pearl" of Delhi. The Moslem is too zealous and too shrewd to wait until he can construct an elaborate edifice. His "mosque" on this coast is often not distinguishable from any other house. It may be of bamboo, wattled or lined with mats, and a thick straw thatch, with the ordinary low and overhanging eaves. Still it is a "mosque," because it is set apart as a place of prayer. Such is the mosque as found here in Liberia.

The Mohammedans have shrewdly stationed themselves in influential towns nearest the coast, and generally in those commanding the trade from the distant interior. They have in some way succeeded in impressing the people that their religion is peculiarly adapted to the African. A missionary who has been laboring in the interior for two years, told us that when he urged the people to accept Christianity, he met with two general answers: first, that Christianity was good enough for "'Merican man, but no good for country man." The second generally came from intelligent Mohammedans, and was tersely put in this form: "Christ is the white man's Savior; Mohammed is the black man's."

Metropolitan Church.

Rev. Dr. J. P. Newman, pastor of Metropolitan M. E. Church, in Washington city, has, by a unanimous vote of the Bishop, been appointed agent of the same church. The church owes a debt of $42,000, and the last Conference authorized the appointment of an agent, to raise money to pay the debt. Dr. Newman has accepted the additional burden and proposes to raise the money by giving lectures and taking subscriptions. In his published card the Doctor says:

I propose to do the latter by subscriptions, collections and lecture fees. If I can arrange for three hundred engagements to lecture or to preach at the rate of $125 for each engagement, the same will be sufficient to pay the debt, the interest thereon and my own traveling expenses, and the churches which engage me can realize a corresponding sum for local objects. Where a sermon is preferred the amount can be raised by subscription or collection as the engaging party may elect.

Where it is desired, I will give a course of five lectures on "The Buried Cities of the World," including Rome, Pompeii, Babylon, Nineveh and Jerusalem. The object of the course is to illustrate the destructive power of luxury and vice upon great cities and empires, and to show the marvelous fulfillment of prophecy in the overthrow of said cities and nations. If desired, a course may be given on the "Religions of the World," in which will be included the religions of Japan, China, India, and Turkey, the practical bearing of which will be to illustrate the superiority of Christianity over all other systems of religion.

Others may prefer a lecture on "The Progress of Christian Civilization," "The Struggle of Protestantism with Popery in this country," or "The Greatness and Perpetuity of our Nation." I wish to give the people something in return for their money, but they must regard the object to be accomplished as the chief return for what they pay.

Dr. Newman is a prince among the orators of the Church, and in this effort will succeed. Metropolitan Church has been of great service to Methodism in Washington. It is a connectional church in importance and influence. The General Conference did right in authorizing the appointment of an agent, and the Bishop has appointed the right man.

Dr. Mallalieu introduced resolutions in the New England Conference, on the 4th, severely criticising President Hayes' administration and denouncing M. C. Butler and Wade Hampton of South Carolina. The Resolutions were referred to a committee, and the following adopted as a substitute:

1. That the warm, practical sympathy of this Conference for the oppressed of our land is a history of too long standing and too outspoken to need any reaffirmation by us at the present time; and now that legalized slavery has been forever abolished in this our country, we feel equally desirous that they who, having been victims of that oppression, were deprived of their civil rights and means for intellectual and moral culture, may have secured to them all the rights and privileges that their changed relation to the country and their consequently increased responsibility so imperatively demand for them.

2. That we are glad to recognize in the inaugural address of our present Chief Magistrate, and in other words and acts of his, a clearly defined purpose on his part so to administer the Government of these United States as to secure to all classes of our citizens the free and full exercise of all their rights and privileges, and we pledge to him in the execution of this purpose our hearty sympathy and support; and we will earnestly pray that God may give to him and to his advisers wisdom to guide them in their important and difficult work; and we sincerely hope that our too long distracted country may again enjoy an era of good feeling and peace and prosperity.

Should General Nicholls be finally installed as Governor of Louisiana, the New Orleans public schools will be almost exclusively under the control of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Lusher, the Democratic State Superintendent of Public Instruction, is a Catholic. Of late he has been less strict in his adherence to his Church, but he has not renounced his faith. Nearly all of the eighteen members of the City School Board are Catholics. The President of the Board, Hon. T. J. Semmes, is one of the most devout and widely known Catholic laymen in the South. A friend reports seeing him enter a room where a Catholic Bishop was. He fell on his knees and reverently kissed the prelate's hand. Mr. Rogers, the City Superintendent, is a Presbyterian, but he is simply the executive officer to carry into effect the behests of the Board. Should this Board take control of the schools, we predict that within a year the Protestant Democrats of New Orleans will have far more to complain of, than they ever expressed or thought against the present Board of Directors, presided over by Judge Dibble.

An appropriate and elegant monument has been erected to the memory of Rev. N. E. Cobleigh D. D., LL.D., in Oakland Cemetery, Atlanta, Ga. It is of white marble twelve feet high, standing on a base of stone mountain granite with a draped urn on the top of the shaft. The monument has been erected by the friends of Dr. Cobleigh in the various fields of labor where during his ministry he wrought for the Master. Some of the subscriptions to the monuments are yet unpaid. The money should be sent to Bishop Haven, Boston, Mass., or to Dr. E. Q. Fuller, Atlanta, Ga.

Turkey Still Defiant.

The Danger of a Turkish war is by no means past. A synopsis of the protocol signed by the representatives of the five Powers who have undertaken the pacification of the East, is to the effect that the Powers regard the arrangements concluded or to be concluded between the Porte and the Principalities as an accomplished step toward pacification. They suggest the propriety of immediately placing the Turkish army on a peace footing, excepting only such number as may be needed for the preservation of order, and the putting in hand, without any unnecessary delay, the reforms proposed in part by the Porte, for the tranquility and well-being of the provinces. The Powers believe they have grounds for hoping that the Porte will profit by the present lull to apply such measures as will cause improvement in the condition of the Christian population, which is imperatively demanded as indispensable to the tranquility of Europe, and that having once entered upon this path it concerns its honor to preserve in it loyally and officaciously. The Powers reserve themselves the right to consider the means which may be deemed best fitted to secure the well-being of the Christian populations and interests, and general peace.

The Porte, it is reported has rejected the principal point in the protocol; declines to send an envoy to Russia, and wants to be left alone in dealing with Montenegro.

A Universalist pastor lately asked Mr. Moody whether he was invited to join in the revival movement. The answer, though not intended for publication, is so conclusive and simple that it ought to put an end to open letters and secret complaints. Mr. Moody said in substance: "I invite every minister in sympathy with this movement. I love every man on the face of this earth. You know the doctrines I preach. If you can stand me I can stand you. Only let us have no controversy. We have no time to fight. If you are not in sympathy with the movement, you work in your way, and let us alone in our way."

The National Repository for May is at hand, fully equal in every respect to its predecessors. "Birds of Spring," is a richly illustrated article, giving an account of those families of birds, which add so much to the good cheer of Spring. Dr. Wise gives an article on "A Week at the Delaware Water Gap." Rev. B. A. Brooks writes on "Hebrew Poetry," Jane Burt on "Among the Hills." Dr. Daniels continues his chapters on "That Boy, Who Shall Have Him?" The story grows better and better. Dr. Curry the editor, gives an able and valuable discussion on the "Election of a President," pointing out the dangers which threaten the Republic in the selection of its Chief Magistrate.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. C. Regester, of Houma, La., reports that he has received several into the Church since Conference. He has Sabbath-school morning and evening each Sabbath.

Rev. L. H. Carhart, Dallas, Texas, says, April 7; "Rev. J. B. Sims is about closing a series of revival meetings in our church here. The church has been especially blest. Bro. H. Wallace and wife, and Bro. Hewitt and wife, of Ill., are now here doing good work. All will go north next week."

Rev. L. J. Terrell, Holly Springs Circuit, Miss., sends subscribers and adds: "We are building a new house of worship—expect to have it up during the coming month. The prospect of having a place of worship of our own is a matter of great encouragement to us all."

Rev. Thos. Montgomery, Rosedale, La., says: "During the past quarter we had sixteen accessions to the Church, and there were four baptisms. Our quarterly services just closed were a season of blessing to us, especially was this the case with the love-feast. We feel that we are making progress in our journey toward Mt. Zion.

Gabriel Todd, Houston, Texas, writes: "We are building a new church, 32x60 feet, in dimensions. So great is the zeal and enthusiasm of our people in the enterprise that the work goes forward with wonderful rapidity. In twelve days from the time the old building was torn away the new one was up and the outside work completed. The good sisters of the congregation have shared in the enthusiasm and have aided in the work by providing food for the workmen. And the blessing of the good Lord has rested upon us all."

Rev. A. Martin, West Baton Rouge, La., says: "We have had a deeply interesting meeting. There were four conversions and eight accessions to the Church. On Sunday in our meeting the church received a wonderful baptism of the Spirit. Other denominations present participated in the blessing; even Roman Catholics threw away their beads and praised that Savior whose blood alone cleanses from all sin. To see all these people shouting and praising God in our church did look like a day of Pentecost had come to us."

Rev. S. Hardwell, Huntsville, Texas, sends a list of subscribers and adds: "So far this year the blessings of the Lord have attended us. There have been thirty-eight accessions, and nineteen baptisms. The Sunday-school scholars have shared largely in the work of grace. My prospects on this work seemed gloomy at the first of the year. But I thank God that the dark clouds have been dispersed."

Rev. Edward Lee, Bryan, Texas, sends for more Southwesterns and adds: "Your paper has become very popular here with people of all denominations. My congregation are just getting a burden of debt off their shoulders, and now we expect to do more than ever before for the SOUTHWESTERN."

Work Among the Freedwomen.

The following, from Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society, explains itself. Mrs. Godman is well adapted to the work:

CINCINNATI, Apr. 6, '77.

Bro. Hartzell—Please announce in the SOUTHWESTERN that Mrs. Dr. Godman has been appointed to mission work among the freedwomen in New Orleans. She will be supported by donations to the Freedmen's Aid Society for this specific work by women connected with the M. E. Church. It is time for Protestant Christians to increase their efforts in behalf of this poor people.

Yours, truly, R. S. RUST.

Mrs. Rust writes: "A lady, not a Methodist, sends us one hundred and fifty dollars. This interest was brought to her knowledge by the notice of the meeting in Cincinnati last Winter, in behalf of the Freedwomen, and she decided to send the Freedmen's Aid Society twenty five dollars. Then she read several of the reports of the Freedmen's Aid Society, and studied the claims of this cause. She again writes, 'I am far from being rich, neither am I poor. I was early taught frugality and economy, to waste not, and so I want not; and therefore I sometimes have something to spare. She sends us the large sum because I feel such confidence that it will be used to the best advantage for God's poor under the management of this Society.'"

To the Preachers of the Murfreesboro District.

Dear Brother:—Your attention is hereby called to the following action of our last District Conference in reference to our church periodicals.

Resolved, 1. That we heartily approve the action of the last General Conference adopting the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as an official organ of the Church, and that we, also, heartily endorse the course of the editor, Rev. J. C. Hartzell, B. D., who has labored faithfully and successfully in its management.

Resolved, 2. That we adopt this paper as the official organ of the Murfreesboro District and we will labor to put a copy of it in every family in our bounds.

Resolved, 3. That every Local Preacher and Exhorter in this District is expected to take, and read as far as practicable, one of our church papers, and that should he fail to do so he will be required to give a reasonable excuse therefor, before his license is renewed. We propose to raise, at least, five hundred subscribers, this year, for the SOUTHWESTERN. To do so will require on your part, a strong united effort. Let there be no delay. Push the canvass ahead. If you can induce your people to take the paper you will have called to your side a most valuable help that will assist you in preaching, in taking up the collections and in saving souls. Who among you will send up the largest list within the next thirty days? Now is the time to strike.
